MOOSUP TAKES DECIDING GAME FROM PLAINFIELD

(Special to The Bulletin)

MOOSUP, Oct. 5.—Moosup took the fifth and deciding game of its series with Plainfield here this afternoon by a 10 to 6 score in a loosely played game. Both teams were off form in the field but made up for it with the stick.

A six-run rally in the sixth really settled the issue for Moosup. Tatro, Moosup third-sacker, led the hitters with four safeties. Eno pitched well in the pinches for Moosup.

WINNING PLAYERS WILL GET ABOUT $5,000 EACH

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 5—(AP)—The 1930 world's series players' pool, derived from a major portion of the gate receipts for the first four games only, amounts to $323,865.50. It is the smallest in eight years and nearly $100,000 short of the high mark of $419,736.60, set in 1926, for the series between the Yankees and Cardinals.

Of the total amount of the pool, 70 per cent or $226,705.85 goes to the contending Athletics and Cardinals on a basis of 60 per cent to the winner and 40 per cent to the loser.

Figured on the basis of a split up on 27 shares by each team, the winners' money, $136,023.51, will mean $5,038 for each player on the victorious side. The loser's end of the purse $90,682.34, divided on the same basis, will mean $3,358 per full share.

The Athletics and Cardinals therefore in addition to the honor attached will battle it out for the difference of approximately $1,700 per man.

The remaining 30 per cent of the total pool or $97,159.65 will be spread among the second, third and four place clubs of each league.

The "split for the other clubs figures as follows:

$24,289.99 each for the Chicago Cubs and Washington Senators, the second place teams; $16,193.33 each for the New York Giants and Yankees, third place outfits; and $8,096.66 each for the Brooklyn Robins and Cleveland Indians.

Depending on how it is divided, but estimating on the same basis as the series contenders, each player on the second place clubs will receive nearly $1,000, with about $600 for each player on the third place club and around $300 for each fourth place performer.

NEW RECORD FOR LOW NUMBER OF ASSISTS

SPORTSMAN'S PARK, St. Louis, Oct. 5—(AP)—The Athletics set a new all-time record for world's series competition by making only three assists in today's game with the Cardinals.

It was the second time in the series that this mark was broken. The Cardinals broke the only record when they were credited with only four assists in the second game at Philadelphia, and the A's on the same day equalled the former mark of five assists.

Grove had the Cards hoisting their batting fire to such an extent today that Bishop, with two, and Boley, with one, were the only players credited with assists.

J. B. MARTIN CLUB POUNDS OUT WIN OVER CITIZENS IN SECOND GAME

The J. B. Martin team outslugged the Polish Citizens Sunday afternoon at Martin field and cleaned up their city series by taking the second game, 12 to 9. About 800 looked on.

No Pitchers' Holiday

It was no day for the pitchers for, after a scoreless first inning, in which both teams threatened, however, the rival batsmen went to work on Johnny Greene of the Cits and Lefty Anatol of the Velvetmen and by the time they had finished, just as dusk was coming on, a total of 25 safeties, including one home run, two triples and six doubles, had been produced. Leo Jarvis and Nap Liberty headed the procession, each with four wallops in five tries. Included in the former's collection was a home run, double and two singles, while Nap had a double and three singles. Mondi Normandin chipped in with three, including two doubles and a single.

The fireworks started off in the second when the Cits manufactured four runs on singles by Finn, Gaudette and Cimikoski, a double by Leo Jarvis, a pass to Lemieux and two outfield errors. J. B. came right back with five and took the lead in their third on one basers by Krauss, Normandin, Liberty, Murphy, Couillard and Gley, together with a pass to Dugas. The Cits tied it up in the fourth on Lemieux's double and Leo Jarvis' single.

The Cits even took the lead in the next frame on an error by Krauss, which allowed Cimikoski to reach first, and Lamory's two-bagger over the third base bag. J. B. was not to remain in arrears long, for in their next turn at bat, in the sixth, they pushed over three tallies on a double by Normandin, single by Dugas, two passes, two errors and a sacrifice.

Jarvis Hits Home Run

The Cits fought back into another tie in their half of the inning when Gaudette was hit by a pitched ball and Leo Jarvis poled a home run over the burlap in left field.

The Martinmen really won the game in the eighth on singles by Murphy, Gley and Smith, Liberty's double, one hit by pitcher, sacrifice and error. Gaudette's triple and Leo Jarvis' fourth hit, a double, accounted for the last Cits run in the eighth. In the ninth, with two away, Johnny Greene tripled to left center but was stranded when Sydlo, batting for Raymond, put on a fanning bee.

Although both pitchers were treated none too gently, it was not all their fault, especially in the case of Greene. Pete Finn had a bad day at third which kept Greene continually in trouble while in addition to this there were three or four of the J. B. safeties that were those mean tantalizing Texas leaguers that dropped just out of everybody's reach and they all resulted in runs. Greene was relieved in the eighth by Raymond who pitched hitless ball for one and one-third innings. Deo Gaudette and Lloyd Jarvis provided the fielding features for the small crowd with nice running catches in left and center field, respectively.

May Play Westerly

This game may have closed the local baseball season. However, there is still a game or games with the Westerly Indies in the works. A contest with this team, by the way, would no doubt pack them in.

World Series returns were announced by Arthur Roy from the factory building.

LEFTY DUGAS PRESENTED TWO PURSES BY ADMIRERS AT BANQUET

Lefty Dugas was welcomed home Saturday—and how. It was Lefty's day and the entire community turned out to pay their respects in one way or another to the Taftville boy who graduated from the sandlots to major league baseball in a single season, a record remarkable in itself.

The festivities of the day started with a parade of the townspeople at 1:30 o'clock from the old town pump, the trysting place of the village, to the ball park, the scene of many a baseball classic. Practically every organization in the village was represented by large turnouts. Lefty occupied a prominent position in the parade, riding in a gaily-decked car.

The main event of the afternoon was the ball game between the Shyma club and Jim Troland's All-Star aggregation, with the All-Stars winning 5 to 4 in what was an exceptionally fine game. Although there were many brilliant plays, it was Lefty Dugas whom the fans wanted to see play, and they did. Lefty started the game in the outfield for the Shymas and finished by pitching several innings. It was the same old Lefty and it looked mighty good to see him out there again. Lefty hit two balls up among the rocks in right field for two bases, but was passed on his other two appearances at the plate. He had one chance in the outfield, snagging a long fly. In the box, Lefty pitched a nice game and struck out three men. Among the old-timers who played were Chip Dugas, who demonstrated later in the day that he was a better dancer than he was a ball player, and Joe Belair, catcher, a former Taftville boy. Both showed well for their advancing years. The score:

At the conclusion of the game the baseball autographed by the members of the Pittsburgh Pirates was auctioned off and was awarded to Joseph Flemming of Fancy Corner.

In the evening some two hundred of Lefty's friends attended the banquet in Parish hall in his honor. An excellent chicken dinner was served by Clarence J. Nagle.

Rev. Omer T. Mandler was the toastmaster of the occasion and there were addresses by Rev. F. R. DesSureault, Rev. Fr. Jette, Rev. H. C. Belec, who takes Father Mandler's place at Sacred Heart parish, First Selectman William S. Murray, Richard Snow, A. E. Pingree and Tom Duff, old-time ball player. All spoke in the highest terms of Lefty Dugas and his ability, and all predicted that the Taftville boy would go to the top in his baseball career.

Father DesSureault affectionately referred to Lefty as one of his boys, a boy who is carving a niche for himself in baseball's hall of fame. He spoke of Lefty as a clean-living and clever athlete, who took good care of himself. Father Belec in conclusion said that Lefty left us as a gentleman and returns to us a gentleman.

Father Jette in complimenting Lefty on his success, also complimented Mr. and Mrs. Dugas on having so illustrious a son. In his talk, Father Belec humorously took exception to the remarks made by Father DesSureault, who said that "Lefty struck out to make a career." Father Belec said that he was quite unable to see how a ball player could make a career by striking out.

Selectman Murray recalled the old days of Taftville baseball when Ned Hanlon, a Taftville boy, made such a brilliant record as player and manager of the old Baltimore Orioles. Mr. Murray conveyed the congratulations of the town to Lefty and expressed the hope that some day the local people would have the opportunity of seeing him in a world's series game.

Richard Snow and A. E. Pingree extended their heartiest congratulations and best wishes to Lefty for a long and successful career.

Tom Duff, old-time ball player, spoke from a ball player's point of view, saying that he found in Lefty all the physical qualifications of a star ball player, plus a clean mind and a determination to make good.

William J. Fitzgerald, chairman of the Norwich Recreation commission, spoke briefly upon Lefty's playing in the Norwich Twilight league in 1929 and in token of appreciation of Lefty's rise to the big league presented him a substantial check on behalf of the players of the 1929 Twilight league.

Father DesSureault then presented Lefty with another check from the Shyma club and the townspeople.

In responding Lefty very sincerely spoke of his appreciation of the gifts, the royal welcome home, and promised that he would do his best to show the people he was deserving of their faith in him. In the course of his talk he spoke of meeting Jesse Haines, who so brilliantly acquitted himself in yesterday's world's series game. Lefty said that he and Haines were talking in the hotel at St. Louis just before the season ended and that Haines gave him some very useful advice regarding the big leagues.

The entertainment of the evening included two delightful solos by Miss Doris Cloutier of Attleboro, Mass., accompanied by Miss Alice C. Frechette at the piano; two solos by C. Langlais; a soft shoe dance by Chip Dugas Jr., and a hard shoe novelty by Chip Dugas Sr. Eddie Connelly was heard in an Irish selection.

Dancing followed the banquet, music being furnished by the Musical Aces.

CARDS DELIRIOUS WITH JOY AT TIEING UP SERIES

SPORTSMAN'S PARK, ST. LOUIS Oct. 5.—(AP)—A happy chorus of "I told you so," boomed to the rafters of the Cardinal clubhouse today as Gabby Street's cocky warriors trooped in, single file, after shellacking the Athletics, 3 to 1, in the fourth game of the world series, thus squaring the fight.

The grizzled Street said it would be no surprise to him now if the Cardinals annexed the next two games and the world flag.

Connie Finds Smiling Hard.

Connie Mack, reviewing the second straight defeat of his Athletics, said it was difficult to smile after two setbacks in a row, but added, the Cardinals deserved to win and that he had no criticism to make of the Athletics' mistakes.

"Errors," he philosophized, "are a part of the game and must be expected.

"The Cardinals deserved victory," he began. "We did not play up to our usual standard.

INTERCEPTED PASS RESULTS IN VICTORY FOR ACADEMY OVER BULKELEY

The Academy football team defeated Bulkeley high of Hartford Saturday afternoon at the campus, 7 to 0, by virtue of a last quarter score before about 500 fans. It kept the Wildcats' slate clean as in their opening game the week before they had trimmed Chapman Tech, 13 to 7. Going further back, it was the fourth straight win for N. F. A.'s footballers as the last two games of the 1929 campaign had ended right side up for the locals.

Saturday's game was a listless affair, none too well played by either team. Fumbles were frequent and in addition neither team showed any real offensive power. The Academy worked a few aerials that looked good, especially one to Golembeskie from Geer, in the third quarter that placed them in scoring position inside the visiting 25-yard line only to have forwards batted to the ground and Bulkeley take possession.

The only score came soon after the final stanza began. Bulkeley had been set back almost to their goal line on a nice punt from midfield by Geer in which, incidentally, the Hartford safety man didn't play the ball very well and the break of the game came on the first play, when the visitors essayed to pass from within their 10-yeard line. It came straight and true over Bulkeley's left wing and the would-be receiver dashed out to grab it, but Bob Stockwell just slid in, plucked the pigskin out of the ozone and a step or two and he was over the line.

It was a foolish play to try but Bulkeley took a chance and lost.

Bulkeley lost its golden opportunity in the second quarter and was robbed of a possible score by the termination of the period with the ball inside the ten-yard line. The Hartford boys had received this chance when Geer, attempting to punt down in the northeast corner, saw the ball hit the branches of the tree that overhang the field and instead of going on for 30 or 40 yards, dropped with a boot of only ten yards or so.

In other high school games over the week end Bulkeley won its second game and kept its record unscatched with a decision over Fitch high of Groton, 19 to 6; Warren Harding beat Torrington, 7 to 0; Hartford high lost to Bridgeport Central, 20 to 8 and Windham beat Chapman Tech, 6 to 0.

LAST WEEK'S BUSINESS DEVELOPMENTS NOT PROMISING FOR VIGOROUS REVIVAL

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Industry entered the fourth quarter of a trying year rather hesitantly during the past week.

Liquidation in both the grain and security markets was rather nerve-wracking, but as the week progressed, equanimity returned, and the speculative markets seemed to regain their balance.

Further autumn expansion was reported in mercantile activity, with the much desired cool weather proving a mild impetus to retail trade.

One of the least favorable developments of the week was the checking of the gradual acceleration of steel mill production, which had been in evidence since early autumn. "Iron Age" estimated output at 61 per cent. of capacity, or unchanged from the previous week.

The slump in automobile manufacturing remained a conspicuous depressant to the steel trade, but the feeling persisted that the slackest period of the year had been passed in July, with the possible exception of the year-end shut down period due at holiday time.

On the whole, the week's developments were disappointing to those looking for a vigorous business revival this fall.

It has been notable, however, that the majority of the statistical services, and most of the reviews issued by leading banks, have not indicated anything more than a fair seasonal upturn at this time as probable.

Failure of the commodity markets to achieve the stability which seemed to be in the making some weeks ago was a cause of some concern, but improvement in the grain markets, after wheat had touched the lowest price in 23 years, promoted a better feeling as the week wore on. Cotton was under pressure as well, touching the lowest price since 1915. Copper metal was cut to 10 cents a pound, the lowest since 1896, but the low prices stimulated decidedly better buying.

Freight car loadings, as reported for the week ended Sept. 20, were disappointing, showing a reduction from the previous week, contrary to the normal seasonal trend, and the largest percentage drop from the like weeks of 1929 and 1928 thus far reported.

Despite these displeasing developments, many corporations were said to be developing fairly ambitious programs for 1931. President Hoover, addressing the convention of the American Bankers association, recalled the rapid recovery from the 1920-21 depression, which in many respects was more severe than the current one.

The National City bank, in its monthly economic survey, pointed out that most of the recognized composite indices of business activity touched during July and August what were approximately the bottom levels of 1921, "warranting the assumption that the decline must have nearly, if not entirely, run its course."

The bank survey disclaimed any desire to minimize the situation, saying "We do not agree with those who contend that the present depression is largely psychological, and that liberal doses of 'sunshine talk' are oil that is needed, to restore us to the road to prosperity."

POETRY

The Immanent

The winds of evening breathe His name
Across the sunset hills
When dusk is bright with gleam of stars
And sweet with singing rills.

The lofty peaks like altars burn
With incense drifting high
The roads of earth go by.

So we may find in sunset's flame,
In hymns the great seas sing,
Some hint of His majestic might,
The wide world conquering.

But He is seen as well where love
With tender healing goes
Down ways grown dark with ill and sin,
With bitter human woes.

In comradeship that braves the years,
In faith strong and serene
That binds two hearts through sundering years
His spirit still is seen.

The beauty of the stars may speak
Of Him with starry praise;
His feet still walk with men along
Earth's old deep-trodden ways!

—Arthur Wallace Peach, in The Churchman.

Candlelight

A dear, dim nursery; a tiny crib;
A great, wide felling of night;
The crickets chirrupting far way,
Outside—where it once was light;

A doting old nurse with a cracked old voice
Who sang to me, shrill and low,
Going to bed by candlelight,
Hundreds of years ago.

'Twas true my rocking horse did not move,
I'd watched him long through the door;
I could get no salt on the robins' tails,
And the coachman—my idol—swore;
Yet all these miseries passed away,
Away in a drowsy glow,
Going to bed by candlelight,
Hundreds of years ago.

If grown-up sorrows would die at dusk,
And care go down with the sun!
If hearts surrendered to sleepy heads,
And thought, with the day, were done!
If only, if only I knew once more
The bliss I used to know,
Going to bed by candlelight,
Hundreds of years ago.

—Graham Horne, in Life.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Chicago, we are reminded, is famous for its canned provisions. And for its potted citizens.—London Opinion.

Englishman: "I lost fifty pounds during the crisis."

Stout Friend: "Tell me your method."—Christian Science Monitor.

Wife—John, the clock fell off the well and if it had been a minute sooner it would have hit poor mother!

Hubby—There, I always said that clock was slow.—Passing Show.

Uncle Hiram—Only a week ago Josiah's son married a cooking school graduate and now he has run off and left her.

Aunt Matilda—Perhaps it was something he ate, Hiram.—New Bedford Standard

Tunnes (in restaurant)—Schal, how CAN you eat with a knife?

Schal—It is not so easy as it looks. Look round at the other guests; not one of them can do it.—Lustigue Kolner Zeitung.

"There are two sides to every question."

"Yes, and there are two sides to a sheet of fly-paper, but it makes a big difference to the fly which side he chooses."—Montreal Star.

Lodger (excitedly): "Just think. Mrs. Miggs—in 12 short months from now she'll be mine."

Landlady: "Who, Mr. Smith? I didn't know you had a young lady?"

Lodger: "No, no—my two-seater." —London Opinion.

Suitor (saying lengthy "good night" to his beloved in the hall): "Ah, darling, we shall love each other always and grow old together."

Parental Voice From Above: "For heaven's sake don't start down there." —Exchange.

KALEIDOSCOPE

The unicorn fish wears a single horn.

Water power generates 36 per cent. of the electricity used in the United States.

New Hampshire boys and girls have planted considerably more than 1,000,000 trees in the last five years.

The London zoo has acquired a king cobra sixteen feet in length, which is able to raise its head and neck eight feet vertically from the ground.

A government scientist, who was seeking skeletons of extinct animals on the western plains, came upon some ox shoes and other relics of covered wagon days along the Oregon trail.

"Are you hurt?" Herman Brand asked a Fremont (O.) young woman who had been knocked down by his automobile. "Oh, no, but I'm awfully sorry I was in your way," she replied. She would not tell her name.

There was snow in Barton, Vt., in mid-August. It did not come from the skies, but was uncovered in a gravel pit by workmen obtaining gravel for surfacing the highways. The snow, which filled a large truck, was uncovered beneath eight feet of gravel. It is probable that the drift formed in the gravel pit last winter and was buried in the early spring by a slide of gravel.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

Gloria Swanson's newest production "What a Widow" which opened at the Palace theatre on Sunday where it will be shown through Wednesday, is notable for the fine cast which was selected to support her. Owen Moore, who has had many recent successes, was chosen to play the leading male role, Lew Cody, who has returned to the stage after a long illness has the part of a dancer and Margaret Livingston plays the part of his wife.

Miss Swanson's role is that of a vivacious New England widow, who, after having become quite subdued through her marriage to her former guardian decides that she wants to laugh, to sing, to dance and to be gay. After waiting long enough to satisfy the conventions of widowhood she dashes off to Paris and on shipboard meets many interesting and sophisticated people.

She pursues romance so heartily and so vigorously that she becomes entangled in a series of complications which become increasingly difficult and increasingly amusing.

Clever dialogue against a background of fine music bring fine effects into the picture and Miss Swanson is given an opportunity to sing three new songs. She has also been given a very beautiful and elaborate wardrobe for the production and she wears her gowns with great charm.

Modernistic sets form the background of the picture and many of the costumes and accessories worn by the star were designed for her especially and some she designed herself.

This smart production of the plight of a widow with a million dollars and a desire to go places and do things is one of the cleverest and funniest in the career of Gloria Swanson.

Armadillo racing is the latest sport in Texas. The first events were held at Junction. Twenty-five armadillos were entered. The course was 100 yards. Spectators were amazed at the speed shown by the unwieldly looking animals with their small legs and heavy shell armor.

Practical Educational Class for Men

A practical educational class for adults in civic leadership and public speaking is being organized under the auspices of the Norwich Y. M. C. A. and already some 25 or 30 business and professional men have enrolled, the enrollment being in charge of Dr. William J. Sly, pastor of the Third Baptist church, who also will teach several of the lessons on "Overcoming Fear and Timidity."

The class will begin its studies on Tuesday evening of this week at the local Y. M. C. A. at which time all matters pertaining to the class will be explained. The time of the meeting is 7:30 and the period of the study will be one hour. There will be twelve lessons in the course.

On Tuesday evening Dr. Sly will lead the study, his topic being "The Art of Introducing and Being Introduced," and "How to Make a Four Minute Speech." Indications are that this course will create a real interest in the important and practical studies to be taken up.

Broadway Theatre

Paul Lukas has an important supporting role in "Anybody's Woman," the Paramount picture in which Ruth Chatterton and Clive Brook are costarred at Warner's Broadway.

Lukas plays the part of a wealthy New York merchant who befriends Brook but who later makes love to Miss Chatterton, who is seen as Brook's wife.

It is one of those not-too-bad "bad man" roles that seems to fit the Lukas capabilities like a glove.

His part in "Anybody's Woman" came after he signed a new contract with Paramount-Publix.

Lukas was a star for several seasons on the stage in Budapest, Berlin and Vienna. He came to the United States to play a role opposite Pola Negri in "Loves of an Actress" and enacted parts in several other silent films. He mastered English during his stay in this country, and remained in Hollywood when sound became the vogue.

A special "divorce ring," to replace the wedding ring, has been perfected by Parisian jewelers. It consists of a narrow band of diamonds set in platinum, just like a jeweled wedding ring, except for one black onyx setting in the middle.

HEIRESS, WHO SPURNED DEBUT, VIRGINIA BEAUTY'S SPONSOR

© BACHRACH

Carol Herndon (above) of Suffolk, Va., will be introduced into Washington society by Margo Couzens Chewning, heiress who wouldn't have a debut for herself.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5—(AP)— One of the richest girls in America who eloped to escape the "fuss and feathers" of a big wedding soon will introduce to Washington society one of the prettiest girls of old Virginia.

Margo Couzens Chewning, daughter of wealthy Senator Couzens, who startled capital society last February by suddenly marrying William Jeffries Chewning, Jr., a bank clerk, will sponsor the debut of her husband's cousin, Carol Herndon of Suffolk.

What she ran away from herself—the sparkling but sometimes fatiguing social round—the young heiress now arranges for her husband's charming young cousin.

Mrs. Chewning, only 19, has continued her social activities to some extent since her marriage, but only as the mood prompted her. The young couple has been occupying the palatial Couzens home in Washington while the senator and his wife have been at their Detroit home.

An ardent sportswoman, Mrs. Chewning does a great deal of riding and takes part in many horse shows. Under her wing Miss Herndon is assured a debut fitting her youth and beauty.

The former Margo Couzens was always so interested in horses and art that the family could not persuade her to have a debut, though most wealthy girls look forward to such an event almost from their cradles.

NEW FASHIONS BEST ON 'PETITES FEMMES'

PARIS, Oct. 5—(AP)—The little woman is having her day after several seasons of snubbing at the Paris dressmaking establishments.

Raised waistlines are her meat; in fact only small or average size women should attempt them, the couturiers say.

When long skirts first came in short women were warned that they were not for them. Dressmakers glorified the long-legged mannequins and thought in terms of five feet four and up.

Now there is a demand for mannequins of lesser stature to wear the almost Empire-waisted dresses some designers approve for fall.

Bright-Hued Jerseys

PARIS, Oct. 5—(AP)—Scarf collared tuck-in blouses of lightweight jersey are a form of sportswear one well known dressmaker utilizes for startling color effects.

One jersey blouse of buttercup-yellow accompanies a sage-green skirt and collarless long coat. The scarf ties into a big bowknot.

More Fishskin Shoes

PARIS, Oct. 5—(AP)—Fishskin shoes and handbags are the winter ensemble several shoe designers are promoting.

The fishskin is hard and has a fine pebbled surface like sandpaper.

Black, dark brown and navy blue are the colors most shown.

SCIENCE LEADS DARING WOMEN TO EXPLORE DANGEROUS LANDS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5—(AP)—While women have not yet attempted polar explorations some of them are discovering new ice fields or are making long journeys in bleak northern countries alone.

The yearly report of the society of woman geographers shows that women clad in garbs ranging from heavy boots and furs to thinnest silks, are penetrating earth's most remove regions.

Eleanor Holgate Lattimore, alone save for her native expedition, traveled for 40 days by rail and sleigh, while going from Siberia to Chinese Turkestan.

Annie S. Peck, famous mountain climber, has recently viewed her former fields of exploration from a new angle. She ascended 18,000 feet in an airplane while flying across the Andes and reports it as a "glorious trip".

The South Seas, too, have called adventurous women. Caroline Lytinger, while painting portraits of natives of East Java, penetrated regions where no white woman had ever been.

Gloria E. Hollister, while with the Bermuda oceanographic expedition, descended 400 feet in a steel diving sphere into the depths of the ocean. At that depth she found the water a cold bluish purple, with scarlet shrimps looking either white or black.

Diamond Curl Catchers

PARIS, Oct. 5—(AP)—Jeweled hair clasps meant to keep curl clusters in place are appearing in greater numbers in the jeweler's shops.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Rub garden tools occasionally with wire wool to prevent rusting.

Sieves never should be washed with soap, but cleaned with a brush, using a little soda if necessary.

Children like to play with paper dolls. Try pasting them on coarse muslin and they will last much longer.

Dry mustard mixed with milk instead of water will not dry out but will keep moist until it has all been used.

To disinfect garbage cans burn a few newspapers on top of garbage occasionally during the warm weather.

Add a slice of onion to tomatoes when they are first put on to stew. It may be removed later but the flavor remains.

To prevent the lower crust of fruit becoming soggy, crush it over with the white of an egg before putting in the fruit filling.

To clean aluminum try pouring a few ounces of vinegar and salt in each aluminum utensil, heat it and then scour the surface. It makes the surface appear like new.

If water does not flow freely through the pipe connected with the kitchen sink, pour a pint of kerosene down the pipe and allow it to remain there all night. In the morning run cold water. You will find it will flow freely.

To make lime water, take a lump of unslaked lime, size of an egg, and pour over it one quart of pure water. Let it stand several hours, then filter through a clean white cloth. Pour into clean bottles and cork.

An excellent polish for the stove is to mix equal parts of a good stove polish with kerosene and turpentine until the consistency of cream. Apply when the stove or range is slightly warm. Then polish with rough cloth. This also prevents rust.

Add a cup of grated cheese to the cream sauce before adding the cauliflower. Light colored cheese will not change the color of the cream sauce and will give it a delicious flavor

WHEN WHIPPING CREAM

A tablespoon of condensed milk added to a bowl of whipped cream and beaten into it before serving will increase the amount of cream.

SODA FOR PIPES

When cleaning your refrigerator use one tablespoon of sal soda to four quarts of cold water. This will keep the drain pipe clean and free.

SAVE FRUIT JUICES

Reserve all juices left from canned fruits in puddings or salads and substitute them for the liquid used in gelatin mixtures.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Never, if your face is fat, wear a high collar or any necklace that fits tightly around your throat.

If the eyes water in windy weather, relief may be had by bathing them in a solution of ten grains of boracic acid to one ounce of hot distilled water.

When necessary to reset permanently waved hair do not damp it. Allow the steam from a bathroom hot water tap to play on it. Then fix with hair-waving combs.

It is not advisable to take but one kind of food when dieting. Even when trying to reduce you want to take foods that are strength-maintaining. There are many different ones with low caloric value from which to choose.

DRESSING ROOM LUXURY

A very clever arrangement for the side of the dressing room wall consists of built-in cupboards and shelves to hold everything from shoes to hats. One side has doors, the other is open and the center is filled in with a charming dressing table done in raspberry dotted swiss. The cupboards themselves are in dull green with a little decoration in pastel shades.

BREAKFAST IN BED

A breakfast tray that will give zest to the most jaded appetite, is painted a dull blue with a very charming old print in the center and a floral design on the sides. The whole is given an antique finish.

SILVER STARS

Two stunning lamps have silver urnlike bases and shades made of paper painted a strong metallic blue and covered with stars, both big and little, of silver. The shades are bound in silver.

YELLOW AND COFFEE COLOR

Something different in handkerchiefs is one of yellow linen with a square of light brown set in one corner. Upon this square is embroidered one initial.

GAY BLOUSE TONES

Two novelty colors which are now being bought for early fall blouses are bright red and oyster green. The bright red is a light red with a rose cast and the oyster green is a light dull watery tint of green which is also sometimes called "ice green."

TWEED PURSES

The tweed envelope bag has lost none of its charm. This is obviously a year of tweeds in woolen costumes and now that tweed berets and turbans match tweed suits and coats, it is superfluous to mention that purses made of this material are fashionable. These inevitably are of envelope shape and larger in size.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Bias peplums and ruffles recur in fall fashions.

When sleeves are long they are either puffed or trimmed at the elbow or below it.

Velvet looms large on the fall horizon and is being exploited for evening dresses for immediate wear.

Flaring cuffs are in fashion but are sometimes omitted in deference to long gloves—an important fashion.

All shades of orange and red browns are highlighted in fall sports wear, these shades being especially well liked in woolens.

Astrakhan is being employed by some of the smartest houses and galyak, caracul and broadtail are repeating former successes.

Organdy petticoats are a charming means of extending evening skirts, which seemingly grow wider and wider. Such petticoats are often a part of the construction of the dress itself.

LEADING COAT STYLES

Among coat styles for fall the semi-princess line has been stressed by all the leading couturiers. Coats are either cut, shaped or belted to stress the normal waistline. In many models it is noted that there is a tendency toward blousing. Greater elaboration of detail on collar and sleeves is an outstanding note. Flat furs which predominate are used profusely — these include lapin, shaved lapin (known as galapin), galyak, Persian lamb and beaver. Monotone tweeds for informal and rich broadcloths for formal use are developed in tones of black, red, green and brown.

NEW CLOSE FITTING SLEEVE

With or without wrist trimming, the close-fitting sleeve is the predominating style, although some sleeves are gathered into a wristband.

When Patou employs the gathered sleeve some detail of self-fabric is incorporated in the gathered part. No further development is noted now in short sleeves.

Self-trimmings take the form of folds used to achieve scalloped edges, the details alone ending all the decoration required. The sunburst stitching is a smart way of inserting the fan pleat for skirt fullness.

LAUNDRY HINTS

Clothes dried slowly are whiter than those dried quickly.

Soak mildewed linen in buttermilk; after an hour, sprinkle it with salt and lay in the sun. Repeat until the spot is removed.

Grass stains can easily be removed from linens, cottons or from white stockings by rubbing the stains with molasses before washing.

To remove obstinate stains from gingham, wet the discolored part with milk and cover with salt. Leave it thus for a couple of hours, then rinse thoroughly.

CLEANS PEWTER

A lemon or onion dipped in silver sand and applied to old pure pewter will remove tarnish.

JAM OR JELLY IDEAL GIFT

With fruits and berries plentiful and cheap, and sugar selling at a price as low as we have seen in a generation, this is the ideal year for special activity in home preserving. Put up in attractively sealed and labeled glasses and jars, jams and jellies will make inexpensive and deeply appreciated Christmas gifts for friends and relatives when the Yule season rolls around.

MUD-SPLASHED SKIRTS

If a skirt is much splashed with mud or stained along the hem it should not be brushed until the stains are completely dry; prompt treatment while the mud is still wet only causing the dirt to sink into the material. If brushing does not eliminate the marks when the material is dry, try sponging with denatured ether.

FALL DECORATING

The new styles are having a decided influence on home-furnishings. There's a pronounced tendency toward femininity and charm in decorating, as fitting backgrounds for the much-talked of "1830 silhouette." Cotton, in all its wealth of versatile fabrics, is rapidly forging to the head of the list.

Point d'esprit for the more formal type of bedroom is used not alone for dressing tables but for charming curtains as well.

Chintz designs, appliqued on solid color glazed chintz, are interesting and refreshing.

Gingham is the particular favorite for the rooms of girls of the college age.

Wide mesh cotton net, used for both the glass curtains and the overdrapes, is both new and very smart.

Brown, both here and abroad, is being used by those decorators noted for their advanced ideas.

Reds are not only holding their own, but increasing in importance for dining and living room.

Startling, but very much approved, is a screen of mirror-glass striped with bands of colorful plaid gingham.

A lampshade causing a lot of comment was a plaid gingham covered with sheer voile.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

Crossing the Atlantic ocean 61 times in the past 61 years is a record held by Mrs. Amelia Schlegel, of New York city. She is 90 years of age.

Mrs. Emma Powell, aged 83, of Proebstel, Wash., is believed to be the oldest active farmer in the state. She employs no help in running the 100-acre property.

Mrs. Delia Akeley, widow of the late Carl Akeley, the noted explorer and sculptor, recently returned from her fifth journey into the wilds of the Dark continent.

Miss Morilla Del Carveth, a member of the bar of Illinois, is the first of her sex to enter the business end of aviation. She is general manager of an airplane distributing corporation in New York city.

New York city now has the first woman ever to hold down the city editor's desk in a large metropolitan newspaper. Mrs Laura Vitray, formerly of the staff of the Columbia School of Journalism, has this distinction.

FALL HAT FEATHERS.

Among the new feather fancies are pads in a variety of feathers. Pheasant pads, striped with narrow black feathers, are included, and the collection of plain feather pads has been augmented by several new colors, such as the wine and brown ranges.

COATS TREAD IN STRANGE WAYS AS SUITS OR DRESSES

PARIS, Oct. 5—(AP)—It's a smart woman who knows a coat when she sees one this autumn.

Outer garments have gone clear off the straight and narrow pathways of other seasons and are doing things on their own.

As a result coats masquerade as suits, as jackets and skirts, as coat-dresses.

In fact the smartest coats look like anything but coats.

One way of dissembling is the use of tiers which simulate a three-quarter length suit jacket and skirt.

Another way is peplum like pieces set on at the hips, leading the unwary to believe the coat is a suit.

A third way and a way Paris loves more and more as the season develops, is the combination of fur and cloth in entirely new effects.

Some coats have fur tops simulating short fur jackets on cloth skirts. Cloth and fur form one garment however, and it is a coat.

Cloth coats with big collars and sleeves made entirely of fur except for a brief cloth cap are in high favor.

Cloth and fur coats are worked up in black wool velour and broadtail or caracul, in green and black, in all brown, and in green and gray or black and gray.

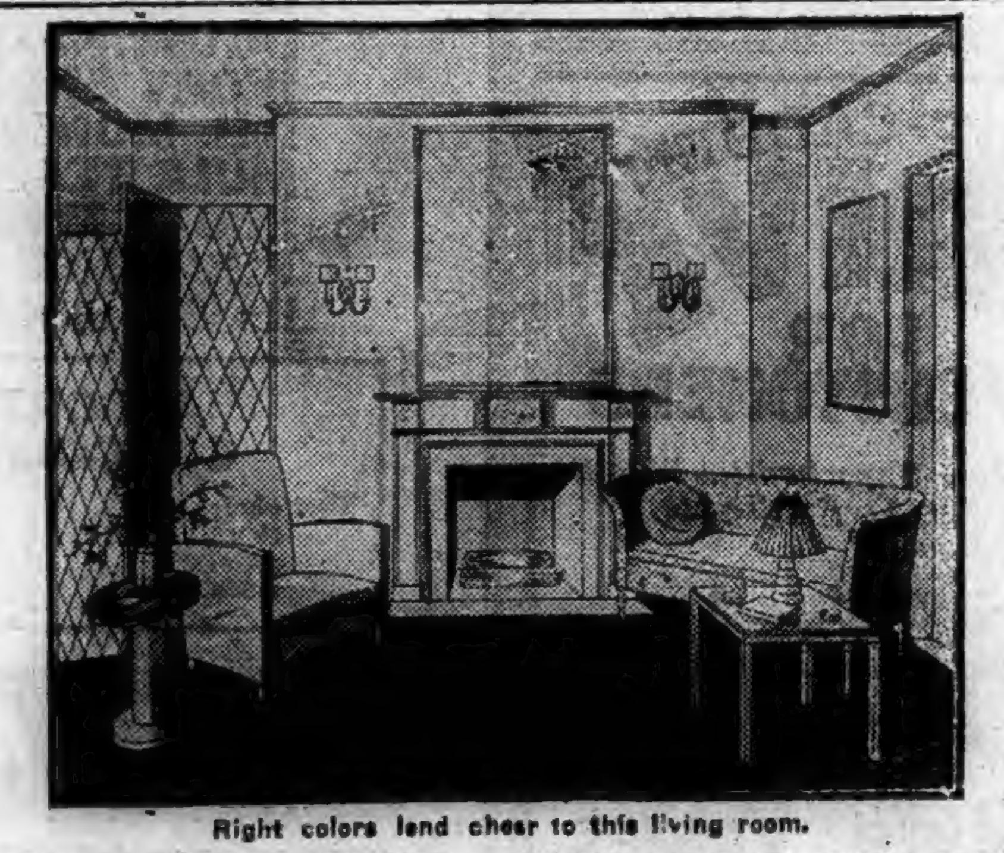
Little fur berets or off the face turbans are being worn with such coats. And if you want one you can carry a muff with the enthusiastic approval of Paris' all-highest style-makers.

Soft plaids that are exact duplications of clan tartans will make sport suits for many an American woman of Scotch sympathies this fall, and with the enthusiastic approval of Paris.

Featured plaids are Douglas, Macleod, Macpherson and Ogilvie.

Paris suggests that they be made into trouser-skirts and short coats.

COLOR RULES LIVING ROOM PSYCHOLOGY



Right colors lend cheer to this living room.

By ELSIE DREW KENNEDY

The living room, as the room about which most of the life of the household revolves, should be the most gracious and cheerful and at the same time the most dignified room in the house.

This combination of qualities might be difficult to achieve if it were not for color. But the effect of color on the subconscious mind is immeasurable as any stage designer can tell you.

Consider the beginning of a mystery play when dire deeds are abroad—the stage is shrouded in a strange green light, mysterious and awe-inspiring. But when the hero and heroine are freed from suspicion and united in the third act they are surrounded by a rosy yellow light that suggests only joy and security.

Before decorating any room, therefore, it is well to run over the list of colors and their possibilities. Green as we have said in some shades is mysterious and should not be used for lights, but, like blue, it is cool, refined and very restful and makes a splendid background color.

The range from red to orange is warm and vibrating and is most effective in small spots, while yellow and yellow-green are cheerful, sunny and refreshing.

The living room illustrated is distinguished for its excellent architecture, its well designed furniture and its nicely balanced arrangement, but more than that for its clever use of color. Its walls and woodwork are painted the same color, a soft blue-green that is soothing.

The deep-pile rug which covers the entire floor is a dark prune, almost black, and this dignified color in a higher shade dominates the room, relieved here and there by warm, cheerful spots of clear, bright apricot.

With the fireplace as the focal point comfortable groups have been arranged which carry out this color scheme. On one side there is the long settee, upholstered in plum-colored velvet and a low coffee table painted green to match the walls. An apricot satin pillow is tossed casually against the curved back of the settee and the coffee table supports a jade-colored ash tray and an amethyst lamp with an apricot shade.

At the left of the fireplace there is a large, comfortable chair upholstered in apricot satin and to the right of that, conveniently within reach, there is a pedestal table of Empire inspiration. Its base is walnut and its top is plum-colored marble

Guiding Your Child

By Mrs. Agnes Lyne

Discussing Him.

Sarah was sitting very primly on her chair at her mother's tea party when one woman, looking straight at her, remarked to another, "She's not very p-r-e-t-t-y, is she?" spelling out the word.

Sarah's eyes flashed. She spoke up sharply. "I may not be very p-r-e-t-t-y, but I am s-m-a-r-t!"

Not all children are quite so well able to show up their elders, or, if they are, they do not have the necessary spirit. Often they carry away from a casual remark a wound to their selfesteem which lasts long after the remark itself is forgotten.

Certainly they suffer much more than we realize from the comments which adults feel free to make about them. Especially is this true when it is someone whom the child loves who makes the unkind observations.

It is always a mistake to discuss a child in his presence. If we praise his personal charms we make him self-conscious and conceited. If we discuss his faults, we emphasize them in his own mind, making him unhappy and causing him to feel inferior.

If we discuss such things as his illnesses, his poor eating habits or difficulties in going to sleep at night, we are apt to make him regard these characteristics of his as very important. In any event he will realize that they are an excellent way of getting attention and will capitalize them to get more of it in the future.

A child has enough to contend with without being handicapped by self-consciousness. If you must talk about your child do it when he is well out of earshot.

Remember that every problem of adjustment, of discipline and of habit training is made doubly difficult if your child knows that you consider it important enough to discuss.

DESERT MAIDENS STILL THRILLED BY 'LOVE COURTS'

TAZEROUK, Hoggar, Southern Algeria, Oct. 5—(AP)— Courts of Love, such as the troubadours celebrated in the middle ages, still are held here in the mysterious Hoggar, high plateau in the heart of the Sahara desert.

Strangely, this relic of long-ago customs, is practiced by the Touaregs, a people who accord their women more rights, perhaps, than in any spot in the world.

Woman dominates. She marries whom she pleases. She controls her property. She may live apart from her husband without being called upon for a reason. Her children take her name, not that of the father.

The woman, moreover, although Mussulman, goes unveiled while the tall fierce looking warlike Touareg men keep their faces covered, from the eyes down, awake and asleep, even while they eat. They are called the "veiled men of the desert."

So, the "Court of Love" also is woman's affair. They are held at all seasons, everywhere. Young women, married and unmarried, assemble in a tent, the usual home of the Touaregs. Young men often come from a great distance to pay court to some girl of great beauty, wealth or rank.

The highest reward that can be given a man is permission to kiss a certain girl.

As the man may not remove his veil, he merely lowers it below his nose. The man and the woman then rub noses as the woman kisses the man through his veil.

The courts open after sundown and often last into the early morning.

SAYS IT'S HEALTHFUL NOT TO WIPE DISHES

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Oct. 5—(AP)— Housewives who dislike to wipe dishes now have an excuse for avoiding the task.

Warning that the use of dish towels leaves germs on dishes, Dr. W. A. King, San Antonio health officer, advises it is healthful and not lazy to wash dishes in hot soapy water, then place them in a rack, scald them, and leave them to drain and dry.

Gleaming Leathers.

PARIS, Oct. 5—(AP)—Shining leathers sometimes supply the trimming note on the dull finish fabrics Paris uses extensively for winter.

Patent leather and glazed box calf are the usual choices. They are combined with colors as well as black.

Slick furs like galyak and pony are also used in trimming.

Many dark colored afternoon dresses have touches of fur, notably ermine.

Ermine Lined Gloves.

PARIS, Oct. 5—(AP)—Elbow length gauntlet gloves of black suede with ermine lined tops are shown by a first ranking dressmaker with a broadcloth and ermine afternoon costume.

A pointed ermine scarf is designed especially for the costume.

Your Favorite Brand.

PARIS, Oct. 5—(AP)—Labels of popular cigarettes are reproduced here in wood inlay in cigarette cases for golfers.

Flowered Taffeta.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5 (AP) Flowered taffeta is used for an evening gown by Mrs. Arthur J. May. The dress is tight fitting with very low neck and long skirt with uneven hem line.

Long crystal earrings, crystal necklace and white shoes with crystal buckles complete the costume.

Short Fur Jacket.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5—(AP)—Already the short fur jacket is taking its place among the winter sport fashions. At a recent polo match Miss Margaret Trumbull wore one of beige clipped lapin lined with a deeper beige crepe. Her hat was a beige jersey wrap-around turban.

Blue Chiffon Ensemble.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5—(AP)— Mrs. Patrick Hurley, wife of the secretary of war, is wearing an ensemble suit of blue chiffon. With it she wears a close-fitting felt hat of the same shade of blue, its only ornament is a jaunty little blue feather which goes down over one ear.

Astrakan Ensemble

PARIS, Oct. 5—(AP)—Milliners here are selling cravats of fur-fabric to go with Russian round turbans.

Astrakan is the most favored fur for the hat and scarf combinations.

Jeweled Long Gloves.

PARIS, Oct. 5—(AP)—Black suede gloves trimmed with turquoises are a novelty shown for evening by a glove maker who specializes in decorative effects.

WIFE OF SECRETARY OF COMMERCE DEVOTED TO TRAVEL, ART, MUSIC

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5—Mrs. Robert Patterson Lamont, wife of the secretary of commerce is one of the art lovers of the capital and does much to foster the ambitions of young artists as well as being a patroness of exhibitions of paintings, drawings and etchings. The latter is a pronounced favorite of both Mrs. Lamont and her husband. Out at their Chicago home they have what is said to be one of the finest collections of etchings to be found in the country. We speak of the Lamont's of being "from Chicago", but in fact, they live at Lake Forest, just outside the city, and their home there is one of the show places of that section. Mrs. Lamont divides her enthusiasm into three parts—travel, art and music. She has spent much time abroad, and when the president named Mr. Lamont for his cabinet, Mrs. Lamont was in Paris. Mr. Lamont cabled her immediately but the press news got there first, and Mrs. Lamont was already packing up to come home, when her husband's cable carried her the news of his appointment.

Mrs. Lamont is passionately fond of opera, and one of her great delights is to entertain at the Forest Lake home, the prominent artists who are singing in Chicago. She is a patroness of practically all the best musicals in the city.

Mrs. Lamont is also enthusiastic over charitable work, and does much through organizations and personally to help the unfortunate.

There are several daughters in the Lamont family and all, and so is Mrs. Lamont, are fond of swimming, tennis and other sports. There are excellent golf links nearby, and family foresomes are often played. The son, Robert Patterson Lamont, Jr., received the croix de guerre and the military medal for service in France.

One daughter is married, she is Mrs. Chauncey Belknap of New York. Another daughter, Gertrude Lamont, is to be presented to Washington society this winter.

Mrs. Hoover and Mrs. Lamont are old friends. They met years ago through the mutual interests of their husbands, both of whom were distinguished engineers, even then.

Mrs. Lamont is indefatigable both in her philanthropic, social and artistic life, yet finds plenty of time to travel and still "keep the home fires burning".

Flood Killed Cherry Trees

The Potomac flood of last year destroyed many of the splendid Japanese cherry trees, that have proved a great attraction to early April visitors to the capital. It will be recalled that the cherry trees were a gift of Japan to the United States, secured by Mrs. William Howard Taft, and were practically gifts to her personally, although passed on to the government and accepted formally and with many expressions of appreciation by the government.

Now the lost cherry trees are to be replaced by other flowering trees of a hardy variety and native to the country. It was first intended to delay the replanting until more Japanese cherries could be obtained, but this would involve considerable delay, leaving the beautiful Potomac drive rather shabby in spots, until the trees could be secured, planted and the drive put back into condition.

Another feature will be the planting of nut-trees to furnish food for the hundreds of great, gray, bushy-tailed squirrels that make Potomac park their home.

Washington suffered this year from a prolonged drought and hot weather but only shrubs with shallow roots suffered, the trees and many shrubs of sturdy growth have ended the trying season in first class condition.

The women of Washington take especial pride in their gardens, even the city dwellers make use of every tiny bit of "a yard" and plant it with flowers and flowering shrubs. In fact, some of the women in high society openly and proudly speak of "my back yard" instead of trying to give it added dignity of the name "garden", applying to a little mite of a garden patch tucked away behind the house.

Victorian Velvet

PARIS, Oct. 25—(AP)—Velvet the color of eggplant makes one of the Victorian-era evening dresses Paris designs for winter in the grande dame manner. Such dresses are meant for debutantes.

The skirt is toe-length, slim and slinky, made up of many bias folds of velvet. Similar folds form the bodice which has a square decollete and little shoulder caps.

Half way down the front of the skirt is a bunch of pale pink velvet gardenias, the final romantic touch to a romantic dress for a romantic young modern.

GREENEVILLE

WEDDING

Sieck—Sebastian

A very pretty fall wedding took place at the Third Baptist church on Central avenue Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock when Miss Jennie B. Sebastian, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Valentine Sebastian, of 83 Sixth street, was united in marriage by Rev. William J. Sly, te pastor, with Ludwig V. Sieck of New London, son of William and Flora Sieck. The ceremony was performed in the presence of many relatives and friends. The couple were attended by Miss Ethelyn Judson, as bridesmaid, and Bernard Sebastian, brother of the bride, acted as best man. The bride was given in marriage by Valentine Sebastian, also a brother of the bride. The bride was charmingly gowned in white satin and carried an arm bouquet of Easter lilies. Miss Judson, the bridesmaid, was very prettily attired in orchid moire and carried an arm bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums.

Following the church ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Sixth street. Later in the day the newly married couple left on a wedding trip to Washington, D. C. Upon their return in about two weeks they will reside at 17 Spicer street, Groton. As a going away costume Mrs. Siech wore an ensemble suit of brown. The bride was formerly a telephone operator at the Southern New England Telephone company while Mr. Sieck is a warrant officer attached to the coast guard service at New London. Both Mr. and Mrs. Sieck have a large circle of friends in this vicinity who extend them best wishes for a happy and prosperous married life. Guests were present from New London, South Manchester, Willimantic, Boston and New York.

At Lefty Dugas Celebration

Many of the local baseball fans attended the banquet for Lefty Dugas at Taftville, in Parish hall, Saturday evening and extended their congratulations to Lefty who was a player three years ago on the United States Finishing company baseball team when they won the championship of the Dusty league. It was through his playing and hitting that the title was clinched. Among those attending from the third ward were: Edward Gleason, Edward Riordan, Peter Gauthier, Michael Shahan, James Gordon, George Swanton, Rowland Langevin, Theodore Fournier, Robert Swanton, William Bowen, Edward Delaney, Edward Nevins, William Tracey, James Quinn, Arthur (Mickey) Breen, Thomas McHugh, William Carey, John Dennis, Richard Hourigan, John Geoghegan, Joseph Gates, John Dowling and John Kane.

REV. HARRY BROTHWELL IS PRESENTED NEW AUTO

Rev. Harry P. Brothwell, pastor of the First Baptist church of Jordan village, Waterford, former pastor of the Third Baptist church on Sixth street, was agreeably surprised Thursday night following the quarterly business meeting held at his church when he was presented with a new Chevrolet automobile. The new car is a closed model of the latest design and the presentation was made by Albert Perkins, a trustee of the church. The presentation was witnessed by a large number of friends and members of the church. Following the presentation Rev. Mr. Brothwell responded with feeling and thanked the members and friends of the church for their kindness.

St. Teresa Novena Ends

A very successful novena to St. Teresa, known in the Catholic world as the Little Flower of Jesus, came to a very fitting end at St. Mary's Memorial church Friday morning with a high mass at 7 o'clock, which was celebrated by Rev. Arthur B. Sullivan. The novena started Sept. 25, and ended upon the feast day of St. Teresa, who was canonised a saint only a few years ago and who had lived in the 19th century.

Large attendances of parishioners and persons outside the parish were noted at both the morning and evening services. Rev. George J. Donahue, the pastor, delivered the sermons each evening, relating to the life of the great saint, and they proved to be very interesting and educational. Both Rev. Father Donahue and Rev. Father Sullivan were kept busy hearing confessions Thursday, for Friday, besides being the feast day of St. Teresa, was the first Friday of the month. At 8 o'clock, a low mass was read by Rev. Father Donahue. At 5:30 a. m., communion was distributed by Rev. Father Sullivan. Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock, another large attendance was present at the holy hour which is being held every first Friday of the month.

LIONS' CLUBS BACKING BUSINESS CONFIDENCE WEEK

The Lions' club of Norwich, together with the 2,257 other Lions' clubs of the United States and Canada, is putting on a Business Confidence week from October 19 to 25 inclusive.

A call has gone forth to the president and secretary of every Lions' club, from the board of directors which recently met at Chicago, urging that a committee be appointed at once to enlist the cooperation of the press, the other civic organizations of the city and all agencies in pointing out the advantages of that community, and the many reasons everyone has for being confident, and carrying on business as usual.

International has suggested as the slogan of each Lions' club this sentence from one of Calvin Coolidge's recent articles: "It is now a public duty to pay bills promptly and buy what you can afford."

DENIES TWO ZONING APPEALS; ALLOWS ONE

The appeal of Harry L. Lathrop of No. 27 Washington street, for permission to install two additional gasoline tanks at his garage and repair shop on Washington street, has been denied by the joint zoning board of the city and town. Announcement of the denial of the petition was made Saturday. A hearing on the petition was held Friday in the mayor's office and considerable opposition developed.

The board has also denied the appeal of John Dydo for permission to maintain an auto repair shop at No. 337-341 West Main street. The property is owned by Harold L., and Carrie V. Pierson.

Arthur E. Shedd was granted permission to construct and maintain a building to be used in connection with his gasoline pump for the sale of gasoline on premises abutting No. 557 Main street.

TAFTVILLE

Mrs. W. P. Smith has returned from Central Falls, R. I., where she has been the guest for the past month of Mrs. Theodore Thurmer.

Rev. Omer T. Mandler, curate at Sacred Heart church, has been transferred to St. Anne's church at Hartford, according to a list of changes recently issued by Right Reverend John T. Nilan, bishop of Hartford. Father Mandler succeeded Rev. John B. Malley as curate at Sacred Heart church and during his stay in town has made a host of friends. He has taken a great deal of interest in the activities of the Shyma club and has been the able musical director at the church. While his friends dislike to have him depart, they are pleased that he is moving to a scene of larger endeavor. Rev. Father Malley, whom he succeeded here, has also been changed by orders of the bishop from St. Donato's church, New Haven, to a New Britain church. Rev. Henri F. Chagnon, who, for a long term of years was curate at the local church before going to All Hallows church at Moosup, has been transferred to St. Anne's church at Bristol. Two other clergymen in whom Taftville people have a special interest because they were born here and lived here until they entered the priesthood, are also affected by the recent changes in the diocese. They are Rev. Anthony Murphy, who has been chaplain at St. Francis hospital at Hartford, but who has been made a faculty at St. Thomas seminary, and Rev. Oscar Norman who has been assistant at St. Anne's church, Bristol, but who now goes to Putnam where he will be assistant at St. Mary's church to Rev. Ulderic O. Bellerose, formerly pastor of Sacred Heart church. Father Mandler is to be succeeded by Rev. Hormidas Belec of St. Mary's church, Willimantic.

Mrs. Ralph Hayman and son, Robert, of Norwich, spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Walter W. Kellner and family of Providence street.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Greene and daughter, Barbara, of Danielson, were week end guests of Mrs. Greene's mother, Mrs. Lee Heap and family, of South Second avenue.

Miss Doris Pepin, of Hunters avenue, is a patient at the William W. Backus hospital following an operation for appendicitis.

Residents of Germania avenue are circulating a petition to have the street accepted as a public highway.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest G. Stranz (Elsie Seddon) who have been at the Passion play at Oberammagau, are now in Geneva, and are planning to visit various places in Switzerland.

Peter Lukoff, of North Third avenue, and Hartwell Zuerner, of Hunters avenue, have been recent visitors in Westerly, R. I.

There was a large attendance at the monthly business meeting of the members of Branch 98, Polish Workers Sick Mutual Aid society held Sunday afternoon at their rooms on McKay street.

LUTHERAN SYNOD PRESIDENT IS SPEAKER FOR CHURCH ANNIVERSARY

First Evangelical Lutheran church, Franklin street celebrated its 60th anniversary Sunday with morning and afternoon services, both attended by large congregations. In the morning service, at which the pastor, Rev. Carl Storek presided, the anniversary sermon was by Rev. Dr. Samuel Trexler, president of the United Lutheran Synod of New York.

"The Christian church to meet her present opportunities and responsibilities," said Dr. Trexler, "must consider her work as highly specialized. She is constantly being lured into all types of enterprise and thus she dilutes the contribution she should make. The world is at present facing economic, political and social problems such as it has never known. When the church ventures to tinker in apprentice fashion with departments she does not know she not only loses the confidence of the world but she wastes her own energies. For this reason she must follow the great missionary pastor, Paul, who constantly divested himself of all the movements that would tag on to him. With a clarity of vision he repeatedly asserted his vocation as being singular and apart. The church today has a distinctive vocation which will more than absorb all her energy in infusing into the world a faith that is not dependent on stock markets, a love that eagerly reaches out to help those in need, and a sense of values which goes far beyond the passing into the things that are unchanging.

"In such a contribution the church these days justifies herself, and she can give that which alone will salvage our present tottering civilization."

Rev. Dr. Trexler has but recently returned from a summer spent in Europe and it was with much interest that the congregation heard him refer to conditions which he had observed there. Immediately after the service he left for New London in order to take a train there on the way to the Lutheran biennial convention to be held in Milwaukee, including both the United States and Canada.

There was special music by the choir, with trumpeters, at the service, and after the sermon two members were received upon confession, Mr and Mrs. P. J. Dumont.

Afternoon Service

In the afternoon at 2:30 the anniversary programme was continued in a bi-lingual service (German and English) in which greetings were brought from other churches in the state by Rev. O. Haydenreich of Hartford, Rev. William Meyer of Waterbury and Rev. Martin Gaudian of New Britain. Greetings and gifts were also announced from members and friends of the church and a brief historical sketch was given by Pastor Storek, which brought to mind many interesting facts in the life of the church in this city.

Historical Sketch

He gave the following list of pastors of the church: Christian Koerner, five years; Victor Both, two years, five months; J. P. Schoener, one year; Alfred Tilly, four years; M. H. Shields was chairman of the convention and Maurice W. Meyer was the convention clerk. In nominating Judge Ayling, Attorney Charles V. James said:

In fact two additional cars were offered at the last moment which were not needed.

NEW MEMBERS RECEIVED INTO ROSARY SOCIETY

In solemn procession Sunday afternoon, from the basement chapel to the upper church, over 200 marched for the annual reception of new members of St. Patrick's Rosary society, of which Miss Annie G. Stanton is president. The procession was led by 90 little girls, 30 each representing the joyful, sorrowful and glorious mysteries of the rosary, distinguished by their hair bows of white, red and gold, respectively. About 50 members of the Children of Mary were in the procession also. The organist, Henry J. LaFontaine, played the processional and the members of the society and congregation sang as the opening hymn, "Come, Holy Ghost." Later the hymn to the Blessed Virgin, "Mother, Dear, O Pray for Me," was sung and at the conclusion of the exercises there was congregational singing of "Holy God, We Praise Thy Name."

Rev. John J. Reilly led in the recitation of the rosary, after which a number of new members were received into the society by the parish rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May. This rare and beautiful composition was arranged by Mr. LaFontaine for use by the chorus and was interpreted very successfully. The quartet, Roderick F. Sullivan, Mrs. Bernard C. Mr. Fox will oppose Congressman Richard P. Freeman of New London who is running for re-election on the republican ticket. The democratic party at a county convention in the town hall Saturday morning at 11 o'clock unanimously nominated Albert W. John F. Hennon of Jewett City, who planned to run against Mr. Lillibridge in the convention announced before the convention was called to order that he had withdrawn from the race, leaving a clear field for Mr. Lillibridge. Mr. Hennon, who withdrew to preserve harmony in the party, nominated Mr. Lillibridge for the election.

State Central Committeeman Thomas J. Kelly called the convention to order and Alton T. Miner of New London, democratic nominee for secretary of state, was selected as chairman. Frank H. Quinley of this city was the clerk. Mr. Miner, in a brief address stated that the office of sheriff is one of the most important offices in the county, carrying with it a heavy responsibility. "Within the rank and file of our party we can find such a man," he said.

The convention, on motion of T. J. Kelly, moved to dispense with the committee on credentials and resolutions. Mr. Hennon, in placing Mr. Lillibridge's name before the convention, said the candidate should be a man who has the feelings of the people at heart, a man of mature judgment, a man who is kind and generous at heart and a man who is able to mix with the people. Mr. Lillibridge is such a man, he said. After speaking in glowing terms of Mr. Lillibridge's family connections, Mr. Hennon said it was a pleasure to nominate him for the office of sheriff. Applause greeted the nomination.

Following his nomination, Mr. Lillibridge was escorted to the hall as the delegates loudly applauded. HOOVER CALLS FOR NATION-WIDE CO-OPERATION TO END THE BUSINESS DEPRESSION

In Address to the American Federation of Labor the Chief Executive Said the Demonstration of Team Work and the Absence of Conflict During This Depression Had Increased the Stability and Wholesomeness of Our Industrial and Social Structure—Asserted That the Expansion of Construction and Freedom From Strikes and Lockouts Had Contributed Greatly to the Lessening of Unemployment—Before the American Legion, President Hoover Denied the Existence of Imperialistic Ambitions of the American People

Both addresses made by President Hoover in Boston yesterday are printed on Page Seven.

BOSTON, Oct. 6—(AP)—Cheered in two addresses before the American Legion and the American Federation of Labor, President Hoover today called for nationwide team work to end the business depression and denied the existence of imperialistic ambitions by the people of America.

Immediately after the conclusion of his labor speech, expressing confidence that the nation would build steadily and mitigate the destructiveness of business storms, the chief executive left on his special train for a 21-hour run to King's Mountain, S. C., where tomorrow he is to speak at the sesqui-centennial of the Revolutionary war battle.

"The demonstration of nation-wide co-operation and team play and the absence of conflict during this depression have increased the stability and wholesomeness of our industrial and social structure," Mr. Hoover said at the fiftieth annual convention of the Labor federation, held in the auditorium of the Hotel Statler.

He asserted expansion of construction and freedom from strikes and lockouts had contributed greatly to lessening unemployment. Turning to the bituminous coal industry for specific remarks, he held that it was suffering most from readjustment made by new discoveries and labor saving devices and added that "destructive competition and breakdown in wages" had severely handicapped it.

Six thousand independent mine owners, he said were operating 7,000 mines, and he urged elimination of this "destructive competition" as "one key" to the solution.

Earlier in the day, a few hours after his arrival from the capital, the chief executive received an enthusiastic demonstration from the American Legion.

He spoke in the Boston Arena where two years ago to the day, he spoke during his pre-election campaign. Thousands of Legionnaires with their state banners held aloft in a manner suggesting political conventions interrupted the president repeatedly as he asserted that the "peace of our countrymen than at this moment," and warned that a belief by some leaders in other countries that "they were in the presence of the birth of a new imperial power intent upon dominating the destinies and the freedom of other peoples" was an "utter misconception."

Before the Legionnaires, the present chief executive shared his acclaim with his predecessor, Calvin Coolidge, who sat on the platform beside him as an honorary chairman of the Legion.

The former president was cheered as Mr. Hoover diverted from his prepared manuscript to pay tribute to "my eminent predecessor," to whom he gave credit for carrying through "with great success during his administration" the Kellogg-Briand pact for outlawing war.

Demonstration for Coolidge

After the conclusion of Mr. Hoover's address, when former President Coolidge was presented to the convention by O. L. Bodenhamer, commander of the Legion, the audience arose en masse and applauded.

Through a demonstration lasting more than a minute, the Legionnaires Oclamored for a speech by the past president. While the Vermont banners waved vigorously, held far above the others, and Mrs. Coolidge sat and shook her head smilingly at her husband in the belief that he should not speak, Mr. Coolidge remained quiet.

Finally, rising slowly from his seat as the tumult gave no indication of abating, he advanced to the microphones and stilled the applause, saying:

"To save the time of this convention, I am going to give you one sentence:

"You have paid your debt to Lafayette, but you still owe a debt to yourselves and to the United States of America."

President and Mrs. Hoover joined in the applause as Mr. Coolidge sat down and they again clapped their hands when Mrs. Coolidge was introduced, with cries for a speech once more ringing through the hall.

Afterward Mr. Bodenhamer told the convention that he had given his solemn promise to Mr. Coolidge that he would not be called upon to speak.

On the president's right on the platform sat General John J. Pershing and to his left, Mr. Bodenhamer, who introduced Mr. Hoover. Allan Hoover, youngest son of the president who is attending Harvard, also was on the platform near his mother.

Applause For Hoover

Prolonged applause greeted Mr. Hoover when he arose to speak and, after all the others had sat down, the Iowa delegation remained standing and o their favorite son sang:

"He from Iowa, Iowa,
We'll have you understand;
He's the first man in the land,
He's from Iowa, Iowa,
That's where the president's from."

They were rewarded with a smile from the president.

The Legionnaires laughed with the president as he opened his address by telling them that he ventured to claim from some years of service during the great war, a measure of comradeship with the men who fought, and that he understood their variety of French perfectly.

The first applause broke forth as he asserted that "you realized that liberty and freedom can be won on the battlefield, but they can be held only by ordered government in peace."

"We need the teaching that the foundation of government is respect for law," the president said. "A quickened interest on the part of the community can insist upon proper enforcement of law, can arouse public opinion, while any condition of lawlessness remains unchecked in that community.

"You can impress upon the citizens that the road of self-government is through the discharge of our obligations at the ballot box; to understand that the basis of defense is a willingness to serve our citizen soldiery; actively or participate in these and a multitude of duties of citizens—all are an inseparate part of the safety and progress of the nation."

HOOVER SPEEDING TO KING'S MOUNTAIN, S. C.

ABOARD HOOVER SPECIAL TRAIN, Oct. 6—(AP)—With his two-addresses before the American Legion and the American Federation of Labor in Boston today behind him, President Hoover sped southward tonight to King's Mountain, South Carolina, where tomorrow he speaks at the sesqui-centennial of the Revolutionary war battle.

After a 21 hour run to King's Mountain, N. C., the president is to attend the exercises there and then motor the remaining eight miles into South Carolina to the site of the battle.

En route he arranged for General A. J. Bowley, assistant chief of staff, to join him at Washington. General Bowley formerly commanded the Army Corps area in which North Carolina is included.

WATER RIGHTS CASES BEFORE SUPREME COURT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6—(AP)—Three controversies among states crowded their way into the supreme court today as the tribunal began a new term in the old senate chamber, where it has met for 70 years.

All three contentions involved water rights. One was a dispute between two eastern states. The others were among western states.

Arizona asked the court for permission to file its complaint against the other states in the Colorado river basin and Secretary Wilbur, opposing the construction of Hoover dam.

Massachusetts sought to advance the oral argument in the disputes brought by Connecticut, challenging the right of Massachusetts to take water from the Swift and Ware rivers, tributaries of the Connecticut, for use in the metropolitan district at Boston. Connecticut filed its exceptions to the findings of the special master which favored Massachusetts.

Wyoming asked the court to reconsider again its controversy with Colorado over the use of water from the Laramie river, contending Colorado was violating the distribution ordered by the court.

The chamber was crowded as the court assembled. All the justices were present, including Justice Holmes, who will be 90 in March, and Justice Roberts, the new member, who ook his seat on the final day of the last term.

The court confined its business to receiving motions. No opinions will come down until after oral arguments are begun on October 20. A large number of lawyers were admitted to practice and petitions for review were submitted in 285 of the 350 cases which accumulated during the summer recess.

Chief Justice Hughes announced the court would devote the remainder of this week to conferences to decide the cases in which reviews would be granted.

He said the court would meet next Monday to receive further motions.

The court reserved action on virtually all motions, including those submitted by states, but will announce its ruling soon.

Three Arrests For S. Killingly Hold-Up

WARWICK, R. I., Oct. 7.—(Tuesday)—(AP)—Warwick police early today recovered a considerable quantity of the bulk silver stolen from a truck in South Killingly, Conn., yesterday and arrested three men believed to have held up the truck driver.

The loot was found in a summer cottage at Shawomet beach. One of the suspected holdup men was arrested in the cottage when police swooped down upon it. The other two fled but were overtaken after a chase on foot.

The silver was found in an ice chest and under mattresses.

Police were informed that men were acting suspiciously in the cottage, which ordinarily is deserted at this season.

The suspected bandits were taken unawares. A search of the cottage revealed the loot.

DETAILS OF THE $50,000 HOLDUP IN SO. KILLINGLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 6.—A band numbering five or six holdup men got away with between $50,000 and $60,000 worth of finished silver and silver bars this morning in the most daring and cleverly executed robbery in local annals. The silver, shipped by Handy and Harmon of Bridgeport, left Waterbury for Providence at one o'clock this morning on one of the trucks of the ByRolly Transportation company of Springfield.

At about 5:30 this morning, as near as can be ascertained, the big truck was slowly making its way up Hall's hill, three miles east of here at South Killingly, on the Danielson-Providence trunk line, when Cornelius Wines, a giant colored man resident at No. 2 North Main street, Waterbury, and operator of the truck, was signaled by a man standing in the highway, to stop.

Details Of The Hold-Up

Wines halted his ponderous truck on which the sidelights were still burning to find himself looking into the barrel of a very business-like gun. He promptly obeyed the order to step down from the truck, was seized from behind, blindfolded and gagged.

Wines was unable to say as late as this afternoon how many hold-up men were in the party, but he estimates the number as five or six. Things happened so rapidly to him, he told state officers, that he had no opportunity to count his captors, to get a description of them or to see what kind of cars they were using.

They were brusque with him, too, upbraiding him for being late in arriving at South Killingly. They told him that they knew he left Water-

Annual Convention Of Am[illegible]an Legion

Va[illegible] Celebrations in the [illegible]ets of Boston—15,000 [illegible]elegates Were Prodigal With Ovations

BOSTON, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Fifteen thousand cheering delegates and visitors crowded into the flag festooned arena today for the opening of the 12th annual convention of the American Legion, heard the fall of National Commander O. L. Bodenhamer's gavel and listened to President Herbert Hoover sound a call to the legion to renew and expand its mission of citizenship.

The same 15,000 accorded a thunderous ovation to former President and Mrs. Coolidge, to General John J. Pershing, to General Henri Gouraud, one-armed French war hero and to a host of other notables which crowded the platform.

Outside the big convention hall tumultous throngs made merry with every known noise-making device. Traffic stood still while gaily garbed bands marched and countermarched the downtown streets, and the celebrations, impromptu and otherwise, which began early, continued late.

Aside from the president's address and a wholly unexpected two sentence "speech" which former President Coolidge consent to make, the chief business of the convention, once welcomes had been concluded, was the adoption of the report of Commander Bodenhamer calling for greater activity on behalf of disabled veterans and dependent children of veterans.

Perhaps of next importance was the announcement by the time and place committee that the 1931 convention selection had been narrowed down to Los Angeles or Detroit, the two "serious" contenders.

In his address, which was widely broadcast, the president said:

"You have a post in every town and village. These 11,000 posts are organized into divisions with state and national commanders. You are already an army mobilized for unselfish and constructive endeavor. Your strength is made up of men who have stood the quality test of citizenship. You have it in your power to do much.

"Through your local posts who can awaken the minds of the communities throughout our nation to a higher ideal of citizenship. You have an exceptional interest and an exceptional opportunity in the front line of citizenship to cooperate and preserve the fundamentals of our republic."

Although Commander Bodenhamer strained words to expedite the business of the opening assembly, the crowd was plainly in no mood to cut short its shouted welcomes to such gallant war time figures as General Gouraud, its own battle blinded national vice-commander, Frank Cchoble of Wycote, Pa., General Pershing and others.

Nor did it forget two grand old men of another war, James E. Jewell, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic and Edwin J. Foster, of Worcester, past commander, who rose happily to acknowledge the tumult which broke out at their names.

The convention was equally impartial in bestowing its plaudits on the distaff side when Mrs. Donald MacRae, Jr., of Council Bluffs, Ia., national president of the legion auxiliary, was presented to it by Commander Bodenhamer.

Included among the many others on the platform were a number of past presidents including Col. Hanford MacNider, now United States minister to Canada, who flew to Boston from Ottawa; Paul V. McNutt of Indiana, who is to be tomorrow's grand marshal; Alvin Owsley of Texas and Howard E. Spafford, of New York. Others were Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley, who flew from Tulsa, Okla., with a single stop over at Washington, and Secretary of Navy Charles Francis Adams.

STAMFORD, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Although defeated for most of the important town offices, the democrats staged what is generally considered an upset in today's town election by electing Frederick R. The democrats also re-elected Andrew Schlectweg as first selectman and gave the republicans a close run for the offices of town clerk and town treasurer. George R. Close, republican, was re-elected town clerk, defeating Howard R. Staub, democrat, with 5435 votes against 5177, while a fourteen vote majority gave Harold S. Nichols, republican, the town treasurership. Nichols polled 5321 votes, while his opponent, Clement A. Fuller, democrat, received 5307 votes.

REBEL LEADERS PREDICT EARLY TRIUMPH IN BRAZIL

Nine States, Both North and South, Are In Rebellion—An Army of 80,000 Men Is Reported to Be Marching Upon Rio De Janerio—A Provisional Regime Has Been Set Up In Rio Grande Do Sul—Federal Military Forces Continue to Go Over to the Revolutionaries

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguary, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Leaders of the Brazilian revolt declared in dispatches reaching here tonight that the triumph of the revolution is only a few days away, with an army of 80,000 men marching upon Rio De Janeiro and nine states, in borth north and south, rebelling against the government of President Washington Luis.

The states in arms against the federal administartion were listed as follows:

Southern—Rio Grande Do Sul, Santa Caterina, Parana.

Central—Minas Geraes.

Northern—Piauhy, Geara, Rio Grande Do Norte, Parahyba, Pernambuco.

General Francisco Flores Da Cuna, federal deputy and leader of the revolutionary troops, said he could not make a definite statement as to the states of Rio De Janeiro and Sao Paulo, where the government is strongest, but intimated that the situation there was grave for the administration. In addition, some reports say that revolutionary outbreaks have occurred in the great northern state of Para.

General Da Cunha asserted that in case Sao Paulo and the capital resisted, the revolutionary troops now moving toward Sao Paulo were ready to attack them. This powerful body, numbering 80,000, comprises infantry, cavalry and artillery from Rio Grande Do Sul, Santa Caterina and Parana.

He added that when the revolution triumphed a provisional civil government would take charge, with elections for a president and congress to be called later.

Advices from Rio Grande Do Sul today indicated that the state government had set up a sort of provisional regime already. This state, dominated by Getulio Vargas, who was defeated by Julio Prestes in the elections last March, today nominated Lindolf Collor as its diplomatic representative to Argentina. He left for Buenos Aires by airplane.

The federal military forces continued to go over to the side of the revolutionaries, although some of the officers are holding back.

Officers of the Seventh cavalry were at first arrested but now have returned to their organization for the northward drive to Sao Paulo. The rank and file of the Sixth cavalry is backing the revolt but its officers refused to join and surrendered on condition that they be permitted to leave the country.

They were taken from Alegrete, where the regiment was stationed, to the Uruguayan frontier and released.

In addition to the recruiting of the regular troops, the rebel leaders have begun conscripting men between the ages of 21 and 35.

General Gil Almeida, who commanded the federal troops in the vicinity of Porto Alegre, which was captured last week, at first opposed the revolutionary movement but has now joined it.

In the city of Santa Ana, which likewis was taken, public offices were opened today and began functioning normally under the revolutionaries. All banks were in operation except the branch of the official bank of Brazil, the funds of which were taken to Rivera by employes of the institution Saturday.

Leaders of the revolt were amused today by news that the federal government had declared all Brazil in a state of siege until December 31. In Rio Grande Do Sul they regarded it as a joke, they said, since all the state is in arms against the central government and no federal troops remain to make the measure effective.

WASHINGTON CHANGES VIEW OF REVOLUTION IN BRAZIL

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6—(AP)—A sharp change in the opinion of Washington officialdom as to the seriousness of the Brazilian insurrection was manifest tonight as reports came to the capital from the Latin American republic.

Some observers previously had expressed the opinion that it was the result of repercussions of recent revolts in other Latin American countries and the economic depression with which Brazil has been affected to the same measure as other countries.

Military observers pointed out tonight a factor which might have a bearing on whether the insurrection may be prolonged over a considerable period. This was the vast distances between the points along the coast and in the interior where it would appear the revolutionists have to a measure been successful.

These distances would prevent an immediate junction of the revolting forces, but also would hamper the government in getting loyal troops to so many scattered areas so far from loyal centers.

Word that the revolution had broken out almost simultaneously in a number of points was interpreted as indicating plans had been laid over a considerable period and that the revolt did not grow out of a single minor movement.

The American consulate at Porto Alegre reported to the state department today that all American lives and property were safe there.

Another report from Porto Alegre to usually well informed sources said there was little bloodshed there and that the central government had joined the revolution, which was also successful at Pernambuco, where the liberal element is in power, but no new government has been set up.

REVOLUTION BELITTLED BY THE BRAZILIAN GOVT.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 6—(AP)—Government officials tonight were inclined to minimize the Brazilian revolutionary movement.

They declared their advices indicated that the revolters had not completely overthrown the government even in the state of Rio Grande Do Sul, where the revolution originated, and pointed to the fact that life was going on calmly and normally in the great cities of Rio De Janeiro and Sao Paulo.

At the same time the administration declared all Brazil in a state of siege until December 31, and ordered all banks in the capital closed for at least 15 days. The bank closing was announced as a precaution to prevent any speculation in exchange.

STRIKE ENDS AND TENSION IS WANING IN BILBOA, SPAIN

BILBOA, Spain, Oct. 6.—(AP)—With the return to work of practically all of those who have been on strike for more than a week, the tension of the last two days began to wane tonight and authorities were confident that the crisis had been passed.

A communique from the governor's office said industrial and mine workers in nearby towns, who struck in sympathy with the Bilboa union men, also had gone back to work.

Heavy guards were kept posted after the riots of yesterday in which a man was killed and several persons were wounded, but the city is rapidly resuming its normal aspect. The riots yesterday occurred when workmen sought to prevent a meeting of the monarchial union, an organization sponsored by the late dictator, Primo De Rivera.

Among those who returned to work today were the bakers, and this was a signal for residents of the strike-ridden city to swarm into the shops and buy bread for hoarding against a possible shortage in future strikes. There was nothing to indicate, however, that a food shortage is impending.

PRODUCED ELECTRIC ENERGY FROM GULF STREAM

MATANZAS, Cuba, Oct. 6—(AP)—Professor Georges Claude before a gathering of engineers and scientific men in his laboratory today produced sufficient electrical energy through utilizing variations in temperature of gulf stream water to light forty 500-watt bulbs and keep them burning.

The demonstration, pronounced one of the most curious the world of science yet has seen, was viewed by those present as the forerunner of a great revolution in industrial power methods.

The French scientist, after five years experimentation with a theory pronounced impracticable by some leaders in the field of hydraulics, kept the bulbs burning for more than half an hour.

The demonstration lasted long enough to convince the most skeptical of those present that the inventor's scheme was successful.

The French scientist, who has expended more than $2,000,000 of his own mone yto carry on the work in the face of numerous reverses, received with calm a chorus of congratulations.

FLOODS IN TEXAS ARE CAUSING HEAVY DAMAGE

DALLAS, Tex., Oct. 6—(AP)—Torrential rains which spread from Texas across the Rio Grande river into Mexico today flooded lands along parched by serious drought, doing great damage to property and farm crops but taking no known toll of lives.

Brady, Texas, was the hardest hit community when the usually tranquil Brady river spread three to eight feet of water over several blocks of the business section. Thirty or 40 small homes were carried away, making 200 or 300 persons homeless, and merchandise stocks suffered approximately $250,000 damage. About 1,000 bales of cotton stored in a shed near the river's banks were washed downstream.

The light and power plant also was submerged and forced to shut down. The water supply was menaced and there was a probability of a food shortage. The Brady chapter of the American Red Cross organized a relief program for those who lost their homes and personal belongings.

The Guadalupe river rose 18 feet near Kerrville after three days of continuous rain measured 7 3-4 inches.

A. F. OF L. OPENS ANNUAL CONVENTION IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Oct. 6—(AP)—Representatives of organized labor opened the 50th annual convention of the American Federation of Labor here today and were told by President Hoover that cooperation, teamplay and the absence of conflict during the business depression had added strength to the nation's industrial structure.

From William Green, president of the ederation, they heard a plea for united support in efforts to inaugurate immediately the five-day work week in industry. The federation president paid tribute to the pioneers in the labor movement in this country whose problems in years past, he said, were no less serious than those confronting labor today.

Convention business was devoted to organization details and the presentation of the annual report of the executive council, previously made public.

President Hoover spoke before more than 2,200 delegates and guests. He was accorded a tremendous ovation as was Mrs. Hoover who was presented to the assembly.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

The Harvest Is Forgotten

By Thornton W. Burgess

> Love, then jealousy and rage;
> You'll find this true in every age.
> —Old Mother Nature

Imp never will forget that morning when the harvest was forgotten. It was early. Jolly, round, red Mr. Sun had only just begun his daily climb up in the blue, blue sky. Early as it was, all of the Squirrel cousins were on hand at the beech trees. Jack Frost had been very busy the night before, and the little three-cornered brown unts came rattling down with every Merry Little Breeze that passed along. Presently, Lightfoot the Deer appeared. Impy stopped picking pu nuts to sit up and stare at Lightfoot for a moment or two. Certainly, Lightfoot was worth staring at. Never had he appeared more handsome. His great antlers which some people call horns, although they are not true horns at all—had been freshly polished by rubbing on a tree. They made a wonderful crown for his handsome head. The points were sharp. Lightfoot held his head proudly, as he stood testing the winds with his wonderful nose. All the Squirrels stopped gathering nuts just to admire him.

Lightfoot appeared to be uneasy. He would put his head down to search for a few nuts, only to throw it up again suddenly to test a Merry Little Breeze that came along and to cock his big ears forward that he might better hear. Once or twice he stamped impatiently.

"Isn't he beautiful?" whispered little Mrs. Impy to Impy. "He's the handsomest person in the Green Forest. I wonder what makes him so uneasy this morning? I've never seen him act like this before. Hear him rattle those horns against that tree. What do you suppose makes him act so?"

"I don't know," replied Impy. "I guess he's just feeling good. These cold mornings make a fellow feel good. I feel good myself. Look, Frisky, look!"

Little Mrs. Impy, who used to be Miss Frisky, looked where Impy was looking and gave a little gasp of surprise. If it were not that Lightfoot the Deer was standing almost in front of her she would have said that he was over behind a fallen tree a short distance away. She could hardly believe her eyes. There stood a Deer that looked enough like Lightfoot to be his twin brother. He was just as big as Lightfoot and just as handsome. He was a little younger, perhaps, but he had the same bold appearance and he was staring straight across at Lightfoot.

"Isn't he beautiful!" whispered Mrs. Impy to Impy

"Look at the hair on Lightfoot's shoulders and along his back," whispered Impy.

Mrs. Impy looked. That hair was standing right up. She looked across at the stranger. The hair on the back of his neck, shoulders and back was doing the same thing. Something else she noticed also. She had often thought how big and soft and gentle looking were the eyes of Lightfoot the Deer. They were just as big now, but they were no longer soft or gentle looking. It seemed almost as if they flashed fire. Certainly they were filled with anger. The eyes of the strange Deer had the same appearance. Lightfoot blew a sharp challenge. The stranger replied. Lightfoot took a few steps forward. The stranger leaped over the fallen tree into the open, facing Lightfoot.

Impy looked around hastily. Chatterer the Red Squirrel was looking down from a branch almost above Lightfoot and had forgotten that there was such a thing as a harvest. Happy Jack Squirrel was sitting up in a crotch of a tree, with his eyes round with excitement. He, too, had forgotten the harvest. It was the same way with Rusty the Fox Squirrel. The very air was filled with excitement.

Pile Sufferers

You can only get quick and permanent relief by removing the cause—congestion of blood in the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts. Nothing but an internal medicine can do this—that's why cutting and salves fail. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt discovered a real internal Pile remedy. After prescribing it for 1000 patients with success in 960 cases, he named it HEM-ROID. Druggists everywhere now sell it, and Lee & Osgood guarantees money-back if HEM-ROID does not end Piles in any form.

REPUBLICANS SWEEP WINDHAM IN IN ELECTION; LINCOLN, CLERK AND TREA.

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 6—The republicans elected all candidates to office at the biennial town elections held today by sweeping clean in all districts, except the ones proverbially democratic third, which was held down to an average of but a little over 40 majority for that party. Harold C. Lincoln, republican nominee for town clerk and town treasurer, who will be the first republican to occupy that office since Frank P. Fenton became town clerk 31 years ago ran ahead of his ticket with a majority of 399 for all four districts. His opponent was Thomas A. Shea, former registrar of voters who was the second democrat made to fill the vacancy caused by the withdrawal of Mr. Fenton from candidacy for re-election. Town Clerk Fenton, withdrew under criticism of the condition of his office. A total of 4,281 votes were case out of approximately 6,500 on the list. Both parties in all districts worked hard during the day which was favored by most ideal weather conditions. The republican vote in the third came as somewhat of a surprise as this democratic stronghold has always given strong majorities for the party, electing a republican only once in the run of Charles A. Gates some years ago for mayor.

Bitter ballot battles were waged for the positions of first selectman and town tax collector. In the former office Albert L. French won over his democratic opponent, William A. Buck, incumbent, by a majority of 221 which was the lowest on the ticket. Gerard E. Loiselle secured a majority of 239 against Alvin V. Nelson. While it was apparent that many republican votes were swayed by the interest in the election of a new town clerk the democrats fought valiantly and arduously to retain the offices of first selectman and tax collector within the party.

HAROLD C. LINCOLN
Town Clerk and Treasurer

The voting began at comparatively slow pace in the morning, the closing of the first hour showing that only 341 votes had been cast in the four districts. This average was slightly increased during the remainder of the voting hours, however, and from 6 a. m. to 5 p. m. the total of 4,281 were cast as against a total of 4,054 in the democratic landslide elections of two years ago. The voting progressed without difficulty. Excellent work was done by workers in all districts, especially in the third and fourth. In the latter district the republicans maintained men and women headquarters' and much credit was due for the latter in getting out an excellent vote. The fourth as well as the first are recognized as normally republican. The third has always been a doubtful ward and the fourth has traditions mentioned the second has traditions mentioned previously. There were 699 votes cast in the first district, 1,471 in the second, 890 in the third, including a strong response from Windham Center and North Windham and 1,111 in the fourth which includes South Windham. The final returns were compiled at the first district headquarters in the town building where Chief Moderator Raymond C. Commins announced the figures and declared the candidates elected. The election results:

"The old time watch-word—'Let the Buyer Beware' has given way to the modern slogan of confidence 'Buy in Safety', and this miracle was wrought by the honesty of manufacture which characterizés every fine American product. A notable example of the modern manufacturers' constant desire to give the public the best is your use of the Ultra Violet Ray in the 'Toasting' of LUCKY STRIKE tobaccos. Anyone can see this as I have seen it on my visit to your LUCKY STRIKE Plant. It's magnificent."

DANIELSON

SEPT. REPORT OF VISITING NURSE VERY GRATIFYING

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 6—The September report of Miss Miriam Boomhower, visiting nurse for the Civic federation, indicates once again the great need and benefit of the work she is doing. There were 15 cases under care carried over from August, five new cases developed during September and five were discharged from care. At the end of September 15 patients were receiving attention. There were 5 paying patient sduring September and 15 free patients. Miss Boomhower made 41 nursing visits, 4 advisory visits and 6 social service visits. The money received from patients amounted to $10.20. Medical patients numbered 14, surgical patients 4, obstetrical patients 1, and tuberculosis patients 6. Relief given included 19 garments, 2 pairs of shoes, apples and vegetables. Contributions of clothing were received from Mrs. Lillibridge and Mrs. Russell, and vegetables and apples from friends of the federation.

During September Miss Boomhower had a much needed respite from her nursing duties, being away on vacation for 19 days.

A large number of citizens had the pleasure, and it was a pleasure, this evening of hearing the concert played by the Killingly high school band on Davis park. The band has showed material advancement in its concert capabilities over what they were a year ago, shortly after it was organized. It so happens that a great many townspeople have become very proud of this band, and an evidence of this was the prompt manner in which the annual town meeting this afternoon promptly made an appropriation to pay its leader during the present school year.

It is a matter of very general local interest that Nathan D. Prince, president of the Hartford-Connecticut Trust company and a Danielson man, has been appointed state chairman of the Near East Foundation, successor to the Near East Relief. He will have charge of the state-wide effort to raise funds.

To all of those who had the pleasure of Mrs. Myers' acquaintance, she was a kindly, sympathetic soul, with a word of encouragement for those who were depressed and a comforting and helpful presence in time of sorrow. She is survived by three sons, William, Charles and Henry, all of Danielson, and by a sister, Mrs. Mary Conwell, of the Riverview section. Others of the 14 children of the family of which Mrs. Myers was a member, her maiden name being Catherine Henry, are resident abroad.

Messrs Williams and Hunter have served two terms in the lower house at Hartford. RECORD VOTE CAST IN "OFF-YEAR" ELECTION IN TOWN OF KILLINGLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 6—What was declared a record vote for an "off year" was cast here in today's annual town election. Of the more than 3,200 voters in the town 2234 came to the polls and cast their ballots. The unusual interest was caused almost exclusively by the five-cornered battle for the three places on the board of selectmen. There was little to wage war over up and down the rest of the ticket, at least no outstanding rivalry between the candidates.

Such surprises as the count of the ballots, lingering along for several hours after the polls closed, disclosed are detailed in another article elsewhere in this issue.

Clear, sparkling fall weather made it possible for many who would not otherwise have come out to get to the polls. The adherents of all the candidates for selectmen worked with unrelaxed diligence from the time the polls opened at 8 o'clock this morning until they closed at 3 this afternoon.

Dozens of automobiles scurried into every nook and corner of the town getting out the voters, the last of these checking through less than a minute before the closing hour arrived.

Frederick E. Bitgood, moderator of today's meeting, presided at the business session that opened immediately after the close of the polls. Frank T. Preston was present in his usual capacity of clerk.

The business meeting was an unperturbed affair, wholly free from debate and concluded in 35 minutes. On motion of Frank J. Gorman the annual report of the selectmen as printed in the town report was tabled until the adjourned annual town meeting in March. Mr. Gorman explained that as distribution of the report in printed form was not made to voters until this morning they had had no time to study it and, therefore, were not in position to intelligently pass upon it.

Attorney E. L. Darbie followed this action by moving to table the reports of other town officials, also until March, and the meeting voted to do so.

Miss Lillian Bailey moved for an appropriation of $450 to meet the expenses of observing next year's Memorial day. Of this sum $250 is to be for Danielson and $100 each for Dayville and East Killingly. The motion was unanimously approved.

For the Armistice day observance here next month, Captain Gordon J. Gale, moved an appropriation of $175, and this, too, was unanimously voted.

Other appropriations were $1200 for the care of trees, the removal of dead or badly damaged trees along highways and the replacement of trees, this upon motion of Henry Gilbert, town tree warden and a favoring explanation of the need of the money for this work by Selectman C. A. Tillinghast; $1,550 for the supervision of music in the public schools of the town and $600 for the leadership of the Killingly high school band, these motions by Supt. W. E. Parker; $115 for books for the school library, that a similar sum may be granted by the state; $800 for the case of the town's poor who may be patients in the Day Kimball hospital, and $2,000 as the town's allotment for state aid road work in conjunction with the state.

The usual formal resolution authorizing the proper town officials to borrow money to meet the current expenses of the town was adopted. As is customary, it was voted to defer fixing the tax rate until the adjourned annual town meeting on the evening of the second Monday of next March.

APPENDICITIS DEATH GAIN BLAMED ON REDUCING FAD

WASHINGTON —(AP)— The weight reducing craze, with resultant improper diets, has been an important factor in increasing fatalities from appendicitis in recent years, says Dr. T. F. Murphy, chief of the division of vital statistics.

Even the change in the mode of dressing among women, particularly the elimination of tight corsets, has failed to offset this Dr. Murphy says.

The rise in the mortality rate among males can be attributed, he says, to the faster living pace and the irregularity of eating and resting practiced by many American business men.

In an effort to use up the great wine reserves of France, which are having a detrimental effect on prices, French wine-growers have petitioned the government to oblige French conscript soldiers to drink twice as much wine with meals as they do now. A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Barnes Tool Co., New Haven.

In the year 1873 the brothers, E. F. and G. A. Barnes began business as manufacturers of labor-saving tools. G. A. Barnes was the inventive genius of the family and it was out of his experiments, assisted by E. P. Barnes that the Barnes' three wheel pipe cutter was developed and patened in the year, 1878.

The Barnes' three wheel pipe cutter was early recognized by the plumbing heating and steamfitting trades as the most efficient pipe cutting hand tool. It still continues to occupy that distinction. The "Barnes" cutter not only cuts faster but can be used in corners and other inaccessible places where other pipe cutters cannot be used Such distinct advantages resulted in a wide distribution of this hand tool, and in a comparatively few years became well and favorably known all over the world.

The firm name E. F. and G. A. Barnes continued until March, 1905, when the company was incorporated in the state of Connecticut as The Barnes Tool company of New Haven. Other hand tools were manufactured and distributed during the years but the genuine Barnes three wheel pipe cutter has been and is today the chief product of the company. The company is unique in that the management has continued in the Barnes family. The presidnt and treasurer at the present time being George F. Barnes the son of E. F. Barnes, who was one of the original members of the firm.

That the value of the Barnes cutter was recognized by other manufacturers as a very desirable product is evidenced by the fact that when the patent rights expired many other manufacturers took up the production of this tool. And today it is manufactured by many tool makers in this country as well as manufactured in foreign countries.

The Barnes three wheel cutter is produced in sizes to cut iron, steel and brass pipe from 1-8 inch to 12 inches in diameter.

The officers of the company are: George F. Barnes, president and treasurer; W. J. McCance, secretary,

PUTNAM APPRPRIATES $92,050 FOR TOWN'S EXPENSES

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Oct. 6.—Appropriations totaling $92,050 were made this morning at the annual town meeting which was held at the municipal building on Church street. The session was attended by a fair sized crowd of voters who approved the recommended appropriations unanimously. Judge M. H. Geissler presided as moderator and H. N. Benoit served as clerk. Attorney Archibald Macdonald, Jr., presented motions in writing that sums of $200 and $300 be appropriated in addition to the recommendations appearing in the call, such sums to be used for the upkeep and revisions of maps and charts pertaining to the town land records and records of the board of assessors. An affirmative vote was taken on the motions.

The largest single appropriation was that of $77,200 made for the use of the town school committee in the operation of the public school system. This year's school fund is the same as that appropriated in 1929. The second largest amount appropriated was the highway fund which is $9,500, recommended by the board of selectmen. Other appropriations made were: $250 for the repairs of bridges; $300 for the observance of Memorial day; $150 for the observance of Armistice day; $750 for the American Red Cross chapter; $1500 for a free bed at the Day Kimball hospital; $100 for the use of the Women's board of the Day Kimball hospital. The item pertaining to the laying of a tax rate was carried over to the adjourned meeting to be held the second Monday in March, 1931; $1500 for the use of the public library board; $200 for the upkeep and timely revision of maps and charts included in the Putnam land records; $300 for the upkeep and timely revision of maps and charts pertaining to the assessors' office.

POSSE SEEKS FORMER PUTNAM MAN IN VERMONT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Oct. 6.—The press today reported that a Springfield, Vermont, sheriff and a posse of deputies on Sunday evening were searching for Alvin S. Martin, 39, former Putnam man and cashier of the Springfield First National bank, who disappeared Sunday afternoon, after notifying bank officials and his wife that there was a shortage in his accounts.

Martin's automobile was found on a rural road just over the town line in Rockingham early Sunday morning. The car, according to the despatch, contained the banker's overcoat, his hat, watch and fountain pen. The report also added that warrants for Martin's arrest were issued at Rutland by United States Commissioner James Leary, on charges of embezzlement and misappropriation.

Martin is a former resident of this city and previous to his departure was a faithful and trusted employe of the First National bank of this city which failed in 1924. Martin graduated from Putnam high school and later entered the service of the banking institution. He became a teller after a few years. His wife is the former Louise Weatherhead, who lived in Putnam.

In 1917, Martin resigned his position at the Putnam bank and went to Boston where he worked for a time in the National Shawmut bank and later in the Federal Reserve bank of that city.

Alarming reports relative to the condition of Fire Chief Ralph E. Thurston were received today from the Truesdell hospital in Fall River, Mass., where Chief Thurston is suffering from a serious illness. According to a despatch received this morning the chief's condition was again rendered critical by the bursting of an abscess which had formed in his stomach. On Saturday Chief Thurston was visited by an intimate friend who said upon his return that the power company executive appeared to be gradually recovering. He said that Chief Thurston recognized him and talked a few minutes, assuring him that he was fighting hard and "feeling better."

The members of the Anslem Mayotte post, No. 13, American Legion will leave Putnam at 8.31 this (Tuesday) morning by special train for Boston where they will take part in the mammoth American Legion convention parade that is to start at 11 o'clock. There will be many other Connecticut Legionnaires aboard the "All Connecticutt Special."

The annual report of the town of Putnam has been printed and distributed among the citizens of the community by Town Clerk Henry N. Benoit The pamphlet contains itemized report of the members of the board of selectmen treasurer, town school committee, public library directors, town auditors and superintendent of schools for the year ending September 1, 1930.

Rev. Joseph Vasey, newly appointed pastor of the First Congregational church preached his first sermon at the church service of worship Sunday morning. Rev. Mr. Vasey arrived in Putnam from Terre Haute Ind., last Wednesday.

A death in North Grosvenordale today was that of Mrs. Age Choiniere who died at her home in that village after a prolonged illness. She was in her 87th year, and was the wife of Theophile Choiniere who died a number of years ago Mrs. Choiniere was born in Canda but had lived in this country for many years

Rev. U. O. Bellerose, pastor of St. Mary's church is in Sherbrooke, Canada, where he is to attend the funeral of Rev. Father Stewart Cain, a former Putnam boy, who died Saturday evening after a brief illness. Rev. Father Cain attended schools in Putnam and was widely known here. He is survived by two sisters his father John Cain, of Mill street, two sisters, Miss Anna Cain of Mill street, and the former Miss Rachael Cain who is now a nun at a cloister in Montreal. Father Cain is also survived by a brother, Oswald Cain, of this city, and a second brother, residing in Farnum, Mass.

Fire Prevention Week was ushered in today with a general alarm received from box 26 at the corner of School and Providence streets, which was for a chimney fire in a tenement house on Powhatton street. The blaze was quickly extinguished with little property damage resulting. Apparatus from the Central and Smith street stations responded. The observance of Fire Prevention Week, according to Acting Fire Chief Alphonse Dumas is one in which every property owner and tenant should co-operate. Chief Dumas has suggested that during the present week the following house spots where the most common causes of unnecessary fires exist should be checked up and attended to. Chimney and flues should be inspected and repaired if necessary, self installed electrical wiring should be gone over by an electrician, rubbish should be removed from cellars, yards an dempty rooms, metal recetacles should be provided for ashes from furnace and open fire places equipped with spark screens. With such precautionary measures installed at this season of the year the city's chances of establishing a record low mark for unnecessary fires, often times proving costly and disastrous, would be excellent.

JEWETT CITY

SOCIAL TIME CALLED OFF WATER WAS SO SCARCE

There has been no rain in this section for a month. Brooks, springs and meadow streams are very low and in many cases are bone dry. At least two farmers, who have prided themselves on never-failing springs, are now getting from them only a few gallons in the morning and evening, after waiting for the small basin to fill. A number of the smaller Stone Hill brooks are showing their sandy beds, as dry as though water never ran there. At one farm-house where a social gathering had been planned, it was found necessary to postpone the meeting because there was not enough water for the family. Several farmers are carrying water in barrels, long distances, from the Quinebaug, for their stock.

Fans Are All Het Up

There are more excited baseball fans in this town right now than ever were registered to date. It is likely that a bus-load of boroughites will go to Philadelphia to see Wednesday's game. It is understood that Connie Mack is due for an awful call down because he saw fit to take Earnshaw out of the game Monday. Some think that Managers Street and Mack may make some changes when they hear from the Jewett City gang, how it should be done, with others seeming to think it will make little difference.

OLD BOOK OF 1856 NARRATES MAIL STORIES

Robert L. Olsen, a native of Jewett City, manager of the Lewis Central house and Hillside inn, in the White mountains at Bethlehem, N. H., has sent to a friend in Jewett City a book published in 1856. Long out of print, its title is Ten Years Among the Mail Bags, by J. Holbrook. Lewis Clausun, who formerly owned the Hillside inn, was postmaster-general in the army of the Potomac, during the Civil war. This book was found by Mr. Olsen, it being part of an old library stored in the hotel.

A volume of 432 pages, it reprints the notes from the diary of a special government agent and is dedicated to those officially connected with the mail service of the United States. Within its pages are to be found accounts of a number of the startling mail robberies which occurred 80 years ago, together with the stories of some of the great frauds put over through the mails.

Fully 20 Jewett City persons visited Bethlehem during the past summer and Mr. Olsen writes that most of them were his guests.

Miss Helen Hull entertains the Newent Ladies' Aid society at her home Friday for an all-day meeting.

An informal reception is to be given by the Baptist Mission society at the home of Mrs. A. M. Brown this (Tuesday) afternoon at 3 o'clock to meet the Nations of the World in America.

Guests at the home of Hugh Davis, Sunday, were Mr. Coleman, of Pawtucket, James Davis and family, Saylesville; Mr. and Mrs. James Forbes, Leominster, Mass.; Robert and Bessie Forbes, Fitchburg, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. James Proctor, New London; Bessie MacKay, Norwich; Mr. and Mrs. John Davis and son Robert, Jewett City; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mell, of Lisbon.

Found Bouquet Of Gentians

Mrs. Horace Dawley picked a fine bouquet of fringed gentians Sunday. Twenty years ago this flower could be found in a dozen local habitats, and was classed as common. Today, it is rarely that one comes upon the most delicate and beautiful of all the local fall flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Tripp and Mrs. R. R. Church were in Middlefield Monday to attend the funeral services of Henry Miller.

THE OLD S-CURVE TO GO—WONDERFUL CONTRAPTION

With the completion of the new overhead bridge at Tadpole, as a part of the new state road, the old S-curve structure will be removed. It is believed that this wonderful traffic trap should be consigned to some museum, certainly not of fine arts order. Since it was built, more than a dozen automobiles have come to grief at that spot, when the drivers failed to negotiate the S-curves which were a part of its two approaches. Several have gone through the fence before reaching the bridge. Two have dropped down 20 feet to the railroad tracks, with a half dozen going through the iron rail and hanging in the balance. Three stolen cars, with drivers who were unfamiliar with the curve, have been recovered by the local police after crashing through the rail. Strangely, in all the smashes, no one, so far, has been killed. Surely, such a wonder of construction should be laid up among the archives, as evidence of its removal.

FIRE PREVENTION

Throughout the country this is being observed as Fire Prevention week. Governor Trumbull has set aside Thursday, October 9, as Fire Prevention day in this state, and in his proclamation he sets forth that the loss of home, loss of employment and loss of life "can in a large measure be prevented by the exercise of ordinary care."

There is no danger that people will be too careful. There is positive evidence that many of them are not careful enough. When one contemplates the tremendous amount of waste that is caused each year by needless fires there should be inspiration enough to lend a hand in the effort to prevent them.

It is unfortunate that the public has not recognized the meaning of the figures when it is shown that fire costs more than 10,000 lives annually, almost $500,000,000 in property damage and millions of dollars more as the result of suspended business operations, delayed reconstruction problems, lost business opportunities, confidence and patronage.

Not all fires are preventable, but records show that 80 per cent of them are. In view of that fact, think what a terrible and actual waste there is in life and property and think what an influence can be wielded in reducing that loss by the exertion of a little care, a little thoughtful consideration when using or disposing of firebrands.

When we stop to realize the burden that fire imposes, the deplorable conditions it creates, and the ease with which care can be taken, it is surprising that there isn't a wholesale effort by the people of this country to place a check upon the nation's fire loss. It isn't during one day, or one week, that more thoughtful attention should be given to the matter, but during the entire year. If care will prevent, fire losses can be avoided with little effort. It means individual effort, however.

HELIUM FOR DIRIGIBLES

In connection with the destruction of the R-101, Rear Admiral Moffett, chief of naval aeronautics, is quick to declare that the disaster has not shaken his faith in the rigid dirigible and that it will not serve to stop work on the still larger airship being built in this country.

This is no more than what should be expected. In connection with the development of flying machines, it has been evident that had a stop been put upon it because of serious crashes we would not have reached the present stage of development. Such disasters are not wanted, but because they happen doesn't mean the closing of the door to further efforts. Though greater advancement seems to have been made with the airplane than the dirigible, the disaster hasn't shaken confidence in its use for aerial transportation purposes.

In connection with the loss of the R-101, Rear Admiral Moffett directs attention to one matter in which it seems possible to contribute to increased safety where dirigibles are involved. That is in connection with the use of helium gas instead of hydrogen. With the former non-explosive while the latter is highly explosive it seems a reasonable contention that there would have been no such loss of life from the crashing of the R-101 had it not been filled with hydrogen.

Admiral Moffett believes that the disaster furnishes a sufficiently strong reason for this country to lift its ban on the exportation of helium gas, of which he claims we have an inexhaustible supply, so that the British and Germans may secure the needed protection through its use. It is a step that would apply to peace times, but a suggestion to which this country should give thoughtful consideration in the interest of aerial safety.

WATCHING CUBA

Though this government is necessarily concerned over the developments in Cuba, it is made clear in the statements by Secretary Stimson that the United States is not going to step in and take control. There is nothing as yet to indicate that there is going to be need for any such move.

President Machado has asked and secured permission from the Cuban congress to suspend the constitutional guarantees, which approaches martial law. With that advantage it is expected that he will be able to control the situation, which has grown to unpleasant proportion because of economic conditions and the encouragement given by action in other Latin-American republics.

Under the Platt amendment, this government has the right to furnish protection for Cuban life and property, but that hinges upon the failure of the Cuban government to provide such protection. Thus far there is no indication that the Cuban government cannot function and meet its responsibilities. We are certainly not going to be rushed into any needless move. The Machado government believes that it can meet the situation and it will certainly be given full encouragement. We have no desire to get into Cuba again unless conditions actually require it. While we are watching Cuba we shall not move unless conditions warrant.

THE PRESIDENT AND LABOR

How labor and industry can work together for their benefit and the benefit of the consumer was shown by President Hoover in his address before the American Federation of Labor in Boston, and he used the unemployment situation for the past several months to illustrate his point. Calling attention to the nation-wide cooperation that was initiated last November, he praised the response that was made by labor in connection with production and the prevention of conflict and dispute, and the efforts of public officials and managers of industry in expanding construction to mitigate unemployment. It was a new method of dealing with such a situation and, even though there were exceptions, the cooperation was excellent. Depressions have occurred from time to time, the president pointed out, during the last century but he was justified in directing attention to the fact that this was the first time bitter industrial conflict did not feature it. That means much.

The fact that fundamental conditions were sound may have had its influence but the general effort to take up the slack in unemployment has certainly played its part. How successful this has been is well disclosed in the department of commerce reports which show that public works and construction work in the past eight months have exceeded that of the same period last year by a half billion dollars. When it is realized that these showed a decrease in all other depressions, the effect of the white house conferences is apparent and gratifying.

Naturally the president appreciates the cooperation given by labor, manufacturers, railways, utilities, business houses and public officials in providing work and maintaining wages. He found them in sympathy with his efforts and the response to his leadership has been noteworthy. While unemployment hasn't been entirely solved, conditions here are much better than elsewhere, though there still remains the great question of stability in employment.

It was a significant statement made by the president when he expressed the belief that America is making more progress toward "security, better living and more hours of leisure than those countries which are seeking to continue old conceptions of the wage and patch up the old system with doles of various kinds which limit the independence of men." The president sees no insurmountable difficulty because of inventions and discoveries, though readjustments will be necessary, and he points to the soft coal industry as an instance where destructive competition ought to be eliminated.

Stressing the importance of a worker's security in his job, the president insisted that the supreme challenge is to establish a system that assures this security, and there is justification for his belief that cooperation shown during the depression has added stability and wholesomeness to our industrial and social structure and furnished a new tool for solving future problems. The president has shown through his efforts that there is an important influence the government can exert during depressions. His effort was an inspiration to others and the country is not unmindful of the good resulting from that inspired cooperation.

MANY GRAVEL ROADS

While efforts are being made for better roads in this state and this country, it is quite evident that Canada is equally convinced of the desirability of such improvement.

Every year hundreds of thousands of people are found using the highways of the province of Quebec. This isn't all due to the fact that it has good roads, but this is one of the important explanations. Travel throughout the province would not be what it is if there were not good roads. Though the season is short in the country to the north the value of good roads in attracting visitors from this country and from other provinces is recognized.

In the past score of years Quebec has spent about $120,000,000 on road work. It has about 2,000 miles of hard surfaced roads, to which it is adding yearly at the expense of about $15,000,000, and it plans to double the mileage in the next few years.

In addition to that the province has 11,500 miles of gravel and macadam roads. This makes it possible for many points to be reached by motor vehicle which would otherwise be left exclusively to the horse-drawn vehicles. The common country roads in Quebec are no more attractive than the country roads which get little attention in this country. The gravel roads are not as attractive as macadam but they invite a large volume of traffic and afford a good surface. They are a decided benefit to those in the outlying regions and they are kept in good condition.

In the province of Quebec comfortable transportation is furnished for long distances by the gravel roads and the mileage of such construction makes it evident that there is an eagerness to provide as much of such improved highway as possible. There is no disposition to have the sections thus served wait until a permanent highway can be built, which in many instances would be never.

Gravel roads such as Quebec provides would be of vast benefit to the sections of Connecticut which are striving to get out of the mud.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6—But few people realize that the great movement now on foot to preserve and foster the wild life of the nation, in the form of animals, birds, fish and game, actually originated with former Senator McLean of Connecticut.

The beginning of such conservation was when Mr. McLean introduced and successfully carried through congress, his so-called migratory bird bill. So the Connecticut senator may well be given the credit of instigating what is now a far reaching and important protective law.

Another New Englander lent a helping hand, and Senator Walcott is taking up the matter with tremendous energy. It was the late John W. Weeks of Massachusetts, who lent his name and his influence to the bill, which bears the name of the McLean-Weeks bill. Mr. Weeks was a member of the house when the bill was first introduced, then he went to the senate and in both worked hand in hand with Mr. McLean. And now the movement has gained national prominence and has developed other similar moves till now there is a widespread demand for federal protection of all wild game, birds, fish and animals. We read that Senator Hawes of Missouri will soon resign from the senate to become president of a privately endowed organization to preserve wild life, and that his salary is said to be $50,000 a year. That shows the importance of the move and the impetus it has gained since Senator McLean was the successful pioneer in the movement.

Congressman Louis Ludlow of Indiana, is probably the first and only man in congress to gain his seat direct from the press gallery, as an active correspondent. And his knowledge how to get spot news has stood him in good stead more than once since. Through his press gallery work for some of the biggest and best western newspapers in the country, "Louis" as everyone calls him—only you must say Louie, and forget there is an "s" there—knew where to find the most influential workers in congress. He knew who could give information and help on about everything that came before congress. So when, as a member of the house from Indiana, he wanted information, or votes to carry through a measure affecting his district, he knew to a dot who would stand with him and who against him, regarding the matter. They tell a story that illustrates this to a tee.

One day during the recent drought, Ludlow got to his office early one morning and found a telegram from the president of the Indiana farm bureau on his desk. They wanted him to use his influence with certain railroads to get a drought reduction in rates, to help bridge over the crisis. And there was where Louie knew the ropes. He had often met the high up officials of those roads, when out for news, he hunted them up and persuaded them to get busy, and help out. They told him of a couple of other railroad presidents who could be of great service: Louie got in touch with them by phone, before the other half of the city was awake. Louie kept right on, running folks down, just as he would have done in hunting down a political rumor, when in the press gallery. He got a list of roads, and their presidents; a list of rates "as is" and what was wanted by the farm folks down in Indiana; he sent out dozens of telegrams; dozens of letters, and talked with dozens of folks over the phone. And before night came, Louie had won out for his district, won out for his farm bureau, and won a big reputation for himself. And it was not only because Louie knows his job as member of congress; not only because everybody in congress likes him, but he won out largely because he knew the newspaper "job" and carried it into effect in helping his state in time of need.

Records show that the primaries were rather hard on old timers who were aspirants, for or members of congress, at recent primaries.

A list was compiled not long ago that showed veteran members to have lost out to a remarkable degree. Among them are Miller of Washington, Crampton of Michigan, one of the leaders of the house; and in congress more than 20 years with a fine record behind him; Thomas Bell of Georgia was another victim, and Bell was serving his 13th term; Dempsey of New York, chairman of the rivers and harbors committee went down in defeat; Brown of New York, a long termer, also failed to win. In the senate, Simmons and Ransdell, two of the most valuable and efficient and beloved democrats, lost out at primaries, and a long list could still be added.

On the other hand Longworth, speaker of the house, Tilson, floor leader, Garner, democratic floor leader and several who have served 30 years pulled through.

The new governor of the federal reserve board, Eugene Meyer, has been appointed to numerous positions of trust by presidents of the United States. Holding a big office is not new to him. Wilson made him director of the war finance corporation; Harding reappointed him; Coolidge reappointed him and now he is to be governor of the federal reserve board. And Mrs. Meyer is also very much in the picture. She is one of the notable hostesses on the administration group; she is a clever politician; she is an artist, a writer, the mother of five children whom she brings up and personally looks after. The Meyers have a beautiful home, which is filled with splendid specimens of Chinese art, of which Mrs. Meyer is particularly fond. In fact it is said Mrs. Meyer is one of the best informed women in the country on Chinese porcelain and painting. She has written several books on the subject, and is always on the lookout for new pieces.

The youngest member of the house is Hartley of New Jersey. Hartley the "baby" member as the youngest is always called, left school when he was 17 years old, to marry. Although he is and looks the youngest member, he has three children of whom he is very proud.

Hartley is proud of his record that, though he has always won by a small margin, he has never been defeated. He works for what he gets; he is a regular republican, except when the administration vetoes some measure that affects the war veterans, then he bolts, if he believes the bill thus vetoed would help the veterans. Hartley was only 26 years old when he ran for congress. "They call me a kid," he said, "but how old was Lindbergh when he flew to Paris?" Hartley, by the way, is fond of flying, although not a pilot in his own right.

SESQUICENTENNIAL OF ANDRE'S DEATH IS MARKED BY NEW LIFE OF ARNOLD

(Conclusion)

(This is the third and last part of a new life of Benedict Arnold published under the auspices of the American Council of Learned Societies in the Dictionary of American Biography. It is here reprinted on the sesquicentennial of the death of Maj. John Andre, whom the Americans shot for his part in Arnold's attempt to betray the patriot cause.)

At the time of his trouble with the Pennsylvania authorities, Arnold began actively to enter into that betrayal of the American cause indelibly associated with his name. There seems no reason to doubt that his treasonable correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton began in May or June of 1779.

His motives seem to have been fourfold: (1) anger at the repeated slights of congress, (2) resentment at the actions of the Pennsylvania authorities which culminated in his court martial, (3) the need for ready money to maintain his position and repay himself for the sacrifices and expenses to which the war had put him and for which he had received no adequate recompense from congress, and (4) a real and sincere indignation at the French alliance, which, as a New England Protestant, and as an inheritor of the traditions of the colonial wars, he could not abide.

Historians have in the past attempted to add the motive of his actually being won over to the British cause by the tories with whom he associated in Philadelphia after becoming commander there. It has, however, been pretty well established that the Shippens of Philadelphia were not all loyalists in the revolution, that Edward Shippen, his father-in-law, was more favorable to the American than to the British cause, and that the stories of Margaret Shippen's flirtation with the British officers during the occupation of Philadelphia had no very serious political aspect at that time. Whether, as Arnold subsequently alleged, he was sincerely converted to the British cause, it is difficult to say (Pennsylvania Magazine, XXIV, 424).

Betrayed Military Secrets

There can be no doubt that he gave military information of the highest importance to the British throughout the summer of 1779 and the following year. He opened with the British headquarters an avenue of communication, the ramifications and extent of which were not dreamed of until the coming of the British Headquarters Papers to America in the winter of 1926.

Information as to troop movements, numbers of forces, dispositions of supplies, the coming and the strength of the French fleet and army, was all sent regularly to Sir Henry Clinton's headquarters. Elaborate ciphers were employed and a perfect network of spies.

It is difficult now to avoid the conclusion (which up to this time few historians have been willing to accept) that Mrs. Arnold certainly handled some of the secret dispatches, and that the same spies who carried the dispatches were also used to carry personal messages to Andre and the other British officers whom she had known in the winter of 1778 in Philadelphia. A document in Clinton's own handwriting, dated Nov. 14, 1792, says "his wife obtained for her services, which was very meritorious, 350 pounds."

By the early summer of 1780, Arnold had obtained from Washington the command of the American post at West Point—the key to the American positions above New York. According to his own words, "I have accepted the command at West Point as a post in which I can render the most essential services" (Arnold to Andre, July 12, 1780).

The price offered by Clinton for Arnold's treason and the surrender of West Point and its garrison was considerable, but not definite. Arnold demanded 20,000 pounds if he succeeded in his treachery and 10,000 pounds if he came without being able to betray the fort.

The Meeting With Andre

A meeting was arranged between Arnold and Major John Andre, the British adjutant-general, who assumed the guise of "Mr. John Anderson." They finally met at a point between the British and American lines on Sept. 21, 1780, and arranged the details of the surrender of West Point.

Meantime the British war vessel, Vulture, which had brought Andre up the river, was compelled to fall several miles further down because it was fired upon by the American artillery. The result was that Andre had to ride many miles overland to rejoin his ship while Arnold returned to West Point.

In direct violation of Sir Henry Clinton's positive orders, Andre had changed his uniform for a disguise and carried compromising papers in his stocking. The trip back was long and circuitous and Sept. 23 found Andre still in the saddle trying to reach the British lines.

He was furnished with a pass from Arnold, with which he got by successive American pickets; but on the morning of the 23d, while still some distance above Dobbs Ferry, on the eastern bank of the Hudson, he was stopped by a party of irregulars. They searched him, found the papers, and suspected his errand.

He was taken to the nearest American outpost, where the commander sent a note to Arnold, notifying him of the capture of "Mr. John Anderson," but sent the papers to General Washington, who was at the time approaching West Point for an inspection.

Arnold realized he had lost, and fled, leaving his wife in hysterics. He galloped to the river, secured a boat and rowed to the Vulture, leaving Andre to his fate. The unfortunate British adjutant-general was court-martialed, found guilty of being a spy, and executed on Oct. 2, 1780.

Is Made a British Brigadier

Upon arriving at New York, Arnold reported to Clinton, and was received into the British army with the rank of brigadier-general of provincial troops. One of his first acts was to write a vindication of his conduct and an appeal to the American army to follow his example. This was published as a broadside.

The British commander sent Arnold off on a marauding expedition into Virginia in December of 1780, which he conducted with skill and ruthlessness. Gov. Jefferson of Virginia offered a reward of 5,000 guineas to any one who would capture Arnold, and several private efforts were made by American officers to kidnap him during the remainder of his stay in America.

He returned to New York in June of 1781. In September, Clinton tried desperately to create a diversion which would keep the French and Americans away from their projected attack on Cornwallis. He sent Arnold on another marauding expedition to New London in Connecticut.

Here Arnold blackened his name still further by attacking his old neighbors, and although he is probably not to blame for the massacre of the American defenders at Fort Griswold, he may fairly be charged with responsibility for the burning of New London, which was an unforeseen result of his intentional setting fire to the public buildings there. In the next month, Cornwallis surrendered at Yorktown, and Great Britain's chances of subduing her former colonies were over.

Unpopular in England

Mrs. Arnold had gone from West Point to her father in Philadelphia, but she was ordered out by the authorities and joined her husband in New York. In December of 1781 Arnold sailed with his family for England.

Upon the arrival there he was consulted upon the conduct of the war and drew up a very able memorandum for the continuance of the conflict. But it was too late. The party of North and Germain, under which he had been induced to desert, went out of power, and Arnold found himself exceedingly unpopular in England.

The scorn in which he was held led to some slurring remarks about him by Lord Launderdale in the house of lords, and Arnold challenged the offender to a duel. They met in July of 1792, but neither was injured. Launderdale said something which Arnold took as an apology, and the affair was closed (Pennsylvania Magazine, XXV, 189).

Of the rest of his life we are well informed by the pathetic letter of his wife. Failing to procure active military service under the new regime, he attempted a number of commercial speculations, which proved in the main unfortunate. He was often absent from England, coming to Canada and to the West Indies as his business dictated. On one occasion he may have visited Detroit (Diaries of Washington, IV, 136).

He made desperate efforts to secure further reward from the British for his past services, in which Sir Henry Clinton seconded his demands. Pitt certainly took the matter under consideration, but little was done.

The total sum Arnold received from Clinton for the actual treason was 6,315 pounds. This he felt was not adequate.

In "Desperate Straits"

There exist letters from Mrs. Arnold to Clinton in which she explains their desperate straits and begs his intercession. She was loyal to her husband, if not to her country, and endured his disgrace with all the troubles which it brought.

She and Arnold had four sons and one daughter. All of Arnold's sons served with distinction in the British military and civil services.

In 1797 he was granted 13,400 acres of land in Canada, but these appear to have profited him very little. As the Napoleonic wars grew more serious, he tried again in 1798 to get active in the British army—but without success. The remainder of his life was unhappy and tragic. He died in London of "dropsy and a disease of the lungs."

Arnold's death took place June 14, 1801.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6—What with Franklin, Theodore, Jr., and Nicholas—particularly Franklin and Nicholas—figuring in the news these days, these Roosevelt cousins seem destined to keep the family name politically alive for a long time.

The fact that the democratic Roosevelt, Franklin, appears to be the one with at least a chance to walk in the footprints of the illustrious founder of the family political tradition only lends spice to the story. For Theodore the first was the most notable republican of his day.

Already Franklin, the democrat, has achieved two of the steps taken by his republican predecessor in reaching the white house. He has been assistant secretary of the navy and is governor of New York. And he is one of the most discussed men for the democratic presidential nomination two years from now.

It's an odd democratic parallel to date of the republican Roosevelt saga.

At Last Minute.

For the moment Theodore the second is not in the political picture, but Cousin Nicholas is—very much so. Washington derived considerable cynical amusement out of his eleventh hour decision not to go vice-governing in the Philippines after all, but become minister to Hungary instead.

As a writer of editorials and books on the Philippines and a student of far eastern affairs there was some logical background for his assignment to the insular post.

The switch of diplomacy is another matter of which considerable may be said in the senate when it comes time to consider confirmation of Minister Roosevelt this winter.

Asked For Shift.

When the senate deferred action on Roosevelt's original appointment to the Philippines because of protests from the islanders over those Roosevelt writings, everybody expected Hoover to counter with a recess appointment, as he did.

That is what the white house often does under such circumstances. It is a sort of gesture of defiance for which more than one president has shown a fondness.

Announcement of this development left responsibility for it on Roosevelt himself. He had asked for the shift. Yet Washingtonians who have known three other Roosevelts rather intimately had their doubts. They never before have noted a Roosevelt who did not get a lot of joy out of battle, particularly political battle.

And they wondered whether Cousin Nicholas, having the family political complex, had not been a bit hard to persuade when it came to relinquishing the prospect of uproarious controversy that lay before him had he sailed for Manila.

He has no similar excitement awaiting him in Hungary.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Cannon And Prohibition.

Mr. Editor: After reading a leading article that appeared on the front page of The Bulletin Tuesday, Sept. 30, I can say I am dumbfounded at the report that was given to the reporters of the New York papers by Bishop James Cannon, Jr. His remarks, if he has been quoted correctly, stamps him as just another Burchard. It is to his everlasting shame and discredit if his remarks were really made. As I read between the lines he is trying to throw up a smoke screen to hide his shortcomings in another direction. I personally take exception to his statement that people who are opposite to him are alligned with the liquor interests, and I can say it is an untruth. Does such a man realize or does he ever give a thought that every church spire points upward to God's Kingdom? I do not care what creed it is, nor what church it is, if we will only listen to the teachings of those who are invested with holy orders none of us will ever go far from the path. For a man who, perhaps, is an educated man to use his talents to caluminate those who are trying to live up to the Teacher, who has said these are all My children, after noting his shallow pretences, I assume his education rather than being of a superior order is just a thin veneer, and only covers an inferior material. And he is supposed to be a leader among men.

I also note he says he admires Dwight W. Morrow for his honest stand regarding the repeal of the 18th amendment. I am fully in accord with that. If the 18th amendment had never been placed on the statute books of this country that would have been too soon. Many who pose, and I use that word without reservation, are hollering "wolf," and trying to throw dust into the eyes of us poor, unsophisticated mortals. But happily today we have the greatest medium for spreading the gospel of common sense, and they, the "newspapers," keep us all informed of the doings that are going on in the world and fortunately they hand us both sides of the question, not simply from a source that is biased in its judgment. If, however, the bishop is not prejudiced, then I will be willing to admit I am wrong.

Unfortunately we are not getting anywhere on the question of prohibition. We have had now ten years or more of noble experimentation, and during that time the evils of alcoholism have not disappeared. There has come up from the other side, the creation of a newly rich class of gunmen, who are the big men in the political field, with the consequent corruption of the very ones who are sworn to uphold the law. Today the young people take a drink in a spirit of bravado, for it has become a sporting proposition. Liquor is kept in homes where it was never known before. This cannot be denied, for such is the case, and if the drys cannot see it, it can be said for them that none is so blind as he who will not see. I am not an alarmist, neither do I think this 18th amendment is a solution of the temperance question, for every man ought to be permitted to the free exercise of his own judgment, and surely a law that was foisted on to a people over night must engender friction. It is an apt quotation that you can lead a horse down to a brook but you can't make him drink. By the same line of reasoning if a man wants a drink he is going to get it. As long as there is a demand, just so long will there be a supply, and if he become hoist by his own petard that is his own look out.

YOUR HEALTH

Prevent Fall And Winter Colds

By Burton Haseltine, M. D., Chicago.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

With the approach of cooler weather, foresighted people appreciate the importance of knowing how to prevent and cure those distressingly common conditions variously known as "head colds," "acute catarrhs," or "sinus infections."

The word "sinus" has in recent years come into general use among non-medical people with no very accurate understanding of its meaning. The nasal sinuses are cavities that normally exist in the bones of the head, containing only air when in a healthy state and connecting by small openings with the nasal passages. They are lined with mucous membrane continuous with that of the inside of the nose and therefor any inflammation or infection within the nose can easily extend into any or all of these cavities.

When this condition occurs, it is called a sinusitis. This may vary from a slight temporary inflammation to a most destructive and even fatal disease. In practically all cases sinus infection is in the beginning a "head cold" and it is the lack of proper treatment of "colds" that results in the acute or chronic sinusitis.

Precaution against acquiring such colds consists in maintaining the best possible state of general health, with regular daily exercise, if possible in the open air, well ventilated and moderately heated rooms, both for working and sleeping, and avoidance of indoor crowds. It is probable that there is a mild element of contagion in acute head infections, but in the open air and in perfectly ventilated rooms this danger is slight.

The first thing about medication for "colds" which the general public needs to learn is that cure-alls in most instances are useless and many of them are harmful. No medication should be employed unless by the doctor's advice. Do not doctor your own colds or allow your neighbors to do so. Sprays, washes and nasal douches are dangerous unless applied by the physicians hands.

Methods of treating colds have changed in the past few years. Many of the sprays and applications commonly used a few years ago have been discarded as being of little value compared with new methods now available. A better understanding of the nature of these infections and the development of a refined technique for treating them makes it now possible to check them in the early stages, and it is only the cases that fail to have proper treatment promptly that become chronic or develop serious complications.

GEORGE WATKINSON DIES AT HOME IN NEW JERSEY

COLCHESTER, Oct. 6—Word was received Saturday of the death of George Watkinson, on Friday, at his home in Bernardsville, N. J. Mr. Watkinson, who had been for years the selling agent of the Candee Rubber company in New Haven, came to Colchester in 1888. He organized the Colchester Rubber company which purchased the property of the old Hayward Rubber company from the receiver and conducted a thriving business here until the company was absorbed by the United States Rubber company. Later he was engaged in a similar line of manufacturing in Philadelphia and in Trenton, N. J. He then devoted his energies to the development of the use of MRX, a product used with crude rubber in the manufacture of rubber goods. He made several trips abroad, visiting the larger rubber users in England, France, Germany and Russia.

He is survived by two children, Mrs. Frank Fargo of Evanston, Ill., and Irving Watkinson, of Norwich, also by several grandchildren and great-grandchildren. During his residence in Colchester Mr. Watkinson was keenly interested in keeping the grounds around the factory neat and attractive and the older residents remember with pride the grounds around the railroad station beautified with shrubs and flowers which he set out and cared for. He was buried in Evergreen cemetery, in New Haven, on Monday.

TOWN MEETING VOTES ABOUT $35,000 MORE THAN LAST YEAR APPROPRIATIONS

Voting all items in the regular and so-called "extra" list the annual town meeting Monday evening in the town hall authorized approximately $35,000 more in appropriations this year than last year. Based on the present grand list of the town, this amounts to a trifle more than a half mill increase in the tax rate, which last year was 13 1-4 mills. However, the town tax cannot be laid until after the next grand list is perfected which will be the last of next February, and because of this fact, the town meeting, after acting on the various appropriations, adjourned until the first Monday night of next March. The town tax will be laid at that time.

Town Officials' Salaries

Selectman William S. Murray called the meeting to order at 8 o'clock and Town Clerk Harold S. Burt read the warning. The meeting accepted the annual report of the board of selectmen and their recommendations, the reports of the town treasurer, the sinking fund committee, the town health officer, the town school committee and the trustees of the Otis library which were distributed in printed form. A resolution was then adopted, fixing the salaries of the town officials as follows:

First selectman, $3,000; second and third selectmen, $200 each; clerical assistance of selectmen, $1,200; town clerk, $200; town treasurer, $1,000; assessors, $1,800 each; clerical assistance for assessors, $1,500; secretary of the school board, $400; collector of taxes, three quarters of one per cent of the tax collected.

Regular Appropriations

The estimated expenses of the town, as submitted by the selectmen, were then taken up, item by item, and passed without change, with the exception of the item for election expenses which was increased by the meeting from $5,000 to $6,000. Tyler D. Guy, registrar of voters, explained that two years ago the election expense item was $6,000. This year the item called for $5,000. This is a similar election year as was the case two years ago and the expense this year calls for $6,000. Mr. Guy moved that the item be increased $1,000 to $6,000 and the increase was voted. The regular appropriations were voted as follows:

Riverside home, $10,500; outside poor, $17,000; insane, $12,000; neglected and dependent children, $5,000; widow's pension, $7,500; highways (town of Norwich), $35,000; highways (city of Norwich), $23,000; macadam repairs, $8,000; oiling roads, $5,000; bridges, $5,000; contingent, $15,000; interest, $16,000; national guard, $6,000; election expenses, $6,000; registry of vital statistics, $1,800; town clerk's office, $1,000; state aid roads, $2,000; town property tax, $10,000; sinking fund, $25,000; tuberculosis, $2,000; probate court, re-appropriation, $6,000; street lighting, $9,200; state tax, $24,000; county tax, $15,500; assessors' office, $8,000; Chelsea Parade, $900; town health office, $1,200; Taftville fire engine company, $800; Yantic fire engine company, $800. Total, $272,200.

$342,083.42 For Schools

The meeting then voted an appropriation of $342,083.42 for the maintenance of the town schools during the coming year.

By a resolution introduced by Charles W. Cassidy and adopted, the selectmen are authorized to borrow a sum, not to exceed $400,000, at such times and in such amounts, during the ensuing 12 months as they shall deem proper, in anticipation of the town tax collections.

John B. Stanton introduced a resolution authorizing the selectmen to borow a sum not to exceed $20,000 as they shall deem proper to pay the town's share of the county tax.

Rev. Alexander H. Abbott introduced a resolution authorizing an appropriation of $6,500 for the current expenses of the Otis library.

At this point D. T. Shea asked what the tax rate would be if all the items in the list were voted. He said he would like to see the meeting adjourn without any increase in the tax rate over last year.

Selectman Murray informed him that approximately $16,000 more had been voted by the meeting than the same items called for last year, this amounting to approximately a third of a mill more.

"Will that mean over 13 mills?" asked Mr. Shea.

"Last year the tax was 13 1-4 mills," said Selectman Murray. "You have already increased it a quarter of a mill," he added.

"I think 13 1-4 mills is high enough for this town," said Mr. Shea.

Rev. Mr. Abbott inquired whether Mr. Shea was aiming at the Otis library appropriation.

"Not particularly," said Mr. Shea. "However, I would like to see them pare it down," he added.

For Otis Library

"We all feel the same way," said Rev. Mr. Abbott. He went on to explain that the current expenses of the library are over $10,000. The $6,500 voted by the town does not equal the current expenses, he said. The library, out of its own funds, makes up the difference. The library also votes $4,000 out of its funds for books. Rev. Mr. Abbott said that the library has 9,465 patrons in Norwich and they took out last year, 142,000 volumes.

"These are hard times," Rev. Mr. Abbott said. "One of the aids in getting through hard times is a book," he continued. "We ask you to continue the same appropriation you made last year," the speaker concluded.

Mr. Gilman called attention to the fact that $1,500 of the running expenses of the Otis library last year was paid out of the principal.

Mr. Shea said he had no idea of opposing the item. He welcomed the explanation given and said he hoped similar explanations would be given on the remaining items in the list.

The appropriation of $6,500 was then voted.

A resolution was introduced by H. M. Lerou authorizing an appropriation of $1,500 to be used for the care and maintenance of the trees on the highways of the town and was adopted.

The next item on the list was an appropriation of $1,000 to defray the expenses of pupils residing in the town who desire to attend the Putnam or Willimantic trade schools. Selectman Murray explained that the state statutes provide that cities and towns shall pay a reasonable amount towards the traveling expenses of pupils who wish to attend trade schools and that this figure had been set at $50 per pupil. There are about 25 pupils living in Norwich and now attending trade schools. The appropriation was voted.

For Taftville Electric Lights

The meeting then voted, by a resolution, introduced by George N. Beardow, to assume the expense of the care and maintenance of 39 electric light on the highways in and near the Taftville section of the town.

Mr. Shea asked for some explanation of the resolution. Mr. Murray explained that the 39 lights and about 30 other lights had been installed and cared for by the Ponemah Co. Sometime ago, Mr. Ricketson, the agent of the company, went to his office, Mr. Murray said, to see if it wasn't possible for the town to take over these lights. He told him that he could do nothing unless authorized by a city meeting. "I don't know what the attitude of the Ponemah Co., will be if this resolution is not granted," said Mr. Murray. "I don't know whether they will turn off the lights or not," he continued.

H. M. Lerou inquired as to the cost of maintaining the lights.

Mr. Murray said it would be $25.65 per light, 100 c. p. lamp, the same as the town pays the gas and electric department of the city and the Connecticut Light and Power Co. The approximate cost will be $1,000 a year.

Mr. Shea inquired if the Ponemah Co., would furnish the current and Mr. Murray informed him that the company would furnish the current. The resolution was unanimously adopted.

Other resolutions were adopted as follows:

Other Appropriations

Appropriating $1,000 to be used in maintaining a treatment station for the care of venereal diseases. Resolution introduced by H. A. Tirrell.

Appropriating $92,500 for the purpose of relieving the parents or guardians of children who attend the Norwich Free Academy, and who reside in the town of Norwich, for the payment of the customary tuition for the current school year. Resolution introduced by Guy B. Dolbeare.

Appropriating $10,500 for the purpose of providing medical inspection and health work for the school children of the town. Resolution introduced by Edmund Hindle.

No action was taken on a petition for a light at the corner of Edward avenue and Sylvia street, as no one introduced a resolution.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the installation of two additional hydrants on Town street.

The meeting adopted a resolution, introduced by J. P. Huntington, authorizing a hydrant at Harland road and Sachem Plain road.

Another resolution adopted accepts a deed of the private way, known as Sholes avenue, from West Town street to Sturtevant street, the town to maintain the road as a public highway hereafter. Mr. Murray explained that Mr. Sholes has built a 50-foot bridge across the brook there and said the road is hard graveled.

As there was some confusion on the part of the petitioners, over the proper method of securing the acceptance of Perry avenue as a public highway, action was indefinitely postponed, on motion of H. M. Lerou.

Resolutions Adopted

Resolutions were adopted as follows:

Accepting Germania avenue, in Taftville, as a public highway; approving the action of the board of selectmen in removing the town signpost from its old location at Market and Main streets to a location on the east side of Laurel Hill bridge; authorizing the town officials to take the proper steps to secure from the Thames Bank and Trust Co., a certificate to replace a lost certificate owned by the town and representing 23 shares of the stock of the Thames National bank.

Town Counsel H. H. Pettis, who introduced the last resolution, explained that the certificate in question had been held by the West Town street school district and disappeared when that school district was in existence (before the town schools were consolidated). When the local bank merger took place the old certificates were called in so that new certificates could be issued by the new bank, the Thames Bank and Trust Co. The purpose of the resolution is to secure a new certificate to replace the one lost.

As the town tax cannot be laid until the next grand list is perfected, the meeting adjourned shortly before 9:30 o'clock, until the first Monday in March, next year, at 8 p. m.

KILLINGLY REPUBLICANS SWEEP TOWN ELECTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 6.—Killingly republicans elected all of their candidates by comfortable margins in today's annual town election. The outstanding features of the election were the heavy votes polled by Chas. A. Tillinghast, r, re-elected first selectman and running well ahead of his ticket with a total of 1,232 votes, and the independent run made by A. D. Every vote that Mr. Sayles received was from electors willing to go to the trouble to write his name into the blank column. PUTMAN DEMOCRATS GAIN CONTROL OF TOWN BUSINESS IN ELECTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 6.—By scoring a plurality of 258 straight ticket votes, the democrats of the town gained a sweeping victory over the republicans at the polls today. The highlight of the election was the clinching of a majority representation on the board of selectmen by the democrats.

This they did by decisively beating William P. Warren, incumbent and republican candidate, who will be succeeded by Francis X. Vadnais, democrat, who received a total of 1,120 votes. Clarence E. Pierce, veteran selectman, was the only republican candidate to survive the democratic landslide. Mr. Pierce received 875 votes as compared to the 1,097 total of Edward F. Girard, democratic minority member of the board, who is expected to be elected first selectman at the next organization meeting. J. Alfred Bonneville, democratic tax collector, overwhelmingly defeated his republican opponent, Lewis T. Champlin, by a plurality of 307 votes. Mrs. Elvira A. Barber, republican member of the school board for many years, was defeated today for re-election by John M. Hogan, youthful democratic candidate, who played his first hand in local politics. Mrs. Dorothy Jones Bartlett, democratic member of the board, was returned to office by a large vote. Eric H. Johnson was the only republican candidate elected to the school board.

HOME RUN IN NINTH BY FOXX BREAKS UP TIGHT GAME AND GIVES ATHLETICS EDGE IN SERIES

Grimes and Earnshaw Engage in Tight Pitching Duel For Eight Innings Until Earnshaw Is Removed For Pinch-Hitter—Grove Holds Cards——Climax Comes When Grimes Passes Cochrane and Foxx Smashes One Into Stands—Cards Not Downhearted Over Loss of Game

(By Alan Gould, Associated Press Sports Editor)

SPORTSMAN-PARK, St. Louis, Oct. 6—(AP)—Acting on the well known theory that no strategy is more effective than a good old-fashioned wallop into the stands, burly Jimmy Foxx drove out a home run in the ninth inning today to give the world's champion Athletics a senesational 2-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals and the lead once more in theb attle for baseball's biggest cash prizze honors.

Foxx's Drive Broke Up Game

Foxx's terrific drive, with one out and Mickey Cockrane on first, broke up a remarkable pitchers' duel between the veteran Burleigh Grimes, Cardinal Spitball star, and the twin aces of the A's—George Eearnshaw and Robert Moses Grove.

Earnshaw Holds Cards to Two Hits

Earnshaw, after holding the Cardinals to two hits in seven innings, was relieved for a pinch hitter, and Lefty Grove, back in the box for the second straight day, received credit for the triumph, his second of the series by checking the Red Birds in the last two innings.

All told, the Cardinals made only three safe hits off the two fireball flingers, and the A's collected only five off the moist offerings of Grimes.

A triple by Foxx started the heavy firing that beat Grimes in the opening game and the big first sacker was again on the job to apply the well known knockout wallop today.

A Dramatic Finish

It was a dramatic finish to a thrilling game. Grimes had stopped the Athletics in the eighth after they filled the bases with only one out. Snarling, taunting, the old war horse was still yelling and pitching defiance as he forced Al Simmons to pop up after walking Cochrane at the start of the ninth. Big Burleigh took a moment to hitch up his pants and address some derisive comment in the direction of the A's bench and to the patriarchal Connie Mack in particular before turning to face Foxx. Big Jimmy had hit safely in a previous trip to the plate, getting one of the two safe hits off Grimes in the first seven innings, but the Cardinals' pitcher seemed supremely confident he was past his worst trouble—Simmons.

Foxx Foked the First Pitch

Disdaining to use his spitter, Grimes loosed a high, fast one. It was the first ball and Foxx was ready for it.

The silence of a funeral suddenly enveloped the stands, holding another tremendous crowd of 39,944 fans, a few short of yesterday's record outpouring.

Cochrane and Foxx trotted around the bases after the stroke that administered the "kiss of death" to Grimes and dealt a smashing blow to the Cardinal hopes of triumph.

The Mack Twins Disappoint the St. Louis Fans

Having watched their favorites romp through two straight to square the series count, after they had lost the first two games in Philadelphia, Cardinal rooters were wildly confident of a continued rush towards the world's championship. They had hoped to see the home team turn the tables on Big George Earnshaw just as had been done at the expense of Grove the day before. But the combination of the twin Mack aces and the big bat of Jimmy Foxx was too much.

All Forces Off for Phillie

The warring forces left tonight for Philadelphia with the Athletics holding a lead of three games to two and needing just one more victory to clinch their second successive world's championship. They have two chances now to do it, either in the sixth game, scheduled Wednesday at Shibe park, or in a seventh, if necessary, on Thursday in the same place.

Up to the ninth, today's battle was easily the closest, hardest fought and most exciting of the series

Looked Like Rain

Everyone in the big park, disregarding the occasional sprinkle of rain drops and the heavily overcast skies that forced a thick haze over the field, sat tensely through the first eight innings of scoreless fighting.

Not Much Choice for Seven Innings

For seven innings, there was very little to choose between Earnshaw and Grimes. Each had great control, each bore down with all the speed and craft he could muster. The big star of the A's making his second start, was even better than before. He had a baffling fast one to match the deception of Grimes' occasional spitters.

Through these first seven frames, each allowed only two safe hits. Cochran singled off Grimes in the first and Foxx in the fifth, and Frisch touched Earnshaw for a single in the first and Wilson for a double in the seventh.

Grimes There in the Pinches

Not a Mackman got to second base in the first seven innings, so effective was Grimes in the pinches. Not a Cardinal got beyond the middle station and only two, Gelbert in the third and Wilson in the seventh, advanced that far.

The Cards got a "break" in the third when Jimmy Dykes made a mistake trying to outrun Charley Gelbert in a chase back to second base. Gelbert had walked and been sacrificed by Grimes. Douthit bounded to Dykes and Gelbert was trapped off the base but the A's third sacker, instead of making a throw to the waiting Bishop, tried to run down his man. They slid into the bag together, Gelbert was safe and Dykes had his name linked with that of Heinie Zimmerman, the old Giant infielder who made himself famous chasing Eddie Collins across the plate in the 1917 series.

There were then two Cardinals on the sacks and only one out but Adams popped to Boley and Frisch grounded out to Foxx as Earnshaw escaped from a dangerous spot.

Cards Threaten in the Seventh

They did not threaten again until the seventh, when Jimmy Wilson doubled, with two out and Gelbert was purposely passed. Grimes, after a taunting exchange with Connie Mack, who tapped his head in reply, drove a long fly to Haas in right center to end the inning.

Frisch Singled—Bottomley Struck Out

Grove yielded a single by Frisch in the eighth but two were out and Bottomley, in the pinch, struck out for the third straight time in the game and the eighth time in five games. This equalled the performance of Rogers Hornsby in the 1929 series, but still short of the all-time record of ten strikeouts, by George Kelly of the Giants, in eight games in 1921.

Gelbert Struck Out—Ends Game

In the ninth, Ray Blades, batting for Watkins, walked with one out and advanced to second on Wilson's grounder to Grove but Charley Gelbert, a hero yesterday at bat, took a third strike with his bat on his shoulder, ending the game.

For the first time in the series Simmons went hitless, in four turns at bat, and Foxx's home run was the only full-fledged drive off Grimes in the entire game.

Bad "Break" for Grimes

A bad "break" for Grimes almost cost him the game in the eighth, when an error by Frisch helped the A's to fill the bases. With one out, Haas bunted down the third base line and easily beat Grimes' throw to first for a hit. He set sail for second and appeared cut down on Wilson's fine throw but Frisch dropped the ball and Umpire Geisel reversed his decision, calling the runner safe. Boley's bunt caromed off Grimes' glove and went for another hit. Jim Moore, the Texas recruit, batted for Earnshaw and walked, filling the bases. Grimes called on all his cunning as he forced Bishop to ground to Bottomley, who made the force play at the plate, and then retired the side on Bole's roller to Gelbert, who threw to Frisch for the third out as the big crowd roared.

Grimes Fans Seven—Earnshaw Five—Grove Two

Grimes fanned seven Mackmen, as compared with five strikeouts for Earnshaw and two for Grove. He had fooled Foxx in the seventh with a third strike and perhaps was overconfident when he took on the big youngster in the ninth. The score:

Series Notes

SPORTSMAN'S PARK, St. Louis, Oct. 6—(AP)—Burleigh Grimes, in his battle with the heavy hitters of the A's today, "dusted off" Al Simmons no less than three times in the fourth inning. Twice Al fell flat to avoid being hit and one of the pitches bounced foul off his bat for an accidental strike.

Throughout the game, Grimes engaged in a running exchange of taunts with the A's and became embroiled even with Connie Mack in one verbal tilt from the plate in the seventh inning.

The Cardinals pitcher's father came from his home in Clear Lake, Wis., in the hope of seeing big Burleigh turn the tables on the Athletics. For the second time, Grimes yielded only five hits but lost.

The pitching throughout the series has been by far the greatest in years. There have been no sustained batting rallies and in no inning of the five games has either team scored more than two runs.

The 2-0 shutout today, second of the series, represented the lowest scoring contest since Art Nehf of the Giants beat Sam Jones of the Yankees 1-0 in the third game of the 1923 series, Casey Stengel's home run accounting for the only score.

Everyone on the A's bench except Connie Mack leaped up and did a war dance in the ninth when Foxx hit for the circuit. Caps, jackets and gloves were tossed in the air and Jimmy was mauled by his team-mates when he came back to the bench behind Cochrane.

Foxx hit homers in each of the first two games of the 1929 series against the Cubs, at Wrigley Field, Chicago, but today's was his first in five games this year. It was the fourth circuit clout of the series by the A's, Cochrane having collected two and Simmons one at Shibe Park. The only other extra-base hit made off the brilliant Cardinal pitching in the three games here was a double by Simmons.

In the three St. Louis battles, the Cardinals produced only 13 hits and the Athletics 16 as proof of the exceptional pitching on both sides.

CUBS RALLY IN NINTH TO WIN CITY TITLE

CHICAGO, Oct. 6—(AP)—A bristling ninth inning finish that capped a wild afternoon of baseball today gave the Cubs a 6 to 4 victory over the White Sox and left the Chicago city championship in possession of the National league.

What started out to be a pitching battle between Sheriff Fred Blake of the Cubs and young Pat Caraway of the Sox became a cat and dog fight in the last six innings. The Cubs had a two run lead in the fifth, only to have the Sox tie it up in their half of the same inning. The Sox went in front in the sixth, but the Cubs jumped over a run in the eighth to knot it again. Donie Bush's men came right back for another in their half of the eighth and the American league again was in front.

In the ninth, however, the Cubs cut loose with a drive that could not be denied, scoring three. Dan Taylor batted for Blair and was forced by English. Kiki Cuyler caught Willie Kamm flat footed with a bunt down the third base line and both runners were safe. Hack Wilson, who already had driven a home run into the left field stands, cracked a single into left field, scoring English and Cuyler counted on Hartnett's sacrifice fly. Clancy's error on Grimm's drive let Wilson in with the final run.

Blake sailed along in great shape until the eighth, when three singles and English's second error let in a run. Petty went in and stopped the drive, and staved off another Sox bid in the ninth, which started when Lester Bell threw the ball over Grimm's head on Cissell's hit to third.

Caraway was wobbly at the start, but managed to keep out of serious trouble until the fourth, when two walks and two singles produced a Cub run. Wilson's home run smash in the fifth started him on his way and a base on balls to Stephenson finished him. Braxton replaced Caraway and was the victim of the rest of the Cub assault. Tommy Thomas finally had to go out in the ninth and finish the job, but was too late to do anything about the three Cubs runs.

The triumph gave the Cubs four victories in six games and gave them the city title for the sixth time in eighteen bids for the crown. In the last series, played in 1928, the Cubs defeated the Sox by the same margin. The crowd today saw more excitement than in the previous battles, and numbered 16,729 paid, with $18,454.50 going into the till.

Greeneville Wins

Greeneville school defeated Broadway school in a football game by a score of 18 to 6 at the Mohegan park Monday.

The touchdowns were made by Quinley and Malogrides. Barry at tackle played a brilliant game. The Greeneville lineup was:

CARDINALS ARE DEFIANT VOWING THAT THEY WILL TAKE TWO GAMES AT PHILLY

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—(AP)—It was a snarling, defiant flock of Cardinals that hurriedly packed their luggage today after dropping a heart-breaking 2 to 0 game to the Athletics in the fifth battle of the world's series.

They were one down to the White Elephants, but they were not down in spirit. Gabby Street, their manager, declared they would certainly win two games in Philadelphia. There was no solemn, depressed air of a burial in the Cardinal dressing room. To hear them shout, one would gather that they won instead of lost today.

"It was a well pitched ball game that anyone could have busted up," Street said, "and Grimes nor anybody else is excited about losing it. We're going to Philadelphia heads up and determined to win the next two games."

The old Sarge said he would start "Wild Bill" Hallahan, the pug-nosed Irish kid who blanked the A's Saturday, and expected that Connie Mack would counter with Robert Moses Grove.

"He'll have to pitch Grove because we can beat anyone else he's got. And we'll beat him, too.

"It was lucky that Foxx had to hit a high, fast curve ball. We had no idea of passing him. He was just lucky, that's all. The team that got the breaks got all the luck that went with it."

Frankie Frisch, captain of the Cards, said he did not drop the ball in the eighth inning after tagging Haas at second base.

"Umpire Geisel," Frisch bellowed, "must have been blind. I hung right on to the ball, but he made his ruling and couldn't change it despite the fact that he was wrong. We still feel that we should have won today's game and we're going to knock hell right out of 'em when we get back in Philadelphia."

Foxx Keeps His Word

Jimmy Foxx, the hero of the game, told his mates he'd win it with a home run, and he did it.

Before grabbing his bat in the dramatic ninth inning, Foxx yelled back to the players on the bench:

"I'll bust up this ball game right now."

He stepped to the plate, caught one of Grimes' high ones and derricked it into left center field bleachers.

"My heart beat faster at that moment than it has all year," said Connie Mack. "I knew from the sound of the crack that it was a homer. I tried my best to keep calm, but inside I was burning up.

"Outside of that one hit there was nothing except the pitching, which was about as brilliant as I ever saw in the world series. Earnshaw was even better than he was in the second game. He was faster and had better control. As for Grimes, he was every bit as good until Jimmy Foxx swung his big bat in the ninth.

"Grimes showed excellent head work in the eighth, when he decided to let Jimmy Moore, our pinch hitter, either hit at a bad ball or walk. He evidently thought Moore was more likely to score the runner from third with a long sacrifice fly than either Bishop or Dykes, who followed.

"The series has demonstrated that two very evenly matched teams are the contenders. We've had a tough time winning three games and there is one and possibly two equally tough contests ahead."

EASTERN FOOTBALL TEAMS GET DOWN TO WORK

NEW YORK, Oct. 6—(AP)—Monday usually is an off day in most college football camps but there was no rest for the Yale Bulldogs nor the plaid warriors of Carnegie Tech today.

Yale buckled down to work with a will in preparation for the important intersectional clash with Georgia in the Yale bowl on Saturday. There was some dismay in the Eli camp when Charley Snead, left halfback in McLennan's backfield, failed to report. Specialists said an eye infection would keep Snead out of the game for at least two weeks and possibly for the season. The day's workout stressed a defense for the forward pass which Maryland used so effectively last Saturday.

A long signal drill kept Carnegie Tech busy in preparation for the Georgia Tech game and Plaid scouts disclosed what they knew of the engineers' potentialities. What they told the boys led the Tartans to work harder than ever.

Princeton's regulars reported in fine shape and went through a two-hour drill, chiefly in fundamentals. Brown, the Tigers' next foe, worked on some new plays which Coach Tuss McLaughry hopes will enable the Bruins to check old Nassau for the second straight year.

Penn, favored to turn back Virginia with ease, had a vacation and Navy had only a light drill in preparation for Notre Dame. Vic Hanson, at Syracuse, plans to get his men ready to stop the aerial attack they anticipate from Rutgers. Colgate contented itself with a light drill as the first step in the week's preparation for Lafayette.

A dummy scrimmage against Villanova plays was the feature of New York university's workout, but Jackson Cannell, displeased with the work of his team against Bates, drove Dartmouth hard. The Indians' next rival will be Boston university.

A half holiday was declared at Cambridge, Arnold Horween giving his Harvard varsity squad time off to see the first half of the Boston college-Quantico Marines game. Springfield should give the Crimson a good workout on Saturday.

Army, which meets Swarthmore, had only a half hour for practice and devoted that to calisthenics, passing and punting. Cornell did not do much more in getting ready for Hampden-Sydney.

With several regulars nursing hurts, mementos of the West Virginia game, Pitt took only a light workout. Josh Williams and Jimmy Clark probably will return to the lineup against Western Reserve at Cleveland.

SOCCER CHAMPS START SEASON WITH VICTORY

The Plainfield football soccer team, present holders of The Bulletin cup, Eastern Connecticut champions, started their 1930 and 1931 season with a 4 to 0 win over Wauregan at Plainfield Sunday. Although several players were missing, it did not handicap the Plainfield club, led by Tommy Lang, one of the classiest performers in this section, and they took the lead in the opening minutes of play and then formed a defense which Wauregan could not penetrate. Plainfield plays the next game at Wauregan next Sunday.

Renault Gets Verdict

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6—(AP)—Jack Renault, Canadian heavyweight, won a close 10-round decision over Babe Hunt, of Oklahoma, in the main event at the Arena tonight. Renault scaled 208 1-2, seven pounds more than his opponent. The decision was unpopular with many of the fans.

WESTERLY INDEPENDENTS LOSE TO THE SEA SCOUTS

The Westerly Sea Scouts defeated the Independents by a score of 7 to 5 on the White Rock diamond before a large crowd of baseball fans Sunday afternoon.

The Sea Scouts scored four runs in the fourth on two homers, a triple, a double and a single, then three in the eighth on three singles and a homer and only hit safely twice more during the game.

The Independents also made eleven hits including a triple but their hits were well scattered throughout the game. The Sea Scouts lineup was as follows: Catcher, Karlon; pitcher, Watterman of the Eastern league; Greeco of R. I. State, 1b; Barry of New London Kaceys 2b; Burns of the New York State league 3b; Rhodes of Westerly, ss; Dugas of the Pittsburgh Pirates, left field; Sawyer of the House of David centerfield; Dr. Carlo of the New England, rightfield.

The Independents would like to arrange a game with the winners of the J. B. Martin and Polish club teams before the end of the season.

The following is the score:

Sea Scouts ...... 000 400 030—7 11 2
Independents .... 102 001 010—5 11 1

Two base hit, Greeco. Three base hits, Ruffo, Sawyer. Home runs, Barry 2, Karlon. Sacrifice hit, Emmet. Base on balls, Watterman 6, Kiddy 2. Struck out, Watterman 3, Kiddy 3. Double plays, Rhodes and Greeco 2, Barbone, Ruffo and Wilson. Hit by pitched ball, Emmet. Batteries, Watterman and Karlon. Kiddy and S. Petria. Time of game, 1 hour 40 min. BOSTON COLLEGE WINS OVER QUANTICO MARINES

BOSTON, Oct. 6—(AP)—Heads-up football gave the Boston college eleven a 13-7 victory over Tom Keady's Quantico Marines, here today, at Fenway park, before a large American Legion convention crowd. The Eagles took advantage of both of the breaks that came their way, a poor punt and an intercepted pass, to push over their tallies.

A fumble paved the way for the Marines' tally in the final period. Standing on the enemy's 25 yard line, Bauer, former Naval academy star, completed a pass to Glick and that marine wingman carried the ball over the Eagles' goal line.

The first Boston college scores came in the second period, when one of Bauer's punts was downed in mid-field. Vodoklys completed passes to Antos and Boehner and then the former scored by skirting his right end for 20 yards. During the third, Johnny Marr intercepted a pass on the Marines 45 yard line and was knocked outside on the 18 yard line. After two line plays failed, Gallagher, who replaced Conway at end, scored on a forward from Kelley.

Neither team was able to sustain its running attack and the game developed early into a punting duel between Bauer and Marr, the marine doing the most effective kicking. Both made two first downs by rushing. Score by periods:

Boston College .... 0 7 6 0—13
Quantico Marines ..... 0 0 0 7—7

RETIREMENT OF GALLANT FOX IS ANNOUNCED

NEW YORK, Oct. 6—(AP)—The retirement of Gallant Fox, champion three-year old and probably the greatest thoroughbred on American turf since Man o' War, was announced today by his owner, William Woodward.

The Fox, which rose from the ranks of a mediocre two-year old to the all-time money winning champion with earnings in excess of $327,000, was to have fulfilled several fall engagements, including the rich Latonia championships and the Hawthorne gold cup. Last week, however, he developed a cough and after being out of training for several days Trainer Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons and Owner Woodward decided to retire the big son of Sir Gallahad III.

He will stand at the head of Woodward's Belair stud in Prince Georges county, Maryland. His retirement brings to a close a brilliant three-year-old campaign that carried the Fox and his famous riding partner, Earl Sande, victorious through every leading three-year old stake, with the exception of the Travers at Saratoga in which he finished second to Jim Dandy, a 100 to 1 shot. In addition he won the Saratoga and Jockey gold cups, defeating small but select fields of older horses.

QUAKER CITY FANS GIVE A CHEER FOR FOXX

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6—(AP)—Philadelphia gave one long, loud cheer for Jimmy Foxx today and then went about its business.

The average Philadelphia baseball fan expected the World Champion Athletics to come through and, thanks to Jimmy Foxx's circuit drive in the ninth inning, they were not disappointed.

The sixth game of the series between the A's and the St. Louis Cardinals, which will be played in Philadelphia on Wednesday, is a sell-out so far as the reserved seat capacity is concerned. All persons who bought tickets for the games in this city were compelled to take them for three games, consequently there was no rush on the Shibe park box office today for seats, as there are no tickets to be had, except those in the hands of speculators.

The 3,000 bleacher seats will be placed on sale at 8 a. m., Wednesday and it is expected the "endurance line" will form tomorrow.

AMATEUR BOUTS AT DANIELSON TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 6.—Flying fists will take the place in the town hall here Tuesday evening of the fluttering ballots that were deposited by the hundreds there today.

The occasion will be the first card of bouts of this fall season in this town. They will be high class amateur bouts, bringing together some of the best pairs of boys in their respective divisions that are to be found for many miles about.

For the star bout, Matchmaker Louis Peloquin has signed up Patsy Flynn, 160 pounds, of Worcester, and Mike Klowik who is around the same weight, of Holyoke. This pair of middleweights are sluggers. Flynn is a notoriously wicked, persistent charger with dynamite in either one of his constantly slashing arms. Klowik bears just about the same kind of a reputation in the ring, so some fur should fly when they get going Tuesday evening

Very little less of a promising attraction is the bout in which Gene Billings of Goodyear will meet John Kroul, another Holyoke lad. This bout is in the 150 class. Like Flynn, Billings is a deadly punisher, boring in every minute, hammering away in a manner that does his opponents no good at all and usually getting them in short order. Kroul is a recently crowned tournament winner, having scored decisive victories in landing on the top of the heap at Westfield, Mass., recently.

These are the two stand-out bouts on Tuesday night's card. There are to be six other bouts in classes all the way from 160 pounds down to 105. The boys that will go on in them are to be picked from the following list: Russell Martin, George Vigeant, Andy Fuller, Ray Ballou, Young Plasse, William Leo, Harry Woods, Charles Goulet, Anselm Bernier, Kid Stone, Kid Tourney, John Barry, Ray Landry, Young Bonin, Joe Jackson, Kid Brouillard, and there's some mighty good boys in that lineup, too.

NO UPSETS IN EASTERN FOOTBALL OVER WEEK END

NEW YORK, Oct. 6—(AP)—There was hardly a ripple on the calm surface of the eastern football sea today as the games of another first Saturday in October were dropped into the unimportant past and coaches and teams prepared to meet the more serious competition.

With the usual regularity of early season results, one big college team after another mowed down its lesser opponent in yesterday's games, the first or second of the season in most cases. And all but a few turned in the customary one sided scores, only one game of any importance could be classed as an upset, and that a rather doubtful one, while only a few more came within the realm of "close calls."

Villanova, one of the leaders among the smaller schools, went down to a 3 to 0 defeat at the hands of the always-dangerous Gettysburg eleven. Dartmouth, meeting Bates for the first time in 15 years, encountered stubborn resistance and won by only 20 to 0, a sharp contrast to the 79-0 count against Norwich a week ago. Lafayette again failed to show much power and scored only a 13 to 0 victory over Muhlenberg. Navy likewise met a tartar as the midshipmen opened against William and Mary, but a late attack by Kirn and Gannon brought a 19 to 6 triumph.

Colgate had the doubtful honor of rolling up the highest score of the day, tallying at the rate of more than 1 1-2 points a minute to defeat Bethany 99 to 0. Fordham, Pennsylvania and Cornell likewise put on point-a-minute acts, the Rams defeating Buffalo 71 to 0, Penn trouncing Swarthmore 63-0, and Cornell beating Niagara 61 to 14. Other big scores were turned in by Army, with a 54 to 0 victory over Furman in one of the week's three intersectional games played in the east, by Brown, which downed Worcester Poly by the same count, and by Carnegie Tech, which defeated Thiel, 52 to 6.

Pittsburgh and West Virginia engaged in the only game which brought two major teams together and the battering Pitt attack, led by Hood and Heller, smashed over a 16 to 0 victory. One game ended in a tie as Boston university and New Hampshire each scored 12 points.

Yale led the eastern teams in a clean sweep of the intersectional program. The Elis had a lot of trouble with Maryland in the first half, but finished with a powerful assault that won by a 40 to 13 score. The third intersectional clash saw Rochester triumph over the one mid-western invader, Oberlin, 13 to 0.

Other members of the old Big Three, Harvard and Princeton, had few difficulties. The Crimson regulars trounced Vermont 35 to 0 and the "B" squad downed the Coast Guard academy 13 to 0, in the second half of a double header. An untried Tiger team made a few breaks early in the game and added a pair of long runs by James, sophomore star, to defeat a strong Amherst team, 23 to 0. Williams, Amherst's running mate, defeated Middlebury 26-0.

Completing the "middle three" program well in spite of Lafayette's troubles, Lehigh defeated Penn Military 25-0 and Rutgers beat George Washington, 20-6.

In the metropolitan district, Columbia and New York university triumphed easily over fairly strong early season opposition. The Lions defeated Union 25 to 0, and N. Y. U. trounced West Virginia Wesleyan 41 to 6.

New England went almost without surprising results as Holy Cross defeated Providence 27-0, Bowdoin defeated Massachusetts Aggies 45-0, and Maine took a close decision from Rhode Island, 13 to 12.

The order was much the same in New York state where Syracuse closed the day's action by taking a night game from Hobart, 49-0, and in Pennsylvania, where Penn State defeated Lebanon Valley, 27-0, Washington and Jefferson trounced Westminster, 35-0, and Franklin and Marshall showed unusual strength in beating Catholic university, 22-7.

Dried seeds of some legumes are capable of germinating after a century.

BERG-PETROLLE BOUT TOPS THIS WEEK'S RING ACTIVITIES

NEW YORK, Oct. 6—(AP)—One of the slimmest national boxing schedules affords the fistic faithful little opportunity to indulge in their favorite weakness this week.

Madison Square Garden's Friday night show again will be featured by a lightweight duel as Jack (Kid) Berg, busy leather-swinger from England tries conclusions with Billy Petrolle of Fargo, N. D., in a ten rounder.

Petrolle is one of the few American fighters who can boast a victory over Berg. The Fargo slugger knocked Berg down ten times in a savage scrap at Chicago two years ago and won by a technical knockout in five rounds. Since then Berg has battered his way to the top as a lightweight contender and he will be a strong favorite when the battlers enter the ring Friday night. Sammy Dorfman, New York lightweight, will face Steve Halaiko of Auburn, N. Y., in the ten round semi-final.

Elsewhere heavyweights will hold sway. Primo Carnera gets the biggest test of his American campaign when he stacks up against Jimmy Maloney of Boston at the Boston Garden Tuesday night. At the Chicago Coliseum Friday night, Otto Von Porat, lantern-jawed Norwegian puncher, meets Angus Snyder of Kansas City over the eight-round route. At Philadelphia, Babe Hunt, recent conqueror of Johnny Risko and Ernie Schaaf, meets Jack Renault, one-time Canadian heavyweight contender, in a ten rounder tomorrow night.

YALE TO HAVE VARSITY 150 POUND FOOTBALL TEAM

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 6—(AP)—Yale will be represented this year on the gridiron by a varsity 150 pound football team. The executive committee of the board of control of the Yale A. A. announced tonight that a four game schedule with Harvard as one opponent, will be arranged. The other opponents and the dates of the games are still undecided.

A squad of 34 men selected from the class football squads will begin daily practices tomorrow with Herb Miller, back on last year's Yale varsity team, as coach.

Bernasconi Kayoes Rodriguez

NEW YORK, Oct. 6—(AP)—Domenico Bernasconi of Italy, knocked out Blas Rodriguez, Mexican bantamweight, in the sixth round of a scheduled ten round bout at the Jamaica Arena tonight.

Rodriguez took a severe pounding, going down for counts of eight and six in the third and fifth rounds, respectively, before a right uppercut ended the fray in the sixth. Rodriguez weighed 120; Bernasconi 122 3-4.

Rev. C. E. Toleman Gets Ace

WATERBURY, Oct. 6—(AP)—Rev. Charles E. Toleman, golfer for more than 30 years, today made his first hole in one. Playing in a three-some, Mr. Toleman scored the ace on the sixth hole at the Mattatuck Country club.

Lumbermen in central Oregon have invented the "rubberman." One end of the saw is fastened to a portion of an old inner tube attached to an iron stake driven in the ground. The sawyer pulls the saw toward him and the rubberman pulls away.

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S ADDRESS AT THE ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE A. F. OF L

BOSTON, Oct. 8—In his address at the 50th annual convention of the American Federation of Labor here this afternoon President Hoover said: Members of the American Federation of Labor:

In his invitation that I should address you on this occasion President Green spoke in terms of high praise of the benefits to labor from the nation-wide cooperation initiated at the white house last November for mitigation of the effects of the present depression.

At those white house conferences the leaders of business and industry undertook to do their utmost to maintain the rate of wages. They also undertook in case of shortened employment to distribute work as evenly as possible over their regular body of employees. The leaders of labor undertook to urge effort in production and to prevent conflict and dispute. The public officials and the managers of industry and utilities undertook to expand construction work to mitigate unemployment.

We have now had nearly a year in which to observe the working of these arrangements. These, the first undertakings of this character in our history, have been carried out in astonishing degree. There are, of course, exceptions, but in the large sense our great manufacturing companies, the railways, utilities, and business houses have been able to maintain the established wages. Employers have spread their employment systematically. For the first time in more than a century of these recurring depressions we have been practically free of bitter industrial conflict.

Emergency Employment

The fine cooperation in the providing organized emergency employment through federal, state, and municipal public works and utility construction has been an important contribution in taking up the slack of unemployment. The measure of success is easily demonstrated. The department of commerce reports to me that public works and the construction work by the railways and utilities in the last eight months amount to about $4,500,000,000 as compared with about $4,000,000,000 in the same period of the boom year of 1929, or an increase of about $500,000,000. In all previous depressions these works decreased, so that the gain is more than even the apparent figures.

We have thus had nation-wide cooperation and team play which have greatly ameliorated the hardship of this depression. These measures have served as a practical system of unemployment insurance. There are some unexpected by-products. Through distribution of employment, large numbers of workers have been saved from being forced into competition for new jobs; the sense of security that the job is theirs by part-time employment has contributed to relieve much of the fear, despondency, and discouragement that come to men and women in search for new jobs in hard times.

Business And Labor

I would indeed be remiss if I did not express an appreciation, in which I know you share, to the thousands of men in leadership of business and labor who have served in bringing about these results. In the face of decreasing prices it has required great courage, resolution, and devotion to the interest of their employees and the public on the part of our great manufacturers, our railways, utilities, business houses, and public officials.

The leaders of labor have likewise contributed their part. Our freedom from strike and lockout is well evidenced by the statement of the department of labor that in the last depression there were more than 2,000 labor disputes, many of them of major character and accompanied by great public disorder, as compared with less than 300 disputes in this period, and these mostly of minor character. And the great body of labor itself deserves much praise, for never with its individual efficiency higher than today.

The undertakings made at that time represent a growing sense of mutual responsibility and a willingness to bend private interests to the general good.

We still have a burden of unemployment. Although it is far less than one-half in proportion to our workers than in either England or Germany, no one can contemplate its effect in hardship and discouragement without new resolves to continued exertion and to further effort in solution of our greatest economic problem—stability in employment.

American Basis Of Wages

Your chairman has spoken of my interest in the development of an American basis of wage. Both the directors of industry and your leaders have made great progress toward a new and common ground in economic conceptions, which, I can confident, has had a profound effect upon our economic progress during the last few years. That is the conception that industry must be constantly renovated by scientific research and invention; that labor welcomes these labor-saving devices; that labor gives its full and unrestricted effort to reduce costs by the use of these machines and methods; that the savings from these reduced costs shall be shared between labor, employer, and the consumer. It is a philosophy of mutual interest. It is a practice of cooperation for an advantage that is not only mutual but universal. Labor gains either through increase of wage or reduction of cost of living or shortened hours. Employers gain through enlarged consumption, and a wider spread distribution of their products, and more stable business. Consumers gain through lower cost of what they buy. Indeed, mass production must be accompanied by mass consumption through increased standards of living.

A conception of this sort does not at once find universal application. We ought not forget that is is something new in the world's economic life. And there are, of course, those who do not yet believe. It is as far apart as the two poles from the teachings of the economists of 100 years ago, who took it for granted that the well-being of the worker could be purchased only at the expense of the well-being of the employer or some other group in the community, and further that wages could never rise above subsistence or the number of workers would so increase as to pull the weaker back into the cesspool of poverty.

Cost Economies

If we survey the nation broadly we shall find that the diffusion of cost economies between wages, profits, and prices has worked out fairly well. In fact, due to competition and the necessity to average profits over the losses of lean years, industry in the national sense is probably today getting the least of the three.

From the acceptance of this basis of industrial relations I believe America is making more progress toward security, better living, and more hours of leisure than those countries which are seeking to continue old conceptions of the wage and to patch up the old system with doles of various kinds which limit the independence of men. Any comparison of the situation of our labor with the labor of those other countries, whether in times of high prosperity or today in times of temporary depression, should carry conviction that we are on the right track.

No system is or can be free of difficulties or problems. The rapidity of our inventions and discoveries has intensified many problems in adjusting what we nowadays call technological unemployment. I am cooperating with President Green and representatives of employers' associations in an exhaustive inquiry into its various phases. If we stretch our vision over the last 10 years, we shall find much to convince us that the problem is not at all insurmountable in the long run. It is estimated by some of our statisticians that in this period over 2,000,000 workers have been displaced from older industry due to labor-saving devices. Some way, somehow, most of these were reestablished in new industry and new services. Nor is there any reason to believe that we can not revolve our economic system in such fashion that further new discoveries and inventions will further increase our standard of living and thereby continue to absorb men who are displaced in the older industries. Nevertheless there is a period of readjustment in each case of new discovery, and industry has need of a larger understanding of the facts.

Process Of Readjustment

It is this process of readjustment that partly causes our present difficulties in the bituminous-coal industry. In that industry the encroachments of electrical power, of natural gas, of improvements in consumption, have operated to slow down the annual demand from its high peak, leaving a most excessive production capacity. At the same time, the introduction of labor-saving devices has decreased the demand for mine labor. In addition to its other difficulties must be counted the effect of the multitude of 6,000 independent mine owners among 7,000 mines, which has resulted in destructive competition and final breakdown of wages.

All these conditions have culminated in a demoralization of the industry and a depth of human misery in some sections which is wholly out of place in our American system. The situation has been under investigation of our government departments, by congress together with commissions and committees of one sort or another, for the past 10 years. The facts are known. One key to solution seems to me to lie in reduction of this destructive competition. It certainly is not the purpose of our competitive system that it should produce a competition which destroys stability in an industry and reduces to poverty all those within it. Its purpose is rather to maintain that degree of competition which induces progress and protects the consumer. If our regulatory laws be at fault they should be revised.

But most of these problems are problems of stability. With the job secure, other questions can be solved with much more assurance. You, as workers, know best of all how much a man gains from security in his job. It is the insurance of his manliness, it upholds the personal valuation of himself and of his family. To establish a system that assures this security is the supreme challenge to our responsibility as representatives of millions of our fellow workers and fellow citizens. The discharge of that responsibility does not allow present difficulties to rob us of our clear vision or the wholesome faith and courageous aggressive character for which our country has been long the leader of the world.

Cooperation And Team Play

The demonstration of nation-wide cooperation and team play and the absence of conflict during this depression have increased the stability and wholesomeness of our industrial and social structure. We are justified in feeling that something like a new and improved tool has been added to the working kit for the solution of our future problems.

No one would invite either war or business depression, but from them may come some new inspirations. We find in these times courage and sympathy, generous helpfulness from our workpeople to those unfortunates suffering not alone from the present but from fear for their future. We find inspiration in the courage of our employers, the resolution of the nation that we shall build steadily to prevent and mitigate the destructiveness of these great business storms. It is this inspiration which gives confidence for the future, and confirms our belief in fundamental human righteousness and the value of our American conception of mutuality of interest in our daily work.

Hoover's Address to The American Legion

BOSTON, Oct. 8—President Hoover addressed the 12th annual convention of the American Legion here this morning. The address follows:

My Fellow Countrymen:

It is with a great deal of pleasure that I am able to meet here with the American Legion.

I hope I may venture to claim from some years of service during the great war, a measure of comradeship with the men who fought in that war. I understand your variety of French perfectly. I know from intimate experience, and I intend to hold in confidence, the first reaction you had from a passing shell, and the homelike appearance of shell holes under certain circumstances. I shall maintain secret your opinion of those who profess indifference to or the glory in passing bullets, or insects, or the mud and filth of the trenches, or days and weeks in the wet and cold.

The glories of war are not in the heartbreaks of passing buddies and the thousand tragedies of the battle line. Its glories do not lie in its surroundings—they lie rather in the spirit, the sacrifices, the devotion of those who so cheerfully and courageously into the trenches, and the ultimate triumph of those lofty ideals for which they gave their all.

It was inevitable that men who had lived through that great common experience, who had engaged in supreme adventure with death, should combine into associations of lifelong comradeship. Yet it was not alone the comradeship of high adventure that instinctively called your organization into being. It was the common understanding which war called forth, the common experience from which sprang the highest emotions of patriotism — that shoulder-to-shoulder companionship in an idealism which transfigured men's lives.

Hails Birth of American Legion

The millions who shared in that experience came home from it rededicated to the further service of their country. But great as was that service, performed under impulse of the high emotions of war, the service to the great ideals of peace is ofttimes even more difficult and ofttimes requires more sustained courage. It was, therefore, with deep sympathy that I witnessed the birth of the American Legion in France in 1919.

At that memorable meeting you sensed this high purpose and expressed these lofty ideals of your peacetime service in the preamble to your constitution, which reads in part:

"To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of "America; to maintain law and order; to inculcate a sense of "individual obligation to the community, state, and nation; to "combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make "right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on "earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of "justice, freedom, and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our "comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness."

Ideals And Purposes

That, indeed, is the real preface to American citizenship.

It is my purpose to speak upon some of these ideals and purposes, for idealism must be translated into cold realism of the day-to-day task of citizenship.

At the moment you made that declaration, you sensed an imperative national need. You foresaw that the aftermath of war would be a period of change, a period of disturbed mind, of loosened moorings; a period when evil forces among men might lead to violence and crime; a period which demanded understanding and wise restraint if the basis of all society and all progress were to be maintained. You realized that liberty and freedom can be won on the battlefield, but they can be held only by ordered government in peace. You realized, in fact, that without ordered government the very sacrifices which you had made, the fruition of your high hopes, your endurance, your courage, might come to naught.

Eleven years of experience in our own country and in every country engaged in that war have proved the need of that inspiration to active citizenship. It has been a period of readjustment, a period of challenge to democratic institutions, a time when the world has had to contend with a greater mood of violence. Even today nearly one-half of the population of our globe is in a state of great unrest or a state of revolution.

Among these ideals was: "To promote peace and good will upon earth." Those indeed were courageous and constructive words at the moment when the guns had barely been silenced and the fires of hate were still burning fiercely. They were the words of brave men, of the soldiers from the trenches, men who respected a courageous enemy, who in clear vision saw that the future hope of the world lay in good will, not in hate. It was the real feeling of men who had fought and who knew the dreadfulness of war.

In that statement you gave no glorification to war. It was a pledge to peace based upon freedom and justice, and without this civilization itself must fail. It was a statement neither of pacifism nor militarism.

Peace Requires Courage

Real peace in the world requires something more than the documents which we sign to terminate wars. Peace requires unremitting, courageous campaigns, laid with strategy and carried on successfully on a hundred fronts and sustained in the spirit and from the hearts of every individual in every town and village of our country.

In the great intangibles of human emotion, respect is inseparable from good will. The maintenance of respect requires that we sustain a preparedness for defense that is impregnable yet that contains no threat of aggression.

You have maintained that the development of good will also requires the firm establishment of confidence in our sense of international justice. This becomes of double importance from us because of the overpowering strength of our country in its relations with many nations. We have to remember that during the great war we demonstrated not only our military power but also our ability to quickly organize it and the valor to use it. After the war the disturbed condition of the world made it necessary to increase our defense establishment beyond the pre-war basis. Above all, we made a more rapid recovery from the vast losses of the great war than other nations in the world. Our national income has expanded to embrace more than one-third of the whole commercial world. As a result we have become a dominant economic power. Our citizens have spread their trade and finance into every corner of the earth. From these tremendous happenings in our country some leaders in other countries came to believe that they were in the presence of the birth of a new imperial power intent upon dominating the destinies and the freedom of other peoples. Such a conclusion would be the logical deduction from many instances during 3,000 years of history when the exploitation of other people has been the outcome of the ability to do so. This we know is an utter misconception of America. We know there is a desire to do justice and not exploitation. We know there is no financial, traditional, or military imperialism in the American heart. We know, in fact, that we have opened the door of a new social and economic system by which within our own borders we shall create the conquest of poverty without exploiting other nations. But as wrong as these fears may be, it becomes our first duty to show by our every act, not alone by our government but by our citizens, that our guide is justice and that confidence may be reposed in that sense of justice.

Agencies For Pacific Solution

The day-to-day practical preservation of peace and good will requires that we build up and support agencies for pacific solution of controversies. It requires that no one of us shall entertain suspicion or ill will toward other peoples, that we give them no cause for the most dangerous of all emotions—that is, fear. It requires that every American shall realize that men and women of other nations have the same devotion to their flags and are as sensitive to the dignity of their country as we.

On this road to peace we have attained two momentous victories. The first of these is the Kellogg-Briand pact. By the London naval agreement we have silenced the high dangers of competitive naval build and have safeguarded our defense by parity with the greatest naval power in the world. We have assured the maintenance of an efficient navy as the first line of defense. By limiting our strength we have given demonstration to the world that we seek no domination but only adequate defense.

The peace of our country has never stood more assured than at this moment. The realization of your ideal to promote peace and good will through active citizenship is the greatest guaranty of its continuance.

High Purpose Of The Legion

The first high purpose you express is to uphold and defend the constitution and to maintain law and order in the United States. Happily your ideal is my first and most sacred duty. As president of the United States I am sworn by the whole people to maintain the constitution and to enforce the laws. No man should dare call himself a faithful American and suggest otherwise. You have recognized that the upholding of the constitution and the enforcement of the laws must, however, not rest upon government officials alone; it must rise from the stern demand and the loyal cooperation of good citizenship and individual responsibility to the community.

One of the primary obligations of citizenship is national defense. Our people have been traditionally opposed to a large standing army in times of peace. The nation needs a regular army, highly developed in training and technical services, as the nucleus for the training of citizen soldiers and to lead them in times of emergency. We have always relied on our citizen army, and never replied in vain, but its maintenance is again the voluntary service of good citizenship. Your association has taken large interest in provision for better industrial mobilization. You have been greatly interested, and I have lately signed an act creating an inquiry into the methods by which the economic burdens of war shall fall with equal weight upon every element of citizenry. It is not equitable that one citizen shall profit by war while another makes the supreme sacrifice.

Mutual Helpfulness

One of your expressed ideals was that of "mutual helpfulness." In your solicitude for your comrades disabled both in war and in peace you have kept that faith. Nor has a grateful nation failed in its duty. In addition to hospitalization, rehabilitation, war-risk insurance, adjusted compensation, and priority in civil service, the government has undertaken through disability allowances to provide for some 700,000 veterans of the World war. Our total outlays on all services to World war veterans are nearing $600,000,000 a year and to veterans of all wars nearly $900,000,000 per annum. The nation assumes an obligation when its sends its sons to war. The nation is proud to requite this obligation within its full resources. I have been glad of the opportunity to favor the extension of these services in such a manner that they cover without question all cases of disablement whether from war or peace. There is, however, a deep responsibility of citizenship in the administration of this trust of mutual helpfulness which peculiarly lies upon your members, and that is that the demands upon the government should not exceed the measure that justice requires and self help can provide. If we shall overload the burden of taxation, we shall stagnate our economic progress and we shall by the slackening of his progress place penalties upon every citizen.

There are many other responsibilities of the individual in his "obligations to the community, the state and the nation." The very beginning of such obligation is at the ballot box. The whole plan of self-government presupposes that the whole people shall participate in the selection of its officials, the determination of its policies, and the maintenance of its ideals. Anything less than this involves government by the minority.

Responsibilities Of Individual

Your own expressed fears of "autocracy of either classes or masses" can well come true unless the individual citizen takes at least his share in the burden of government. He can not hope to escape tyranny, he may not safely trust that "right will be the master of might," unless he is willing to respond to the right and duty to go to the ballot box. When he does not insist upon purity of elections he has lost democracy itself. Beyond this, if right shall be the master of might, every citizen must be on guard against the invasion of our guaranteed liberties even by public officials.

You have insisted that we shall "safeguard and transmit the principles of democracy." We have seen the erection of many new democracies during this period since the war. We have seen some of them fall by the wayside—some to strong men and some to the mob. Strange new doctrines are presented to us in alluring language. Self-government is being questioned. We in America have proved it the surest lift to the common man. We have grown and prospered under it for 150 years. We believe in it. There is no greater service to the world than that we should hold and strengthen it. It is grounded upon the ideal you have set for yourselves—the obligation of the "individual to the community, the state, and the nation."

Mission Of Citizenship

During these years your thousands of posts have concerned themselves with these ideals of citizenship. My purpose today is to urge you to renewed efforts—that you, as the American Legion, as a group of men who, inspired by the ideals of our country, went to battle to preserve those ideals—that you should renew and expand your mission of citizenship.

We need the teaching of the essentials of good-will toward other nations in every community—that the foundation of peace arise from the sense of justice within the citizenry of a nation, in the good-will which they individually evince toward other peoples.

We need the teaching that the foundation of government is respect for law. A quickened interest on the part of the community can insist upon proper enforcement of law, can arouse public opinion, while any condition of lawlessness remains unchecked in that community. You can impress upon the citizens that the road of self-government is through the discharge of our obligations at the ballot box to understand that the basis of defense is a willingness to serve in our citizen soldiery; actively to participate in these and a multitude of duties of citizens—all are an inseparable part of the safety and progress of the nation.

You have a post in every town and every village. These 11,000 posts are organized into divisions with state and national commanders. You are already an army mobilized for unselfish and constructive endeavor. Your strength is made up of men who have stood the quality test of citizenship. You have it in your power to do much. Through your local posts you can awaken the minds of the communities throughout our nation to a higher ideal of citizenship. You have an exceptional interest and an exceptional opportunity in the front line of citizenship to cooperate and preserve the fundamentals of our Republic.

Summoned to the telephone in the British house of commons in the usual way, P. J. Pybus, member of parliament, was referred to "steamship services" and spoke to a friend aboard the Majestic in mid-Atlantic, the first steamer-to-parliament call in England.

Thee Arrests Were Made for S. Killingly Holdup

bury at one o'clock, and insisted that if he had kept up to his schedule time he should have been at South Killingly nearly an hour before he did reach there. They also appeared to be perfectly sure that he had the fortune in silver aboard, a point that is of interest to officers working on the case.

The men lost no time, after making Wines a captive, in hustling him off the state highway up a narrow dirt road that leads into a wooded section nearby, but he did not find out where he was until a considerable time thereafter.

Having disposed of him for the time being, the bandits drove the truck in the lane and out of sight of the highway and went to work. One of the first things they did was to tie Wines to the truck. He was bound by one hand to the front bumper of the truck, while his other hand was securely lashed to a headlight brace. Then they lashed his legs to the bumper. In the predicament in which he found himself Wines was unable to see, to cry out or to move about.

Robert Saunders, an aged man living in a little cottage just a short distance farther up the hill from where the ByRolly truck was driven off the state road into the woods, at what is known as the Bert Jacques place, told The Bulletin this afternoon that he heard some commotion a bit down the hill just about daylight. A little later when he was coming down the hill in an automobile he noticed two cars, headed east, parked on the hill about opposite to the dirt road the truck was taken in. He paid no particular attention to them, though, never suspecting that such a thing as a big hold-up was underway just back of the screen of trees at the north side of the road. As near as Mr. Saunders can recall, this was just before 5:30 a. m.

Other South Killingly residents are said to have noticed the parked machines, and state officers were seeking interviews with them this afternoon and evening.

Loot Insured Against Theft

It is taken for granted that the bandits with their more than a half-ton of stolen silver, made over toward Rhode Island, the border of which is only about a mile and a half from where the truck was robbed. The stolen silver is said to have been insured against theft in transit.

It is possible that the finger prints left presumably by the hold-up men on bills of lading in an envelope on the seat of the truck will yield information that may eventually lead to the arrest of the gang. There were also interesting fingerprints and even the imprint of the palm of a hand on the isinglass in one of the curtains of the cab of the truck.

The silver, of which there was several shipments in the load, was consigned to various silversmiths and jewelry manufacturers in Providence and Attleboro.

Evidence that the hold-up gang did really wait a considerable time for the arrival of Wines at East Killingly was the mess of cigarette butts they left strewn on the ground at the point where they halted the truck. There were also two empty cigarette packages of a popular brand.

Boldness, careful prior arrangements and much knowledge relative to the truck and its rich cargo are all indicated by the manner in which the robbers worked. It is believed they halted Wines on the steep hill because they figured his big machine would be climbing it in low speed and, therefore, easier to halt. It is believed they also had looked the territory over and knew about the little dirt road that leads into a wooded dell.

Two hours had elapsed before Wines managed to free himself, and meanwhile the bandits had looted the truck and disappeared, and up to this evening not a trace of them or their loot had been found.

A bread truck that happened to come along as Wines made his way out to the state road afforded him transportation to Danielson, where he made prompt report of his experience to Chief John McFarland, who advised him to get in touch with the state officers at the Main street barracks, which he did.

Bills of lading and re-checking with the shippers by state officers showed that the truck was carrying a total of 1364 pounds of silver. There were 21 bars weighing 25 pounds each, 7 bags containing 40 pounds each and 8 boxes containing about 60 pounds each. This silver was mixed in with a cargo of miscellaneous freight that was on the truck, a big vehicle of the open type with high board sides.

Fingerprints that the hold-up men left on the bills of lading indicate that they had carefully scanned these bills to be sure about the amount of silver aboard. In their haste, however, they missed one box of silver that contained 141 pounds, and in its place, evidently by mistake, took a case containing aluminum castings.

Cars traveled up and down the state road while the bandits worked only a short distance away in the woods. Casually asked why he did not resist when first accosted by one of the hold-up men, Wines dryly remarked that "there was too much iron in sight."

Immediately upon receiving a report of the hold-up Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart, commanding officer at the Danielson barracks, headed a squad of state officers that rode over to South Killingly at top speed. They found the truck where Wines said it would be. A search of the nearby woods followed, in the hope that some of the heavy packages of silver might be found hidden away, but this hope proved fruitless. Meanwhile the hold-up men had more than a two hours' start. News of the hold-up was promptly broadcasted from the barracks, but there were no developments during the day that would indicate any early chance of hunting down the wanted men.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

Sea stories seem to have a special influence with Milton Sills. His first big success was made in "The Sea Hawk," which definitely established him as one of the foremost players on the screen. And now, in the Fox Movietone talking version of Jack London's stirring novel of marine adventure, "The Sea Wolf," he scores what many critics are acclaiming as his finest picture role.

"The Sea Wolf" which makes its bow to local audiences at Warner's Broadway tomorrow, introduces a unique triangle in the persons of a domineering brute of a schooner captain, a young waster who is shanghaied aboard as the vessel is leaving a Japanese fishing port, and a mysterious girl who goes along in a Quixotic desire to help the youngster. The drama that ensues as the three are cooped up on the schooner during her long cruise to the Aleutian sealing grounds is said to be the most breathless of any talkie of recent months, and various fights in Sills' best style enliven the action.

Jane Keith and Raymond Hackett have featured roles with Sills, while Mitchell Harris, Nat Pendleton, John Rogers, Sam Allen and Harry Tenbrook are cast in important supporting parts.

Hillcrest Theatre

Grim prison rioting; men herded like beasts in a house of hate; young prisoners educated in crime by hardened offenders; a sensational jailbreak quelled by army tanks and dynamite. These are among the sensational elements of "The Big House," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's drama of prison life, which will open tonight at the Hillcrest theatre.

An entire replica of a big prison was built for the production, one of the largest screen settings in history. A thousand men take the parts of convicts in the sensational mess hall riot and prison breaks. Actual army tanks batter down steel doors to rake the rioting convicts with machine gun fire.

An unusually fine surrounding bill of short featurettes completes this fine program.

Coming on Thursday, Fred Scott and Helen Twelvetree will be seen and heard in a gripping, thrilling story of circus life, "Swing High." Don't miss it.

When the Hawaiian islands were discovered by Captain Cook, the largest land animal there was the Hawaiian rat.

MANY STOCKS REACHED YEAR'S LOW LEVEL IN NEW YORK MARKET YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Slow but steady pressure pushed stocks downward today, virtually completing the erasure of last week's rally and leaving the average for 90 issues only one fifth of a point above the year's low set on September 30. Sales were well below the volume reached in the recent liquidation, however, totaling 2,365,060 shares.

The decline was accompanied by considerable unsettlement in other markets. Wheat closed fractionally higher on a rebound from early losses of 1 1-2 to 2 cents and corn made a substantially larger recovery after similar declines. Bonds lost their vigor. The Brazilian situation brought distinct weakness to coffee futures as well as to the republic's bonds and obligations of other Latin American countries. Cotton lost 4 to 10 points net.

The selling on the stock market was particularly disturbing to those who had hoped that last week's lows in the leaders would offer formidable resistance points. In general, these favorites gave ground most readily today under a dribble rather than a flood of offerings, which indicated that real liquidation was again in progress and that the bear faction was playing a relatively minor role.

Saturday's weakness in American Telephone and other so-called "blue chip" shares seemed to have had an unfavorable effect, for it was in stocks of this grade that some of the day's major losses were suffered. Virtually all of the investment rails made new 1930 lows; prominent utilities and industrials slumped with only sickly attempts at rallies.

Many prominent shares were off 2 to 6 points and more on the day, which meant that new lows for the year or for the broad downward movement were numerous. There was virtually no improvement on covering at the close. U. S. Steel, breaking to 153 1-2 against its 1930 low of 151 5-8, and American Telephone, which touched 200 1-2, only 3-8 from the year's minimum, closed slightly above the bottom for 3 point net losses.

Aside from the disturbances in Brazil the day's news afforded little that was either alarming or encouraging. Woolworth's September sales were up a fraction in comparison with the same month a year ago, but receipts of another chain system were nearly 15 per cent lower. Atchison's president said the road had gone into surplus for capital expenditures, and there were reports that the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific might postpone construction of a Montana extension because of poor earnings.

Withdrawals of about $50,000,000, mostly for out of town banks, kept the money market firm.

Commission house sentiment was rather blue, but some of the statistical services advised careful purchases of selected stocks, especially on reactions. Inquiry from this and other sources, however, was limited.

There were 5 point net declines in American Can, North American, DuPont, and Case. Westinghouse Electric, Canadian Pacific and American and Foreign Power lost six, American Water Works nearly 9 and Allied Chemical 18. Radio made a new low for the year, off more than 3 points. General Electric, General Motors, Montgomery Ward, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Johns Manville, Consolidated Gas and Baltimore and Ohio yielded 1 1-2 to 2, while New York Central, Union Pacific, Gillette, Bethlehem Steel, Columbia Gas, Standard Gas, and Sears Roebuck closed 3 to 4 lower. Atchison's loss was nearly 5.

Foreign exchanges eased. As was to be expected, the Brazilian milreis broke sharply. German marks were quoted at their year's low.

The recovery in wheat, which closed about 1-4 cent higher, was based on an unexpected decrease in the visible supply. Corn rallied 1 3-4 net, likewise reflecting a reduction in supply as well as forecasts of unfavorable weather.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(AP) —Utility shares broke sharply in today's curb market, unsettling the entire list. Several prominent issues were depressed to new minimum levels for the year or longer. Trading was moderately active, with sales aggregating 500,300 shares.

The decline was notably abrupt in the stocks of companies with Brazilian connections. American and Foreign Power warrants broke more than six points to a new low, in sympathy with the stock on the big board. This company has extensive public utility interests in Brazil, while its operating subsidiaries serve some 240 communities with an aggregate population of more than 3,800,000 persons.

Electric Bond and Share, which controls American and Foreign Power, dropped nearly 5 points to 63, a shade under the previous year's low. Brazilian Traction, a Canadian company operating public utilities in Rio De Janeiro and Sao Paulo dropped 5 points to 29 1-2, duplicating the year's low.

American Gas and Electric, a domestic corporation supervised but not controlled by Electric Bond and Share, tumbled 9 points to 106, only 2 above the year's low, but rallied to close at 107 3-4. United Light A lost more than 2 points, and American Super Power, Central States Electric, and Niagara Hudson lost about a point each.

Oils were also under pressure. Cities Service was an active feature, declining nearly a point to 26. Gulf dropped 2, then rallied 1 1-2. Standard of Indiana lost 3-4, and Humble and Vacuum each more than a point. Lion was a soft spot, dropping 3. In the mines, Newmont rallied 2 points, contrary to the trend elsewhere.

Industrials were not very active, but inclined to be heavy. Ford of Canada A stock declined 2 points to 21 3-4, a new low. Royal Typewriter and Aluminum company tumbled about 5 points, the former to a new low. Losses of 2 to 3 were recorded by Driver Harris, Dresser A, Dow Chemical and Technicolor.

In the investing company group, Goldman Sachs touched 14 1-2, a new low, and off more than a point. American Capital A broke 3 1-2 to 18 1-2.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(AP) — There was a fresh outbreak of selling of Latin American obligations in the bond market today inspired by reports of revolutionary uprisings in Brazil where martial law has been declared.

Active selling forced a wide list of Brazilian issues down 1 to 7 points, many to new 1930 lows, and influenced liquidation in bonds of Colombia, Peru, Bolivia, Chile and Argentina.

The weakness in the South American list was the feature of a session in which minus signs were placed after a majority of active bonds. The domestic section was highly irregular with the exception of U. S. governments. There a firm trend was maintained on a dwindling volume of sales. Among corporate issues, the gilt edged bonds held firm. Secondary issues eased, and speculative bonds, particularly sugar and oil obligations, were reactionary.

The heaviest liquidation in the South American list centered in Brazilian government bonds, and loans of the states of Rio Grande Do Sul, and Sao Paulo. The extreme loss was 14 1-2 points in City of Sao Paulo 6 1-2s. Sao Paulo state 6s sold off 8 1-4; 7s, 8 3-4 and the 8s dropped six.

New year's lows were reached by Brazilian 6 1-2s of '26-'57, off 5 points, 6 1-2s of '27-'57 down 2 3-8 and the 8s, off four. Bonds of Rio Grande Do Sul, where a state of siege exists, were easily depressed by thin offerings. Losses ranged from 3 to 7 points. Rio De Janiero 8s were heavily liquidated, and moved down nearly 2 points to 95 3-4. The 6 1-2s yielded 5.

The unsettlement influenced by the Brazilian revolution was reflected in sharp losses elsewhere in the Latin American list. Argentine 6s, Bolivian 7s and 8s, Colombia 6s, Costa Rica 7s, Cuba 5 1-2s, Peru 1st and 2nd 6s, and Uruguay 6s were 1 to 3 lower. Chilean bonds were in supply slightly under previous final prices.

Bonds of companies with extensive interests in South America such as Anglo-Chilean Nitrate 7s, Lautaro Nitrate 6s, American and Foreign Power 5s, and American I. G. Chemical 5 1-2s sagged a point or more.

Weakness of shares influenced some liquidation in stock privilege bonds. The largest losses were suffered by American Telephone 4 1-2s, International Telephone 4 1-2s, Atchison 4 1-2s, and Paramount Publix 5 1-2s. They lost about 2 points each. In the industrial group sugar company issues, such as Manati 7 1-2s, Sugar Oriente and Antilla 7 1-2s were reactionary. Shell Union Pipe Line 5s dropped 3 points to a new 1930 low. Among railroad bonds a 3 point loss in St. Paul adjustment 5s to 44 1-2, a new low, was a feature.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Oct. 6. — (AP) — Grain threw off the influence of stock market weakness today and scored late gains both for wheat and corn. An unlooked for decrease of 2,739.000 bushels in the United States wheat visible supply was largely responsible for late rallies in the wheat market together with reports that the Argentine wheat crop had been damaged by frost. There were also advices that husking returns from various sections of the corn belt in this country were disappointing and that farmers expected such advices to continue.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled at 1-8a1-2c per bushel higher than Saturday's closing. Corn finished at 1 1-2a2c net gain, oats a shade to 3-8c down, and provisions varying from 12c decline to a rise of 10c.

Provisions were irregular, with the pit disconcerted by fluctuations in grain, whereas from the outset hog values showed upturns.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

During the past week there were six sales of real estate in Norwich as compared to ten sales for the corresponding week in 1929. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $21,320 and $23,450.

In New London during the past week there were five sales of real estate, exactly half the number of sales for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $49,480 and $47,170.

NEW LONDON

A decided decrease in the amount of new building started in September of this year as compared with that month last year is seen in a comparison of the number and substance of building permits issued by the city council in September of this year and last.

About $50,000 is represented in the building permits issued in September of this year as compared with about $130,000 as represented by the building permits granted last year.

The greatest difference is shown in the number of new houses for which permits were granted in September of this year and last. This year only four permits were issued for new houses and all were of the single family type. Last year there were 15 permits for new houses, of which one was for a two family dwelling and the rest for single family houses.

Altogether there were 57 permits issued by the council last year in September, as compared to 34 this year.

The comparison further shows that permits were issued for 20 new garages this year against 14 last year. The number of permits for alterations, additions, repairs, stores, shops and miscellaneous buildings were about the same each year.

MYSTIC

Plans are now being prepared by a Providence firm for an art gallery to be erected in Mystic for the Mystic Art Association, Inc. The site for the proposed building, which has recently been purchased by the association, is known as the old Rafferty property. It is located on the east bank of the Mystic river and fronts in Water street, Mystic. The building is to be designed to provide suitable facilities for art exhibitions, and will conform to the prevailing type of village architecture. G. Albert Thompson is president of the art association.

The boat yard of F. G. Post & Son of Mystic has been enlarged by the purchase of adjoining property consisting of approximately three acres and five buildings. Alterations are being made to one of the buildings to make it suitable for the storage of boats.

GOOD PROGRESS BEING MADE ON PUTNAM PROJECTS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 6 — Construction work now underway is progressing satisfactorily. Thus the weekly review of building developments in this city is summed up in a nutshell. City Clerk Thomas P. Ryan said today that no new applications for building permits have been filed with his bureau during the past seven days, leaving the prospect that contractors who have passed a dull season thus far will be forced to content themselves with another week of solitude, so far as structural work is concerned. But builders at work on structural feats started in the late summer are rushing their subjects through the various constructional phases towards completion.

The populace of eastern Windham county contributing so generously and willingly to the nurses home fund of the Day Kimball hospital, is keeping close tabs on the building activities now going on at the hospital where the institution's future home for its nursing staff is rapidly taking shape. Tiers of brick slowly becoming walls will soon rise to heights, meet one another and form the enclosure that will spur the work on to completion. Tradesmen of all descriptions are now at work on the project inserting elementary and ground details into the nucleus of the structure that will some day become a monument to eastern Windham county's prevalent spirit of generousness. According to a statement made this week every phase of the work is progressing at a tempo meeting with the complete satisfaction of construction superintendents.

Last week saw the completion of the attractive new home of the Place Motor company of Webster, which is located on Main street. The building is a structure of the combination garage and sales station type and is constructed along modern lines of architecture greatly enhancing the civic appearance of that section of the city's main thoroughfare, long marred by the presence of unoccupied and unsightly lots. The Main street facade is of red terra cotta brick of recessed joints. A white marble block attractively set into the top of the Main street wall bearing the gold-leafed inscription, "Place" is the only decoration of prominence. All modern features of convenience in design and utility are beautifully incorporated into the business block which was erected by local tradesmen working under the supervision of a local contractor.

The new fraternal home of the local chapter of the American-Polish Freedom club being erected on Providence street near the junction of School street, is gradually nearing completion. Work on the finishing of the interior has been underway for the past three weeks and the prospect is that the job will be finished within a month. The building is an attractive one and is a credit to the Putnam people of Polish extraction providing for its erection.

On lower Main street, Henry Tetreault, owner of a large apartment building in which a store is located, has engaged a mason contractor who is preparing the exterior of the building for extensive alterations, consisting chiefly of the application of a form of stucco decoration.

Landlord E. C. Rogers of the Putnam inn is having the foundation and underpinning of his attractive hotel building in Union square re-enforced. The task appears to be a great one and has caused the temporary cluttering of the sidewalk passage along the north side of the building where workmen are concentrating their efforts in the laying of concrete blocks which are being set into the structure at a point beginning at the street line.

On Woodstock avenue considerable progress has been made during the past week by carpenters building the one and one-half story bungalow for Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Ryan of this city.

Jack McBride, Shiro, Tex., flier, landed his plane safely after the propeller had been shattered by rifle fire.

INTEREST IN THE FIRE-SAFE HOME IS STEP FORWARD

The dauntless fireman, rescuing the lovely damsel from the third floor bathroom, is a figure of courage and a hero in the public eye. However, chances are ten to one that the young lady in the case would have preferred the comfort of her bath to the notoriety gathered in her thrilling escape from what fire fans would describe as "a raging inferno."

How to keep the house from burning down about the bathtub is a problem not to be solved on the musical comedy stage. Though fire may have its dramatic aspects, an annual loss of 14,000 lives, to say nothing of the half billion dollars lost through ruined property, is no laughing matter.

While the most spectacular fires usually occur in commercial building areas, fires in the home contribute a vast share to the national toll. Commercial structures are being built these days with due regard to fire hazards, but the thousands of homes that go up in smoke are ample testimony to the fact that firesafe domiciles are badly needed.

Precautions against fire in the home, such as the provision for extinguishers and the observance of safety rules, are important, but true fire safety must be built into the structure.

Firesafe walls and roofs, of concrete masonry and cement-asbestos shingles, are important as a means of protecting the home against fire from outside sources. They also assist in keeping a house fire from spreading. Protection from fire within the house also is an important consideration. A concrete floor slab between the basement and the house proper is one of the surest means of preventing fire spread from below. Concrete for other floors is optional, but the first floor is important because there are usually more fire hazards existing in the basement than in other parts of the average house.

The home owner, equipped with such structural features in his house, may never have cause to realize its true firesafeness until a fire actually threatens his dwelling. At such a time, the capacity of concrete for resisting fire becomes strikingly evident.

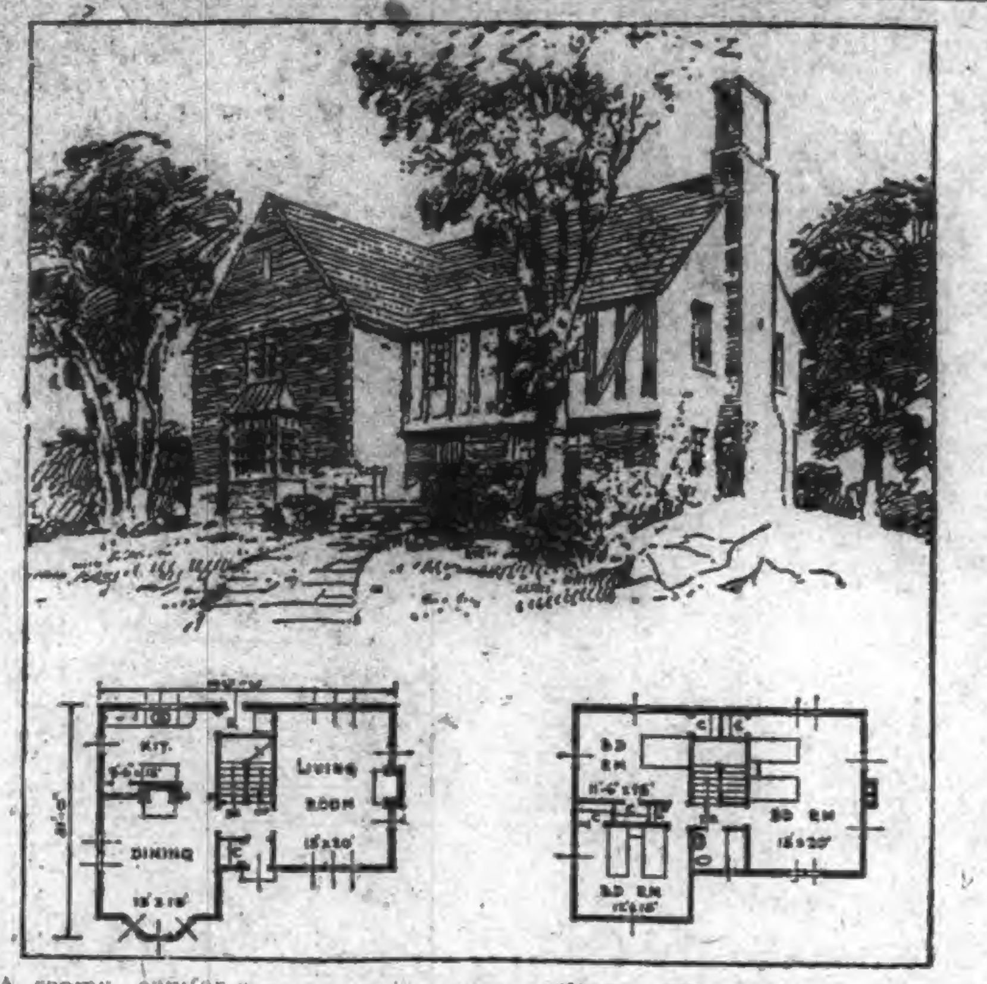
WHITEWASH EFFECTIVE FOR CLEAN-UP JOBS

Whitewash now! Autumn reminds the home owner to clean up and paint up. Whitewash does this job effectively and economically. It fits into the home program, which includes everything from the familiar rug-beating tasks imposed upon reluctant husbands and small boys to the aching backs caused by spading the backyard garden.

Neglecting exposed surfaces is "penny wise and pound foolish." A few cents may be saved at the time, but repairs made necessary by this saving will soon cost dollars. Whitewash improves appearance, brightens the cellar, the cottage, the shed and the barn and protects trees against worms and insect pests. It can be prepared easily and applied effectively.

Thin applications work best. Make the mixture thin enough so that the surface may be seen through the film while it is wet. The coating will dry opaque. Best results are obtained when the work is done in clear, dry weather.

Space Plentiful, Ventilation Free In English Home



A roomy, comfor[illegible] is [illegible] modern, English type house, especially suitable for a suburban residence.

It is compact despite its ample space, well-ventilated and dignified.

Both living and dining rooms face the front, and the former also extends through to the formal English garden in the rear. The fireplace is so placed as to form a splendid vista from the entrance hall.

Three good-sized bedrooms conveniently placed around a central bathroom comprise the second-floor plan. Each has good cross ventilation and ample closet space.

Below, the kitchen is well lighted and conveniently placed.

Interior finish of this house should blend with its English character. Dark natural wood with exposed beams in appropriate places and nicely textured rough p[illegible] recommended.

Exterior materials should be clapboard and stucco for the dining room wing, half timber and stucco with brick below on the first floor for the main part and the chimney end, together with chimney brick. Blue gray slate is recommended for the roof. Windows should be of the casement type, of which there are many good standard makes.

This house should face south to take full advantage of the location and should be intimately landscaped in the English manner.

A lot of 75 by 100 feet is good for a house of this character, although the ideal space would be 100 by 100 feet.

In most suburban localities this type of home would cost between $10,000 and $12,000.

CHUTES SEND LINEN TO HOME LAUNDRY

The sanitary way of collecting soiled linens is to send them directly to a receptacle in the basement laundry through a chute with openings on all floors. In this manner all soiled clothing and linens are disposed of until wash day and the housewife or laundress is relieved of carrying heavy, bulky bundles downstairs. Then, too, bathroom or hall space is not taken up with hampers.

The most satisfactory chute is of monel metal, a material which will not rust, chip, stain or in any way injure fabrics which are sent through it to the laundry room. Monel metal is a nickel-copper alloy of silvery color which combines the properties of several different metals into one.

Station Master—The pig cannot go in the carriage with you. It must have a special compartment.

Rustic—Thank you kindly, sir, but there is no need for all that ceremony about my old pig.—Dorfbarbier.

DECORATIVE NOTE IN THE BATHROOM

The bathroom is depicted as one of the show places of the modern American home in a recent issue of "Gas Logic."

"The utilitarian bath is no longer the shrinking violet of the household garden," it is pointed out. "It has blossomed forth in its own right and today qualifies as one of the greater enthusiasms in indoor sightseeing.

"The plumber used to have his own way with this branch of the household arts. Hot water furnished by the gas heater was the greatest need. Recently the interior decorator has put in his oar. Today there are decorators who confine their art to this field alone, furnishing that important room from bathtub to toothbrush. Period furnishings have come to give Queen Anne settings to the early morning shower or ancient Roman touches to the pre-dinner shave.

"Color is playing a big role in this field today, 25 per cent of the fixtures now put into homes being tinted. Pastel shades are favored with ivory and pale green heading the list in popularity. Lavatories are of beautiful vitreous china as fine as a piece of tableware."

POETRY

Out In The Open

Women's hats this fall will show their wearers' faces.—Fashion note.

Girls, it will be swell to meet you,
After all these years,
And I'll be on hand to greet you
As each face appears,
Crying out, with ready wit:
"Why, you haven't changed a bit!"

I have suffered from the dangers
Of your recent styles;
Waved my hand to perfect strangers,
Startled them with smiles—
Also, if the truth be told,
Passing friends, aloof and cold.

This, of course, makes complications,
Causes talk in town,
And I fear my explanations
Haven't quite gone down.
Some have thought I was unkind,
Some that I am going blind.

So I'll vow complete adherence
To your new chapeaus,
Since your autumn reappearance
Will, I hope, disclose,
With their old, accustomed graces,
Loved but long-forgotten faces!

—S. K. in Spokane Spokesman-Review

Evensong

In the evening when the shadows
Lengthen o'er the emerald grass,
When the cobalt of the heavens
To flaming radiances pass,
When the chores at last are over,
All the homey tasks are done,
And the birds break evening stillness
With their twittering, just begun,
Soft and delicate their music,
Sweetly plaintive more than gay;
'Tis the anthem of the evening
Marks the closing of the day.

Well-loved footsteps drawing nearer
Beat in tune upon the heart,
And the happiness of homing
From the very soul will start,
For with evening comes the master,
And the anthem seems to swell
To a pean of thanksgiving
For the joy of loving well,
And of being loved, revealing
What a day well spent shall bring:
Just the simple joy of evening—
Master's home, and birds may sing!

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"Oh, about one in ten."—Berlingske Tidende.

"I am so glad school holidays are over."

"Glad?"

"Yes. Now we can have some lovely times playing truant again."—Lustige Kolner Zeitung.

"My husband is just the opposite of me—whilst I sing he grumbles and growls."

"Then why not leave off singing?"—Fliegende Blaetter.

There was a shy young man who wanted to propose to his lady love but never dared. Finally he took her to his family lot in the cemetery and said: "Wouldn't you like to be buried here some day?"—Denison Flamingo.

"One can play on the soul just as one would on a violin."

"The married soul is more like a ukulele."

"Heh?"

"Something for a wife to pick on."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

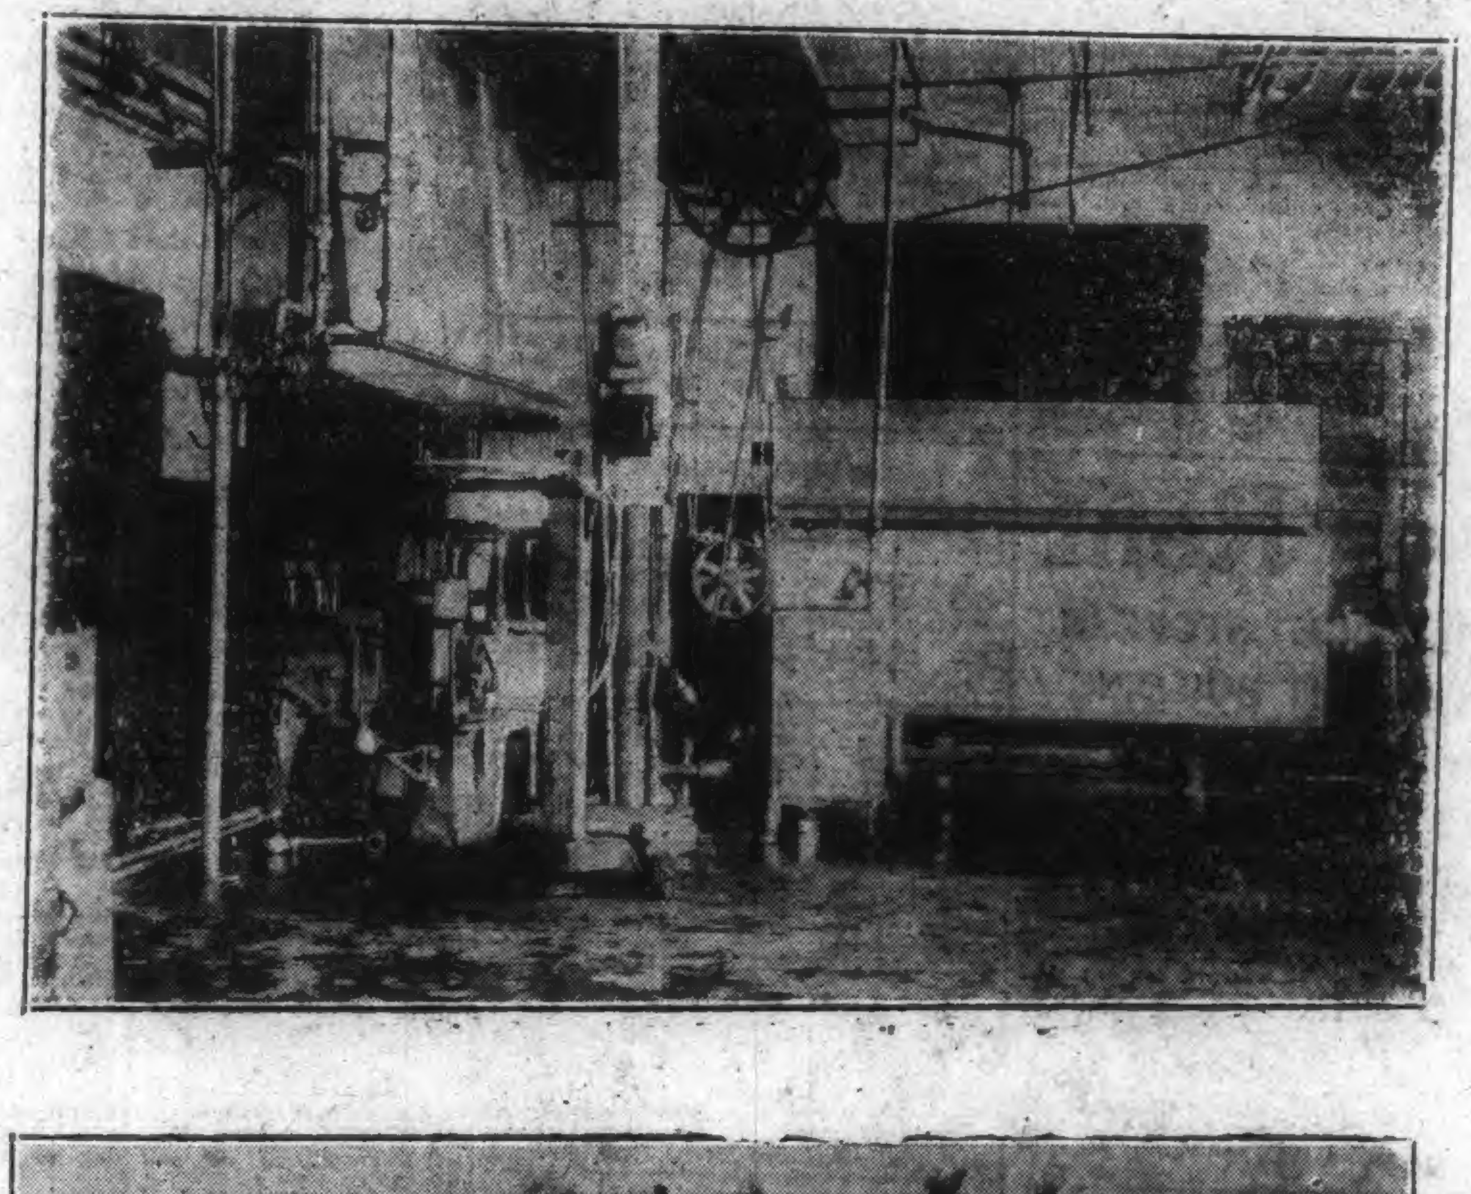
NEW PLANT OF THE NORWICH DAIRY CO.



Top—The Main Building of Dairy Co. at Norwich Town. Bottom—View of the Pasteurization Plant.

During the past summer a new dairy and ice cream plant was opened at Norwich Town by The Norwich Dairy Co., Henry Norrington, manager. The plant, which is pictured above, is located just off the old New London turnpike near the river. The building is of frame construction with composition shingled roof. The foundation and floor is of cement.

At one end of the building is located the garages and at the other end are the offices. In the center of the building is located the pasteurization plant and the ice cream-making machinery, along with the refrigeration plant. A large ice box and cooling room is built at the northwest corner of the building. A boiler for the steam and hot water for the pasteurization of the milk is at the south end of the building in the rear of the garages.

The pasteurization plant, which is pictured here, is one of the most modern and sanitary of any in the state. From the time the milk leaves the cans brought in by the dairymen from the vicinity of Norwich, until it is passed out to the delivery men in sealed bottles it is not touched by hands. The large pasteurizing vat at the right in the picture can be seen. The cooling apparatus and the automatic bottling and capping machine can be seen at the left of the photograph. The milk, from the time it passes into the vat until it is put into the bottles, is never exposed to the air.

The cooling box and refrigerator are in the rear of the pasteurization plant. The cooling carries a temperature of about 50 degrees while in the refrigerator where the ice cream is stored it runs anywhere from zero to 16 below zero.

The ice cream machinery is at the rear of the main room and the ice cream is made without being stirred or touched by hands. The cream and flavoring and other ingredients of the ice cream are poured into the freezer and come out partly frozen, the remainder of the freezing process being accomplished in the refrigerator.

The refrigeration plant includes the compressor, ammonia tank, vaporizer, and the condenser. This is located to the left of the ice cream plant.

There are mechanical bottle-washers and can-washers with sterilizing apparatus. The plant is one of the most sanitary and modern in eastern Connecticut.

NEW LONDON COUNCIL'S PROBLEMS ARE TAXATION AND RE-VALUATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 6.—The members of the city council elected last month took office this evening. They were Councilors Fox, Morgan, Scott and Murray. The meeting was called to order by the city clerk who administered the oath of office to the new members. Mayor Morgan, in taking office, said the major problem confronting the council is taxation and the re-arrangement of values. The last raise of the grand list was in many instances unreasonable and unjust, many pieces of property being raised far above the real or sale value. The inflated valuation has caused much uneasiness and apprehension and was the cause of the formation of the taxpayers' league. He said this matter of taxation and re-valuation can be handled by the assessors' office and the advice of real estate agents. Many say the town hall is overburdened with officials and assistants, but he said he would not speak on that matter now.

He asked the councilors to give him their cooperation throughout the year.

Thirteen applications for building permits were granted.

Resolutions providing for the borrowing of money for city expenses and the instructing of the issuance of notes was voted.

Permission was given the Hartford Land and Mortgage Co. to tear down the building at 46 Bristol street. The property has been purchased by the Mohican company.

G. E. Prentice deeded land to the city for the construction of a road, Oakland road, from Ocean avenue to Parkway. The deed was accepted.

Only two changes were made in the standing committees, Twomey being put at the head of administration and Fox to public works.

Councilor Minor reported on the budget; it has been completed but meetings are being held by the committees. It provides for increasing the tuition of out of town pupils in the schools. The committee had heard members of the Connecticut Power Co., as to the cost of lighting the schools. It was said that there may be a reduction of $100,000. That is the figure that has been set up.

A member of the chamber of commerce is to appear before the committee Thursday evening as to lighting the streets during the Christmas season.

A committee of the Y. M. C. A. asked permission to hold a marathon Thanksgiving day and asked the city to give two trophies. The course is to be up Main street, Williams street, Jefferson avenue to Ocean avenue and up Montauk avenue to the point of beginning. The permission to hold the marathon was given, but the city has no authority to give its funds for trophies; so that they must be provided by popular subscription.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars, through General M. B. Paine, asked for the provision of markers at the airport at Groton. Markers will be placed on the state pier. Arthur Rudd asked for a conference with the council as to the situation in regard to bathhouses at Ocean Beach. The competition there now has made it impossible for him to carry out the provisions of his contract and he asked for relief.

The council instructed the mayor to call a conference of members of the council, the assessor and board of relief to go into the matter of re-assessment and re-valuation of property. This conference is to be held so that action may be taken before Feb. 1. The council is made up now the same as last year, except Councilor Robert B. Chappell, his term expired and he was not re-elected.

Clarence McNeil, 20 Farnsworth street, reported to the police on the night of Oct. 3rd that his bicycle had been stolen from Bank street. Today, the youth informed that he had recovered the cycle, which he found in possession of Joseph Burgess, a student at Wintrop school, but a tire was missing and the cycle was otherwise damaged. The youth will be presented in the juvenile court.

Jesse Carlson, 27, of Plymouth, N. H., and Jack Brogan, 33, who claims to be without a home, were arrested this afternoon by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh, charged with vagrancy. The men were soliciting money from pedestrians. Carlson and Brogan will be in court tomorrow.

Prowler At College

A telephone message was sent to police headquarters early this evening that a prowler was on the grounds of the Connecticut College for Women. Automobile Patrol Officer went to the college, but could not find any trace of the supposed prowler.

Dr. Benjamin W. Gaines, U. S. N., residing at 165 Vauxhall street, made complaint to the police because of the act of a malicious person, undoubtedly a youth. While the physician's automobile was parked in front of his home, the trouble-maker went to the car and released the air from the tires.

WEDDING

Prottas—Charron

Frank S. Prottas, Squire street, and son of Mrs. Ida Prottas, and Miss Mildred Charron, daughter of Mrs. Eva Charron, of Norwich, were married Saturday night at the Federal street synagogue by Rabbi David Traub. Rubin Prottas, Niantic, brother of the groom, and Dr. Charles Solomon, uncle of the bride, attended the couple. Upon their return from a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Prottas will reside at 107 Squire street. Mr. Prottas is proprietor of a Bank [illegible] shoe store.

Announcement is made by William Linger, of Northampton, Mass., formerly of Groton, of the engagement of his daughter, Miss Anne Linger, to Harold R. Ursprung, son of Mrs. Joseph Ursprung, Bank street. Miss Linger is residing with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Carl R. Peterson, at Uncasville. The wedding will take place in January, at Uncasville.

The engagement is announced of Mrs. Margaret Louise Muise, daughter of Mrs. William B. Ward, of Poquonoc Bridge, to Robert E. Chester, of Farmington. Mrs. Muise is employed as nurse at Seaside sanatorium, Niantic.

Miss Jane McBride, of Lincoln avenue, has resumed her duties as typist in the office of City Clerk Julian D. Moran, after her vacation of two weeks.

Robert Capwell, 17, of Quaker Hill, Waterford, was arrested today by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh, charged with theft. He was released in the custody of his parents and will be in the police court tomorrow. The youth was arrested following complaint being made that he had stolen a quantity of brass from the shipyard of the Thames Towboat company.

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S TRAIN RUNS THROUGH TO BOSTON

President Herbert Hoover passed through New London this forenoon, en route to Boston where this morning he delivered an address at the convention of the American Legion at the Boston arena and this afternoon spoke before members of the American Federation of Labor at a Boston hotel. The president's special, composed of six cars, passed through New London, at 7.15 o'clock. The train did not stop at the union station, but a few of the passengers on the platform obtained a view of the nation's chief executive. He appeared on the platform of the observation car as the train was passing, waving a greeting to the small crowd. A detail of New London and state police were at the depot until after the departure of the train, together with railroad special agents, but there was no need of their services. The president's special passed through here on the return trip at 6.15 o'clock.

TOWN COUNCIL TRANSACTS MUCH BUSINESS AT OCTOBER SESSION

WESTERLY, Oct. 6.—The October meeting of the Westerly town council was held on Monday morning at the council chambers of the town hall with all councilmen present. Council Attorney John Ferguson was absent.

Town Clerk Everett E. Whipple reported the receipt of papers as required under Rhode Island laws relative to the condemnation proceedings of the New Haven railroad against Angelo Cappuccio, of Westerly, in which the railroad seeks to obtain a 50-foot wide strip of land easterly from the High street railroad dry bridge and adjoining on the north the present property of the railroad, the land having formerly been the property purchased by Cappuccio from the Ashaway branch of the old Norwich & Westerly Electric railway. Announcements were also received from the public utilities committee of a hearing on the subject in Room 17 at the Rhode Island state house in Providence on Sept. 17.

Frank LaPere appeared before the council relative to a petition from this year's Columbus day celebration committee in Westerly, seeking a permit on next Sunday to have a football game on the Westerly athletic field off High street. He had also a signed waivure of all objections from abutting property owners who understood that the proceeds of the football game were to be used to help defray the expenses of erecting a statue of Christopher Columbus in Westerly. On motion of Councilman Archie Meikle, the council voted the approval with the usual police protection and made it known distinctly that this was not to be an opening wedge for the playing of regular Sunday games and was only a special permit for this special purpose and occasion.

Council President Horace E. Burdick brought up the matter of service charges by the South County Public Service Co. of Westerly relative to meters being left in Watch Hill and other shore properties with the statement that a double charge was now the rule of the utility company. The upshot of the discussion was the passage of a vote directing General Manager Burnet to appear at the November town council meeting and explain the charges made.

When bills amounting to $62.50 for damage done by dogs to fowl of Timothy Gilchrist and Catherine Panciera were voted paid, Police Committeeman Archie Meikle explained that a particularly vicious female dog had been followed by both regular and special police officers of the town and one had been traced to a retreat in the swamp at the rear of the Quarry Hill school. It was thought by the police department that the dog had been killed and a litter of pups had also been killed. Ravaged hen yards inspected by Special Appraisal Officer Rogers E. Trainer showed in one case of some 40 or more fowl killed and the bodies scattered about.

A bill of over $200 of Special Tree Warden Everett Barns for trimming trees and damages was approved by the council with the final approval by the officer.

The council decided to hold up a communication received from the Westerly chamber of commerce relative to physical examination of food handlers in public eating places.

The matter of closing over the Pierce street brook which runs under Pleasant street and Canal street into the Pawcatuck river and recently cleaned out under the superintendency of Councilman Joseph Fraser was referred back to him to investigate further and bring in recommendations to the council. He said that a proper covering of this trouble-giving brook from stench and odors due to filth and refuse thrown in it would cost some $20,000.

On the petition of Julia Trefes, the war department office in Providence communicated to the council her desire to put in a new face wall on the Pawcatuck side of the river and fill in back of it just north of the Broad street bridge. The councilmen expressed themselves as opposed to the plan and that Solicitor Ferguson should be sent to Providence to oppose the plans at the hearing on Oct. 13, next.

Westerly Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown submitted his monthly report for September, showing 16 arrests, as follows: Two were for intoxication, one for idle person, three for assault, two suspicious person, one non-support, one holding political meeting without a permit, one liquor raid, and five for automobile law violations.

Dr. Samuel C. Webster reported that there were no contagious diseases during the past month.

Building Inspector Thomas Wills reported that 31 permits had been granted during the past month. Two were for residences and one was an industrial permit.

Joseph Bruno was granted a victualing license for a place on Pierce street with the understanding that the place close at 11 p. m.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

Gloria Swanson, one of the most glorious girls on the screen, is the star of "What a Widow!" which is now playing at the Palace theatre, where it will be shown through Wednesday of this week.

"What a Widow!" is the story of a girl, who, after the death of her husband, who was formerly her guardian, decides that she has been curbed long enough and desires to get out and see the world. She books passage on a trans-Atlantic steamer and sails for Paris. En route she meets many interesting and charming people, who, while they are sophisticated appeal to her starved senses. Before she realizes what has happened she finds that she has become involved in an amazing tangle of complications which become so difficult that a really amusing unfolding of the polt is the result.

The star has a fine opportunity to reveal her ability and she sings three new song hits. Miss Swanson is supported by a fine cast including Owen Moore, Lew Cody and Margaret Livingston.

On Wednesday the Palace will present a double feature including "Hell's Harbor," with Lupe Velez and a fine cast and "Sweethearts on Parade," with Alice White.

Connecticut Boy is Healthiest

"MY little son, Philip, suffered from constipation," says Mrs. C. W. Blaney, 75 Capitol Ave., Hartford, Conn. "He was having a hard time until I heard of California Fig Syrup and got him some. The first few doses regulated his bowels, brightened him up marvelously; even seemed to give him new strength and energy.

"I have since used Fig Syrup with Philip during colds or upsets. It has been a wonderful help to him; has assisted in making him the strong boy you see—perhaps the healthiest one in our neighborhood."

For more than fifty years mothers have praised California Fig Syrup. Leading physicians advise its use with bilious, headachy, constipated children, or to keep the bowels open during colds or children's diseases. Children love its rich, fruity flavor. It tones and strengthens weakened bowels; helps make children robust.

MAYOR MAKES RECRFATION COMMISSION APPOINTMENT; DEFERS HEALTH OFFICER

Mayor Lee Roy Robbins appointed Eben Learned, Jr., for a seven-year term on the city recreation commission at the October meeting of the common council Monday evening in the council chamber. This was a renomination, as Mr. Learned had been appointed about a year ago to fill a vacancy on the commission occasioned by the death of John M. Lee.

The mayor told the council that he was not yet ready to make an appointment of a city health officer to take the place of Dr. E. J. Brophy, who resigned, effective Oct. 1. Mayor Robbins spoke in praise of the service which Dr. Brophy had given the city in the 15 years that he had held the office. He said he had seven applicants for the place but wished more time to consider the appointment to this important position.

The council meeting was called to order at 9 o'clock, after the members had been in executive session for an hour in the mayor's office. In the absence of City Clerk Weston C. Pullen, who was reported away from the city on a vacation, Corporation Counsel E. W. Perkins served as clerk pro tem. The business of the council meeting was disposed of in 30 minutes.

Petitions Received

Petitions were received and referred to committees as follows:

Andrew Wytkiewicz, to have gutter and street finished at 61 Seventh street; public works committee with power.

Gertrude M. L. Gould, for removal of tree at 57 Pearl street; public works committee with power.

Abraham Krieger and 20 others, for widening of Franklin street by reducing sidewalk widths; public works committee for recommendations with estimates.

A. J. Slattery and others, for bug light on Swan avenue, Charles H. Barnes and others for light between 52 and 54 Hedge avenue, Roger O. Jansen and others, for light on Carter avenue; to police commissioners with power.

George E. Pitcher petitioned to have certain traffic ordinance amendments adopted Oct. 5, 1925, either enforced or repealed as he claimed they are not enforced now; referred to police commissioners. These cover regulations against turning around on Main street and Franklin square, parking on west side of lower Broadway and other regulations.

Claims Presented

The claim of Matilda Anderson of 22 Clay avenue was referred to the finance committee and the corporation counsel. She claims to have broken a bone in her foot on the sidewalk at 66 McKinley avenue in September, 1930.

A claim was also received from Sanford D. Pickett and was later voted settled for $40 on his claim for spraining his right ankle when his crutch caught in a hole in the sidewalk at Cliff and Main streets on Sept. 4, 1930. He was using a crutch at the time because he had broken his leg.

Committee Reports

Councilman John H. Sherman reported for the police commissioners that a light asked for at St. Patrick's church had been installed, the red had been changed to amber in the blinker light at Washington street and Broadway, and the blinker light at McKinley avenue and Broad street has been partially installed.

In regard to a complaint made by George E. Pitcher regarding the Connecticut Co. allowing a trolley car to stand on Franklin square, the councilman reported that the Connecticut Co. had given assurance that it would take care of this as best it could. He said that the common council could not pass ordinances regulating the trolley company.

Alderman Maurice Looby reported for the public works department that a tree in Church street had been removed on petition of William H. Shields.

Department Bills

The monthly reports of street department and of City Treasurer Charles S. Avery were presented and accepted without reading and the council adjourned after approving the department bills, as follows:

Finance (44), $20,939.41; public works (53) $17,601.59; gas and electric (226), $50,817.30; water (47), $7,998.10; police (17), $6,774.20; street lighting, $2,436.60; cemeteries (16), $832.86; fire (20), $8,047.38; park (13), $1,078.89; recreation (14), $295.76.

NORWICH CHORAL SOCIETY PLANS FOR SEASON

Music lovers of Norwich will welcome with pleasure and satisfaction the news that the Choral society is about to resume its activities. There has been so much interest shown in the work of this Norwich enterprise during the past three years, that both the active as well as the associate members of the society are looking forward eagerly to the coming years of enthusiastic practice on worthwhile works of great composers. It is the ambition of the committee to make the Choral society a permanent feature of Norwich, thus adding and retaining a highly educational factor along this line of art. The work done by such a body of music-loving people cannot be overestimated and as Norwich is most fortunate in counting among citizens a very large percentage of men and women willing to give time and talent to the production of fine music, great progress is anticipated.

The committee has been fortunate in securing Allen B. Lambdin of Connecticut college again, and has chosen Mendelssohn's "Elijah" for study for the Christmas concert, the rehearsals for which will begin presently.

"Elijah" remains still one of the most dramatic oratorios. From beginning to end there is a wealth of beautiful melodies. It is difficult to chose from among the 42 numbers the most beautiful one. Among the best known ones are the following arias: "Lift thine eyes," "Rest in the Lord," "If with all your heart you seek Him," and the heart-stirring cry of Elijah, "It is enough."

It is hoped by those in charge that the chorus will number about a hundred voices and for the solo parts the best artists will be secured.

WHEELBARROW RIDE IN OCCUM PAYS BET

Herbert "Pop" Richards of Occum had a ride in a wheelbarrow from Richards store, Occum, to the Taftville switch and back on Monday, the vehicle being propelled by Lewis Caisse of Occum. This all happened because Caisse wagered with Richards on the Cards-Athletics game Sunday and lost. The loser of the bet was to push the barrow between the two points and return with the winner occupying the vehicle. Caisse received sore hands as the result of losing the bet, but claims that he is willing to make the same wager again.

PUTNAM FIRE CHIEF DIES IN FALL RIVER HOSPITAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 6.—Ralph E. Thurston, 53, widely known official of the Connecticut Light & Power Co., chief of the Putnam fire department and chairman of the city water commission, died a few minutes before 9:30 o'clock tonight at the Truesdell hospital in Fall River, Mass., where he had been dangerously ill for more than a month. Chief Thurston was stricken early in September by an ulcerated tooth through which poison seeped into his system. He entered the Fall River hospital and was given every treatment known to medical science, but the malady increased in proportion, rapidly developing into complications, rendering his condition so critical that only small hope for his recovery was held by his intimate associates.

Chief Thurston was born in Fall River, Mass., Aug. 6, 1877, and was graduated from Massachusetts Institute of Technology with a degree of engineering in 1903. He went to Chicago where he entered the service of the Edison Electrical Illuminating Co., working there until 1906, when he came to Putnam as an engineer for the Putnam Light & Power Co. Shortly afterwards he was made general manager of the company, a position that he held until Aug. 1 of this year, when he was transferred to the Eastern Connecticut division of the Connecticut Light & Power Co., and made supervisor of power distribution with the district serving Putnam, Danielson, Baltic and Lyme. He retained his headquarters in this city but previous to his illness was expected to be transferred to a more central point in the division. He was devoted to his executive duties and his ability and competence won him the respect and admiration of his superiors.

In 1922 Mr Thurston was appointed chief of the fire department, a position he held until his death. He was an ardent student of the most modern methods of fire fighting and carefully instructed his subordinates in all new developments which he learned through his constant study and observation of tactics employed by fire executives in the larger cities. During his incumbency, Chief Thurston continually stressed the need of an entire new line of equipment for his department. It was his hope that a new fire station together with additional and more adequate apparatus would be provided. Two years and a half ago Chief Thurston further displayed his public spiritedness when, at the request of Mayor Charles A. Richard, he consented to become chairman of the board of water commissioners, accepting at the same time the great responsibility of directing the reconstruction work of the municipal water system.

Aside from the newest responsibilities he shouldered as a public utility executive and a city official, Chief Thurston had numerous fraternal affiliations. He was past exalted ruler of Putnam lodge of Elks and custodian of the Elks building. Recently he was presented with a certificate of life membership in that society in recognition of his acts of meritorious service. He was a member of Quinebaug lodge, F. and A. M., a 32nd degree Mason and a member of Sphinx temple of Hartford. He was also a member of the Columbian commandery, K. T., No. 4, of Norwich, and of the Scottish rites. Chief Thurston was a talented pianist and organist.

News of the death of the well-known official cast a shroud of deep sorrow over this city tonight and brought from Mayor Charles A. Richard the statement: "His loss is an irreconcilable one, except in the knowledge that here was a man of true conscience and high morale, who was fair and ethical in all his dealings."

Chief Thurston is survived by a sister, Mrs. Cora E. Terry, of Fall River, and a nephew, Carl Terry, a prominent Fall River attorney. He was not married.

SENTENCED ON THREE COUNTS AFTER VOLUNTOWN COLLISION

Lloyd Barber, of Hopkinton, R. I., was before a justice of the peace court in Voluntown on Sunday and was sentenced to ten days in jail for drunken driving, fined $10 and costs for driving without license and $5 and costs for driving an unregistered car.

Rose Bernard, of Taftville, who was riding in the Taftville machine, suffered a sprained back and injury to her left leg.

SUES FOR $25,000 FOR INJURIES IN AUTO CRASH

Miss Loretta M. Kelly, of this city, who was a passenger in an automobile owned by John B. Paradis, of Taftville, when it was in collision with a car owned by Louis P. Faucher, of Thompson, has brought suit against Paradis and Faucher for $25,000 damages for the injuries she received. As she is a minor, the suit is brought through her father, John P. Kelly, and is returnable in the superior court in November.

The collision was on Feb. 14, 1930, at the underpass on the Newent road in the town of Lisbon. Miss Kelly claims that her injuries consisted of concussion of the brain, fractured vertebra of the neck, lacerations of the scalp, arms and legs, through which she was obliged to spend large sums of money and was prevented from pursuing her usual occupation.

This is the third suit to be brought on account of this accident.

FINE OF $200 ON WET DRIVING CHARGE

In the city court Monday morning a fine of $200 and costs was imposed upon Walter Sirko, 35, of Preston when he was found guilty on the charge of driving under the influence of liquor. A second count of evading responsibility was nolled.

Sirko was arrested on the night of Sept. 28, after the machine he was driving ran into an automobile owned by Beit Bros. The collision took place on North Thames street and it was claimed Sirko drove away and was caught by the police at the corner of West Main and High streets.

A process to make rayon fur fabric has been patented.

2nd ACTION

MAKE THIS TEST—See for yourself how Calumet Baking Powder acts twice to make your baking better. Put two level teaspoons of Calumet into a glass, add two teaspoons of water, stir rapidly five times and remove the spoon. The tiny, fine bubbles will rise slowly, half filling the glass. This is Calumet's first action—the action that Calumet specially provides to take place in your mixing bowl.

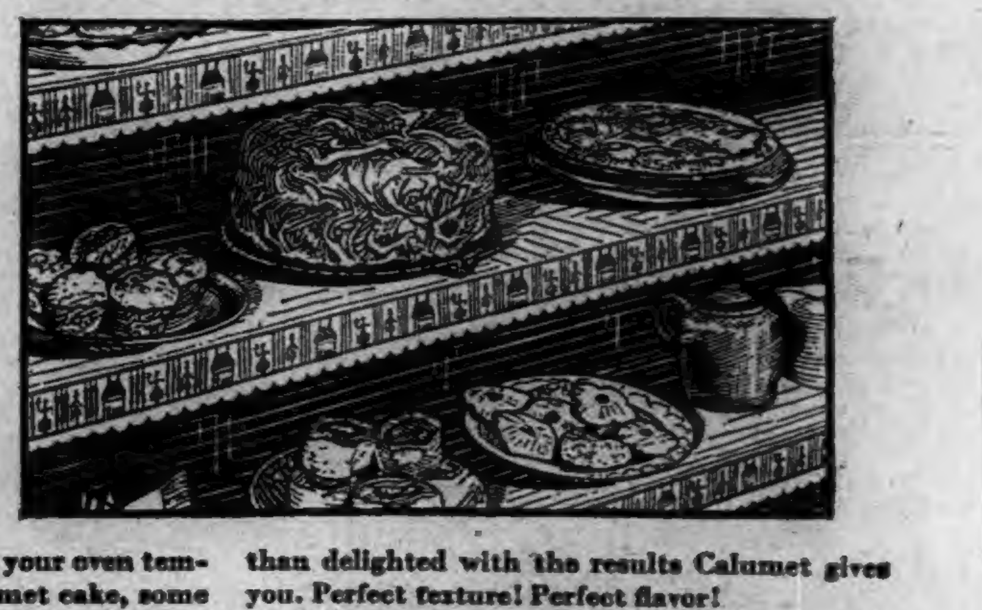
After the mixture has entirely stopped rising, stand the glass in a pan of hot water on the stove. In a moment, a second rising will start and continue until the mixture reaches the top of the glass. This is Calumet's second action—the action that Calumet holds in reserve to take place in your oven. Make this test to-day. See Calumet's Double-Action which protects your baking from failure.

It's wonderful what Calumet's DOUBLE-ACTION does for cakes and biscuits



YOU can feel sure your biscuits and cakes will be perfect when you use Calumet Baking Powder, for it has double-action. Two leavening actions that protect your baking from failure and make it light, fluffy, fine-textured.

Calumet's first action, in the mixing bowl, gets the leavening properly started. Then, in the oven, the second action swells through the batter and holds it high and light—even though you may not be able to regulate your oven temperature perfectly. Bake a Calumet cake, some muffins or quick bread. See why it is the largest-selling baking powder in the world to-day.

Only One Level Teaspoon of Calumet to a Cup of Sifted Flour!

That's the usual Calumet proportion. Be sure to follow it even though you may have been using nearly twice as much with other baking powders. You'll be delighted with this economy! And more than delighted with the results Calumet gives you. Perfect texture! Perfect flavor!

All baking powders are required by law to be made of pure, wholesome ingredients. But not all are alike in their action nor in the amount that should be used. And not all will give you equally fine results in your baking. Calumet is scientifically made of exactly the right ingredients, in exactly the right proportions to produce perfect leavening action—Double-Action. Get a can of Calumet from your grocer to-day. Notice Calumet comes in full-sized 16 ounce cans.

HOOVER WOULD SAFEGUARD AMERICAN INSTITUTIONS

In Address On Kings Mountain, S. C. Battle Ground, the Chief Executive Cited the Growth of Foreign Systems of Government Which Would Destroy "The Driving Force of Equality"—Warned That "Socialism, or Its Violent Brother, Bolshevism," Would Destroy the Spirit of Equality Upon Which This Government is Founded—Could Not Conceive Any Sound Government That Does Not Have Its Roots in Religious Faith

KINGS MOUNTAIN BATTLEFIELD, S. C., Oct. 7.—(AP)—In a mountain valley close beside the Kings Mountain battleground, descendants of the small band of patriots who fought there in 1780 today heard President Hoover plead for the preservation of American institutions which had their birth in the Revolutionary war.

Citing the growth of foreign systems of government which he said destroy "the driving force of equality," the president said, "It is the first duty of those of us who believe in the American system to maintain a knowledge of and a pride in it, not particularly because we need fear those foreign systems, but because we have need to sustain ours in purity and strength."

Thousands of persons, forming a panorama up the hillside across from where Mr. Hoover spoke, stood in a bleaching sun to hear him. Huge amplifiers carried his voice across the hills. Rows of automobiles stretched away into the surrounding cornfields. Towering above the scene was a monument to the memory of the Americans who died in the momentous battle there.

It was a scene reminiscent of the president's address at Elizabethton, Tenn., during his pre-election campaign in 1928, and once again the man who just 24 hours before had been the stern economist dealing with business problems before the American Federation of Labor in Boston, turned his words to the ideals and intangibles of government.

Only a few miles away were the textile mills which only last year were torn by communist-stirred strikes, and to employes of those mills who grouped in front of him, many of them in overalls, Mr. Hoover warned that "socialism or its violent brother, bolshevism," would destroy the spirit of equality upon which this government is founded.

Deprecates Bolshevism

"In the American system," Mr Hoover said, "through free and universal education, we train the runners. We strive to give them an equal start. Our government is the umpire of its fairness. The winner is he who shows the most conscientious training, the greatest ability, the strongest character. Socialism or its violent brother bolshevism, would compel all the runners to end the race equally; it would hold the swiftest to the speed of the most backward. Anarchy would provide neither training nor umpire. Despotism or class government picks those who run and also those who win.

"Whatever the merits or demerits of these other systems may be, they all mean the destruction of the driving force of equal opportunity and they mean the destruction of our Constitution, for our political framework would serve none of them and many of its fundamental provisions are the negation of them. They mean the abandonment of the nation's spiritual heritage."

Holding that he could not conceive of a wholesome social order or a sound economic system that does not have its roots in religious faith, the president said: "It is significant that some of these systems deny religion and seek to expel it."

"No blind materialism can for long engage the loyalties of mankind," he said. "Economic aspiration, though it marks strongly the American system, is not an end in itself, but is only one of those many instruments to accomplish the profound purposes of the American people, which are largely religious in origin. This country is supremely dedicated not to the pursuit of material riches, but to pursuit of a richer life for the individual.

"While we cannot permit any foreign person or agency to undermine our institutions, yet we must look to our own conduct that we do not by our own failure to uphold and safeguard the true spirit of America, weaken our own institutions and destroy the very forces which upbuild our national greatness."

Soon after the special train upon which the President and Mrs. Hoover came from Boston crossed the North Carolina state line, evidence was given of the welcome which he was to receive in the southern state which gave him its electoral vote in 1928.

Groups of people appeared at several points along the railway tracks and at Greensboro, the first stop in the state, hundreds awaited the president's coming at the station.

At Thomasville, while several hundred school children stood at attention along the sidewalk, and at Salisbury and Charlotte, the train paused while the President and Mrs. Hoover bowed and smiled.

Arriving at Kings Mountain, N. C., where the boom of the presidential salute greeted him, the president was driven to a reviewing stand in front of which a military parade lasting nearly half an hour passed.

About him in the stand were Governors Richards of South Carolina, Gardner of North Carolina and Hardman of Georgia; Stuart Cramer, North Carolina republican leader, and textile man; Generals Frank McCoy and Albert J. Bowley, and Senators Overman of North Carolina and Smith and Blease of South Carolina.

After motoring eight miles across the state line into South Carolina to deliver his address at the battleground, the president returned immediately to his special train to depart for the capital, completing his swing which included two speeches yesterday in Boston.

The departure was the only part of the long trip that failed to function smoothly. The president's special train had been parked behind another and when he arrived was blocked off from the station.

For nearly 15 minutes, Mr. and Mrs Hoover sat in their open car in the sun, while crowds milled about the guards who kept them at a distance.

MEMORIAL DEDICATED TO BRITISH COMMANDER

KINGS MOUNTAIN BATTLEGROUND, S. C., Oct. 7.—(AP)—Symbolizing the bonds of friendship and peace between the citizens of the United States and Great Britain, a memorial was dedicated here today to Colonel Patrick Ferguson, British commander slain in the Revolutionary war battle here.

The monument, the gift of R. E. Scroggins, of Charlotte, N. C., was presented to Ronald Campbell, charge d'affaires of the British embassy at Washington. It bears this inscription:

"This memorial is from the citizens of the United States of America in token of their appreciation of the bonds of friendship and peace between them and the citizens of the British empire."

Justice Heriot Clarkson of the North Carolina supreme court, in presenting the memorial, said:

"Standing today upon this solemn spot, sanctified by the blood of patriot and loyalist, all differences vanish, all misunderstandings perish, and all strife is hushed, because we are assembled in the presence of the ashes of heroic death."

DOUBTS PRACTICABILITY OF GULF STREAM ELECTRICITY

HAVANA, Oct. 7.—(AP)—Some doubt as to the practicability of the experiment of Prof. George Claude, French scientist who yesterday gave a demonstration of his ability to make variations of gulf stream temperatures produce electrical energy, was expressed today by Dr. Luciano De Goicochea, dean of the department of electrical engineering of the University of Havana.

Prof. Claude yesterday made forty 500 candle power bulbs glow for a half hour with energy produced from sea water temperature variations. It was his first demonstration before other men of science, and the Frenchman was hailed as the pioneer of a great new movement which might revolutionize industrial power methods.

"My opinion," Dr. Goicochea said, "is that there seems to be some doubt as to the possibility of Professor Claude's production of cheap power—the chief advantage sought by the scientist.

"Let us consider the matter on the basis of press reports which state that he has been able to light 40 bulbs of 500 candlepower each, which is equivalent to an energy of 25 to 30 horsepower. Is this the maximum capacity of Professor Claude's plant?

"If the 30 h. p. obtained yesterday is the maximum to be obtained by the Matanzas plant, consider the cost of a plant powerful enough to supply a city requiring 40,000 h. p. for its electrical needs.

REMINISCES OF THE "MILLION DOLLAR KID"

NEW YORK, Oct. 7—(AP)—Byron Chandler, of Boston, who lit the red fire of good clean fun up and down Broadway a generation ago, arrived on the liner Paris today to let it be known that a playboy's life along the great white way isn't what it used to be when he won the sobriquet of the million dollar kid.

"Why, in those days," he said, and a reminiscent smile lit the pleasant face of this playboy of yesteryear, a playboy gone gray and going bald, "a fellow could do more with $100 in a Broadway evening than he could with $1,000 now.

"I made a splash then, but I couldn't even make a ripple now. Nor I wouldn't want to now. There isn't any Broadway any more. It was all good clean fun then. Everybody was out for a good time. If I tried to do the things now that I did 20 years ago I'd be arrested in five minutes. Nobody would understand.

"No, I'm through with Broadway. I'm fixed all right, though I haven't the money I used to have, but even if I did it wouldn't show any more. I'm going to Palm Beach this winter and then back to Europe; I don't expect to make America my permanent home any more."

70,000 Legionnaires In Parade At Boston

One of the Greatest Military Spectacles New Englan[illegible] Has Ever Witnessed

BOSTON, Oct. 7.—(AP)—St[illegible] echoed the tread of revolutio[illegible] heroes rang today with the [illegible] of 70,000 American Legionnaires in one of the greatest military spectacles New England has ever witnessed.

Before the eyes of the crowds that packed every bit of available street space and peered down from office buildings the Legionnaires and their auxiliary members marched through flag-draped streets to the tunes of 400 bands in a parade which started in the morning sunlight and ended after the darkness had fallen.

Feet that sloughed through the mud of Flanders, that packed down the snow of Archangel and paced the decks of battleships sounded their cadence under a clear blue sky. From right and left came the cheers of the crowd and from overhead the navy dirigible Los Angeles and scores of small planes sent down the steady drone of motors.

There were the tunes of 1917, "The Long, Long Trail," "Hinky Dinky Parles-Vous," "K-K-K-Katy" and scores of others. It was thoroughly a veterans' day. The business of a national convention was forgotten in the riot of color, the bands and the cheering.

The parade route carried them past "the cradle of liberty," Faneuil hall; over the scene of the famous Boston massacre, past the old state house wherein spoke Hancock and the Adamses, along Boston's historic common and the Lafayette hall and over Beacon Hill past the present state house.

From all over the world the Legionnaires had come, Greece, France, Alaska, Panama, the Philippines and Porto Rico. Although the practiced step of 13 years ago was duller, one and all flashed a snappy "eyes right" as they passed the reviewing stand on Tremont street. From the stand General John J. Pershing, war-time leader of the doughboys, looked down on his comrades of grimmer days. By his side stood General Henri Gouraud, war hero of France, saluting with his left hand while his empty right sleeve hung by his side.

In the stand, too, was Sir William Hickie of Ireland, a distinguished veteran of the British army. With him was Legionnaire Patrick J. Hurley, now secretary of war, and Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams of a New England family that has given two presidents to its country. And proud, too, of his comrades was National Commander O. L. Bodenhamer of the legion as he watched them pass.

Generals Pershing and Gouraud received a tremendous ovation as they rode at the head of the parade until it reached the reviewing stand. Boston was glad to welcome this American hero but it was also glad to show the bearded "Lion of the Somme", that America's ally had not been forgotten in the 12 years that have passed since the armistice.

The parade was a steady blare of bands and a riot of color. There was the delegation from France with one of the famous "40 hommes et 8 chevaux" box cars that wheeled the doughboys to the front.

Scores of men, women and children collapsed or fainted during the crush and were treated at emergency stations established along the line of march.

All automobile traffic was barred from the center of the city during the parade period and all Boston policemen were on extra duty. Supply wagons fed the policemen at their posts.

CONNECTICUT PROMINENT IN PARADE IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Oct. 7.—(AP)—To an appreciable degree today, it was a New England parade which 1,000,000 spectators watched pass by on Boston streets. From Maine to Connecticut came a host of Legionnaires, auxiliary members and, of course, visitors. They thronged the sidelines and helped substantially to fill the streets with feet that stepped in rythmic unison. New England's six states more than held their own with a galaxy of bands, fife and drum, and bugle and drum corps which blared their way over the long course.

Connecticut came well advertised. It headed its departmental section with a banner which informed all who cared to read that "Connecticut came to the defense of Boston in 1775." Then came the well known Governor Foot Guard from Hartford, making a brave showing with its scarlet uniforms and busbys, followed by the 102nd infantry band from New Haven, and the William H. Gordon post, number 50, five and drum corps from Ansonia. West Haven sent a bugle and drum corps in blue, white and silver and then the advertising started.

Waterbury's Legionnaires told the world in large lettered banners they came from the brass center of the universe; veterans from New Britain were equally proud of the hardware monopoly. Meriden boasted its silver works, while Hartford did not let it escape notice that that city was the insurance capital of the New England states. Hartford's drum and bugle corps was uniformed in black coats and gold trousers and attracted considerable favorable comment.

BRAZILIAN NAVY MOVING TO COMBAT REBEL FORCES

Part of the Battle Fleet is Bound For the Southern Ports, in Which the Rebellion Broke Out—Government Spokesmen Say the Administration Of President Luis Has the Revolt Well in Hand—Central Government Has $10,000,000 to Put Down the Rebellion—Revolutionists Are Said to Have No Financial Resources

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 7—(AP)—Units of the Brazilian navy tonight were steaming swiftly northward and southward along the coast to combat the rebellion which broke in southern states last week but now has spread to the regions north of the capital.

Part of the battle fleet is bound for the lower ports, while one unit is on the way to Pernambuco, far on the eastward tip of the South American continent.

Government spokesmen declared late this afternoon that the administration of President Washington Luis had the revolt well in hand.

They asserted that the insurrectionary movements in the great rubber-producing state of Para, north of the capital, and in Parana, southerly, had been crushed without bloodshed. Defeat of the rebels in Parana would be a severe blow to them, for it is through this state that the 80,000 troops reported marching northward from Rio Grande Do Sul have planned to attack the large coffee metropolis of Sao Paulo.

Government troops, in the meantime, are moving slowly toward the areas dominated by the rebels.

Besides contending that the entire battle fleet will remain loyal, the government asserts that soldiers of the regular army in the capital district, numbering 10,000, will stand staunchly behind the administration.

Moreover, the government has additional resources in the reserves. These men, ranging in age from 21 to 30, were warned two days ago to be ready for duty but have not been used so far.

It is in the financial field, however, that federal officials say they have the final edge on the revolters. The central government has been advanced $10,000,000 by the Bank of Brazil to put down the rebellion, whereas the revolutionaries are said to have no financial resources.

Sao Paulo reported tonight that so far as known there had been little fighting to the southward, but large troop movements are taking place as the government distributes soldiers and supplies over the state of Sao Paulo on the Soro Cabana railway.

Officials there state they have little appehension as to the loyalty of the citizens, but fear that the food problem may become acute in less than a week, since the revolutionaries dominate the railroads from the states of Minas Geraes, north of Sao Paulo, and Rio Grande Do Sul in the south, holding up normal shipments of food, the supply is growing low.

In Rio De Janeiro, too, the food problem is important and the government today requisitioned all supplies. Officials said shopkeepers were profiteering, taking advantage of the fact that foodstuffs are cut off from Minas Geraes.

The banks here have been ordered closed until Oct. 21, the government saying it took this step to prevent speculation in exchange, and the city has a Sunday appearance. Stores are open but are not doing a great business, partly because the banks are closed, and partly because the government has taken over food supplies.

Airplanes of the Sao Paulo state police and military craft today bombed rebel detachments in Minas Geraes.

Additional support was given the government today by the formation in both Rio De Janeiro and Sao Paulo of "civil legions." These organizations will assist federal troops if their aid is needed.

FEDERAL PLANE SHOT DOWN BY INSURGENTS

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 7—(AP)—Dispatches to La Nacion today said that a federal airplane dropping bombs upon the city of Bello Horizonte, capital of the insurgent state of Minas Geraes, had been shot down by the rebels. Its two occupants were taken prisoners.

The news was contained in a message sent by the insurgent commander in Bello Horizonte to the commander of the insurgent army in Rio Grande Do Sul. It was forwarded to La Nacion from Porto Alegre, seaport of Rio Grande.

The airplane, a powerful federal army machine, was shot down yesterday. The pilot and observer, Adherbal Oliveira and Jose Gomes Ribeiro, had dropped two bombs before they were forced down.

The same message, signed by Christiano Machado, "secretary of the interior," said another federal army plane flying over Bello Horizonte had landed, and its aviators had joined the insurgents.

Their names were Casimiro Montenegro and Antonio Lemos Cunha.

Through these events the insurgents were put in possession of two fully equipped military airplanes as a weapon against the federal air forces.

ATTACK ON AMERICAN PROPERTY IN BRAZIL

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7—(AP)—News of an attack on American property in Brazil came today coincident with a statement from Ambassador S. Gurgel Do Amarel of that country saying his government would resort to bloodshed to quell the revolution "when bloodshed was inevitable."

His statement came shortly before the state department received word from S. Walter Washington, American charge d'affaires at Rio De Janeiro, that the American owned street car service and elevator service between the upper and lower levels of the city of Bahia had been attacked Saturday and Sunday. State police were understood to have stood off the attack, and the cablegram added the service would be resumed tomorrow.

In a prepared interview Ambassador Do Amaral declined to minimize or magnify the seriousness of revolutionary activities in his country. He said the government would resort to bloodshed "when bloodshed was inevitable."

Embassy reports were that President Washington Luis is himself directing organization of the federal resources to combat the revolutionaries, whose number has been estimated at 80,000.

The ambassador said "a general offensive will take place shortly and the government is confident it will be able to restore order as soon as possible in the Brazilian family."

MACDONALD HAS CONTEMPT FOR PROTECTIVE TARIFF

ILLANDUDNO, Wales, Oct. 7—(AP)—Contempt for tariff protection as a way out of trade depression was expressed by Prime Minister MacDonald in an address to delegates of the labor party conference here this morning.

"We cannot cure the ills of the new generation by going back to the quack remedies of two generations before," he stated.

Alluding to the tariff truce measure signed by Great Britain at Geneva, he remarked, "We have signed the truce because we believe in its doctrine, and because we are asking other industrial nations of the world to come to an agreement about tariffs.

"If other nations think that by signing the truce they have got us bound and gagged they will soon discover they have made a big mistake.

"The truce has been signed only to allow negotiations to be begun. I have been sitting in a committee, and I have been amazed at how easy it would be to get back millions of pounds without putting a brass farthing of protection on any commodity that comes in."

ONLY 50 PER CENT. OF HOSPITAL PATIENTS ARE LOCAL

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 7—Last year only 50 per cent of the 1,176 patients admitted to St. Joseph's hospital were residents of the city, it is revealed in a survey made to show the extent to which towns in this section depend on Willimantic for hospitalization needs. Other than a comparatively small percentage representing those injured or stricken ill while in this locality and residing in distant places, the remaining 50 per cent represents persons coming from neighboring towns and villages.

In appreciation of this need of the surrounding towns for good hospital accommodations within a short mileage, the $500,000 new hospital campaign to be staged this fall will be carried into these towns. The completion of a new and well equipped hospital here is also expected to be patronized by many patients now going to hospitals in Hartford, Springfield, Norwich and other places where hospital conditions are superior to those presently existing here. There are 20 towns in the district which the new Windham Community Memorial hospital will serve. In these communities campaign teams of men and women will be organized.

COLCHESTER

COLCHESTER TOWN MEETING NAMES ROAD COMMITTEE

(Special to The Bulletin)

COLCHESTER, Oct. 6—At an unusually largely attended town meeting held following the close of the polls, Monday, Charles F. Brown was chairman and John Condren was clerk. The reports of the town officers were voted accepted. The budget for the ensuing year is $62,405.00 an increase of $2,752 over last year's budget. This increase is principally due to an increase of $1,455 in expense for insane and imbeciles and a net increase of $1,297 in transportation expense on the school budget. It was voted at the meeting to empower the board of selectmen to borrow not to exceed $18,000 to meet current expenses. The question of purchasing the Dublin district school building was brought up, but disposition of the matter was postponed to a special town meeting to be held Thursday, Oct. 16. At the August meeting of the school committee, Rev. Father E. L. Morrison representing St. Andrew's Church corporation, proposed that the town buy the Dublin school property and thus own rather than rent it as has been done for many years.

The matter of providing ways and means for repairing the town roads and bridges for the ensuing year caused much heated discussion. Fred O. Brown and Guy B. Clark spoke in favor of letting the road repair work out to contract and Selectman Kramer, L. Cohen and several others spoke in opposition, advancing some very good arguments. It was finally voted to appoint a committee of three democrats and three republicans to meet with the selectmen in regard to the road repair problem and report to the special town meeting October 16. The committee comprises Leon Broder, E. M. Clifford, Hyman London, Edward T. Peck, W. K. Raymond and F. O. Brown. The road repair budget prepared by the selectmen is the same as last year—Colchester road repairs, $4,000; removing snow, $200; cutting brush, $500; Westchester road repairs, $2,800; removing snow, $200; cutting brush, $500.

An adjourned town meeting is to be held in March to lay a tax for the ensuing year.

YEAR'S TOWN REPORT IS COMPREHENSIVE

A number of new and interesting features are found in the annual report of the town officers which was distributed prior to the election Monday. There is now a detailed list of all the town officers; the doings at town meetings the past year in brief; and a record of the vital statistics for the year ending Aug. 31. There were 27 marriages, 33 deaths and 27 births. The health officer's report indicates no undue prevalence of any disease, nor is any condition existent which menaces the public health. The report of the Cragin Memorial library shows a total circulation of 11,284 books for the year ending July 1. Attendance for the period was 11,062. One hundred and thirty-eight new books were presented and 115 new books were purchased. Early in the year, additional cases were put in the children's room and more room is now needed for the adult room. The use of the library facilities by the school pupils for study and reference work is continually growing.

An interesting paragraph is found in the report of the town school committee for the past year, regarding the cost per pupil in average attendance in Colchester and neighboring towns. Of the 169 towns in the state, Colchester is 95th on the basis of population, but 77th on the basis of pupils in average daily attendance, which shows that it has more than the average number of pupils. On the other hand, it is the 165th town on the basis of the grand list of taxable wealth per pupil in average daily attendance, which shows that it has far less than the average amount of wealth per pupil in average daily attendance that it can devote to the education of its children. The cost per pupil in average daily attendance for the past year was $70.96, whereas the median for the state was $97.96. The average cost per pupil in surrounding towns was higher than here, Bozrah being $91.05, East Haddam $91.71, East Hampton $81.90, Salem $97.81 and Lebanon $85.71.

Miss Mary Barrows is in a serious condition at St. Joseph's hospital, Willimantic, as a result of the accident Friday noon when she was struck by a truck employed by the Petrucci-Altiers Co., which is building the cement road from Willimantic to Storrs. Miss Barrows was crossing the new road near her home and as she avoided a truck from the south stepped into the path of another coming from the opposite direction. She was taken immediately to the hospital by Prof. F. A. Ferguson, who was coming from the college, to his home nearby. The south flag station on the new road was moved Saturday afternoon from the foot of Spring Hill to the top and located opposite the residence of Parker Wildes. From there to the end of the road at Storrs, a distance of two miles, one-way traffic is maintained. It is expected that the laying of the cement will be completed this week.

NEW TOWN CLERK SWORN IN BUT DOES NOT ASSUME DUTIES UNTIL JAN. 1ST

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 7—Harold C. Lincoln, republican, who was elected town clerk and treasurer of Windham with a majority of 399 in the bi-ennial elections Monday, today took the oath of office as treasurer from Town Clerk Frank P. Fenton. Treasurer Lincoln at once assumed the duties of this office but will not take over the duties of town clerk until the first Monday in January when the term of Mr. Fenton expires, according to state law.

Town Clerk Lincoln, who met with success in this, his first political venture, is a graduate of the Natchaug grammar and of Windham high schools. He has been engaged in the furniture business with his father, John C. Lincoln, since the completion of his secondary education in 1901. He also took a business course in a local institution. The business, one of the oldest in the town, was incorporated in 1914 as the J. C. Lincoln company when Harold Lincoln became vice-president, assistant treasurer, secretary and manager. In connection with the furniture business, he has been successfully engaged in the past 12 years in the undertaking business, purchasing the interests of Hiram N. Fenn. Mr. Lincoln has immediate plans to revise his interests in both these businesses so that he may devote his entire time to the important office and trust conferred upon him today. The elder Lincoln virtually retired some six years ago after a 50 year career.

Mr. Lincoln is a member of several fraternal and civic organizations including the chamber of commerce, Exchange club and Willimantic Lodge of Elks. EXTRA BATH NEEDED IN UP-TO-DATE HOME

One of the most striking points about modern bathrooms is their small size. It is practicable to install an additional bath in the home in a space measuring but four feet nine inches by five feet. Under this condition it will take but little expansion to convert a clothes closet into a bathroom; or the space can be made by throwing together the corners of two adjoining rooms by cutting away the wall which separates them.

Mrs. MacDougall's Happy Boy

Another Mother's Grateful Story

MRS. F. MacDOUGALL of Somerville, Mass., writes—

"Dr. True's Elixir was first recommended to me by my little boy's grandmother as she had used it with very successful results. We have found it a most excellent preparation as it performs a twofold duty ... a laxative and worm expeller making it almost indispensable in homes where there are children. I attribute my boy's continuous good health to Dr. True's Elixir ... I give it my most sincere recommendation."

The Danger Signs of CONSTIPATION: Languid feeling, accompanied by feverishness, dull heavy eyes, pale face, biliousness and lack of appetite are all unmistakable signs.

Dr. True's Elixir ... the pure herb Laxative, containing no coal-tar products ... no drug-habit forming ingredients ... pleasant to take ... is the safe Laxative for Children. That is why thousands of Mothers give it to their children whenever they show signs of CONSTIPATION or WORMS.

DANIELSON

THE LOS ANGELES FLIES OVER DANIELSON TWICE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 7.—Thousands of residents of Danielson and nearby territory indulged in some neck exercises today in watching the giant navy dirigible Los Angeles on two visitations it made here.

It was first reported about the noon hour, cruising over the west side. Shortly before 3 o'clock the hum of its motors heralded its return from the east and headed on the general course of aircraft making for Hartford. It flew so low over the business section on the last trip that its name easily could be made out, and it gave all who watched a thrill, not a few of them recalling meanwhile the tragic end of the R-101 near Beauvais, France, early last Sunday morning.

FUNERAL

Mrs. Clarissa G. Winsor

There was an unusually large attendance at noon today at the funeral services for Mrs. Clarissa G. Winsor at the home in North Foster. The old Colonial house was filled to its capacity, and many were obliged to stand outside during the services. Rev. William Cook of the Church of the Latter Day Saints, Providence, conducted the service, during which Miss Louise Fox of Providence and Miss Alice Cousens of Norwich sang No Night There, and The Christian's Goodnight. Members of Ponagansett and Chepachet granges attended in a body.

Burial was in the Winsor family cemetery, where the grange committal service was conducted by W. M. George E. Morhouse and Chaplain Harry Tallman of Ponagansett grange. The bearers were Harris Hammond, Everett Burlingame, Frank Koons and Eddie Cook. There were many beautiful floral pieces. A. F. Wood was in charge of the arrangements.

Following the meeting of the registrars of the town of Killingly today in the various districts, it was announced that applicants who have filed to be admitted as voters will have their qualifications examined when the selectmen and town clerk meet in the offices of the selectmen here on Saturday of this week.

Selectmen Organize Wednesday

Charles A. Tillinghast and John Z. LaBelle, republicans, and Patrick Riley, democrat, constituting the newly elected board of selectmen of the town of Killingly, will meet in the selectmen's rooms in the town hall building here Wednesday to organize, allot areas of town roads for care during the coming 12 months, and possibly to make some minor appointments. They will also dispose of the accumulation of routine business.

Warming over the election returns today, those who find particular interest in such things, were rather inclined to believe that Louis O. Stone of Attawaugan, democratic candidate for selectman, who lost out to his colleague, Patrick Riley, of Dayville, by the slender margin of two votes, will not seek a recount. This was an assumption when the returns were announced last evening, but it appeared today to be without foundation.

Mr. Tillinghast, re-elected as first selectman and entering upon his third year in that position, was receiving the congratulations of many persons today. He ran far ahead of his ticket, getting many votes from the democratic ranks, it was admitted today from quarters that should know.

Abott D. Sayles, democratic member of the board last year, lived up to the expectations of his boosters in polling nearly 500 votes as an independent candidate for selectman. Even those who in many instances were not supporters of Mr. Sayles at the polls, admit that was a real achievement.

One reaction to the exhibition of the strength of Mr. Sayles in the election, this from democratic ranks, was that he should have thrown his strength to his party instead of running independently, as he did at the request of scores of his supporters. If he had done this, some of the democratic leaders profess to believe, the republican majority would have been cut materially.

With the town election out of the way, republican and democratic party workers turned their attention today to the state election of early November, an affair that is going to bring on another live political battle in this town.

County W. C. T. U. Institute

On Wednesday, there was held in the Baptist church, Danielson, an institute for W. C. T. U. workers in Windham county, and it was full of interest to all who attended.

Mrs. Mary L. Stearns of Willimantic, president of Windham county union, presided, with Mrs. William J. Craig of Danielson at the piano. Mrs. Albert Abbott conducted the opening praise service and offered prayer.

Mrs Stearns read from II Timothy 1:15-26 and announced the hymn, Lead On, O King Eternal. Then the following departments were discussed by their directors and others: Evangelistic, by Mrs K. A. Darby of Danielson; Fairs and Exhibits, by Mrs. Jennie Ladd of Central Village; Medal Contests, by Mrs. Pegrum of Willimantic; Narcotics, by Miss Carrie Danielson of Danielson. These occupied the forenoon.

Mrs. Mary B. Wilson of Meriden, a former state president and national lecturer, was the general director and led in the noontide prayer, after which adjournment was taken for lunch.

Assembling again at 1:30 o'clock, Mrs. Esther B. Brown of Danielson conducted the praise service and Mrs. Lawton of Brooklyn offered prayer.

Mrs. Mary B. Wilson then spoke at some length on the department of civics and scientific instruction, giving much greatly appreciated information and advice, answering questions and giving much help along lines not too well organized in Windham county.

Miss Emma Pilling of Danielson, one of the allegiance to the Constitution committee, was introduced and told of a luncheon to be given at the Bond hotel, Hartford, Oct. 9, and invited as many as could to attend.

Mrs. Craig and Mrs. Armstrong had arranged a little playlet, entitled "A New Alice in Wonderland," which was put on by seven school children and was very interesting and instructive.

The meeting closed about 4 o'clock with the Aaronic benediction.

Officials charged with the enforcement of the game laws have been finding something to do while the attention of so many has been concentrated on what has been happening in the small town political world.

County Game Warden Thomas Daniels of Plainfield reported the following arrests and prosecutions today as having taken place within the county since the opening of the duck shooting season the first of the month. Some of the duck hunters have been going wrong. Harry Allen of Willimantic was before Justice Hatton in the town of Ashford, charged with shooting a wood duck. These are protected through all open seasons, and have been for many years past. He was fined $10 and costs, a total of $21.60. In the same town, Stanley Klucreswki of Rockville was in court for shooting a dowitcher, or dipper duck, and drew a fine of $10 and costs, in all amounting to $21.60. Loren Wainwright of Canterbury and Nello Huvenen of Plainfield were before Justice Colt in Canterbury for hunting and shooting wood duck. Each of the accused was fined $5 and costs, making a total of $16.10 for each to pay.

Advocates of this town buying voting machines were again proclaiming today that it is behind the times in not doing so. In this many of those who voted down such a proposition two years ago likely will not be in agreement.

The renewed call for the machines arises from the fact that experienced counters, and capable, spent a few minutes over six hours on Monday in arriving at the results of the town election. The long, but unavoidable, delay was irritating to a great many voters. Meanwhile, from all over town came telephone calls from persons clamoring to know the results.

At the close of the polls at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon the corps of counters went to work. They labored without intermission until 9:20 before getting the final tabulations. With machines in use the result of the voting would have been known within a few minutes of the close of the polls, machine advocates point out.

Members of Danielson chapter of the American Red Cross will hold their annual assembly next Monday evening at the office of Supt. W. E. Parker at Killingly high school.

Republican caucuses to nominate representatives in the legislature and other candidates for certain offices in the state election in November are to be held in Killingly and all surrounding towns Thursday evening.

Drought conditions in certain sections of the town of Killingly are now said to be worse than at this time in 1929, when there was widespread comment about the long drawn out dry spell.

WAUREGAN

A wedding of much interest here was that of Leo Bouthillier and Miss Eva Gagnog, at West Warwick, R. I., Monday morning. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Father Benson. The witnesses were the parents of groom and bride. After the service, Mr. and Mrs. Bouthillier left for a week's trip to northern New England. A local reception will be held at St. Jean's hall, West Wauregan, Saturday evening next.

Choquette—Staskiwitz

At the Sacred Heart church Monday morning, Arthur Choquette was united in marriage with Miss Anastasia Staskiwitz. Nuptial high mass was sung by Rev. J. H. Quinn. The parents of the bride and groom attended them, in accordance with the old custom. Miss Staskiwitz was given a party by thirty of her friends last Friday in anticipation of the event.

Alfred Choquette has returned to his home after being a patient in Backus hospital, Norwich, for appendicitis.

Much excitement was caused in the village Monday evening when an airplane, apparently in trouble, landed in the famous forty-acre lot. The pilot had lost his way in the darkness of evening and running short of gas, was forced to land. The plane was one from Newport training school and carried a student flyer in addition to the pilot. Tuesday morning the plane left on its way home.

BELL-ANS FOR INDIGESTION

THREE SILVER BANDITS HELD AT BROOKLYN JAIL IN DEFAULT OF BONDS

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 7.—Three young men alleged to be numbered among the group of bandits that held up and robbed a ByRolly truck of a cargo of silver bullion and finished silver at South Killingly early yesterday morning were held as prisoners, in each instance in default of bail of $10,000, at the county jail in Brooklyn tonight. They are Joseph Cordoza, alias Joseph Rodenques, 28, of 45 Ives street, Providence; Anthony L. Peters, 28, of 1057 Narragansett boulevard, Edgewood, R. I., and Mario Ferraioli, 25, of 156 Sutton street, Providence.

When jointly arraigned before Judge W. Fenner Woodward in the town court late this afternoon, each pleaded not guilty to a charge of robbery while armed. That they may obtain counsel if they so desire their case was continued until Tuesday of next week.

Brought in here this morning at 7:30 from Warwick, R. I., after being captured at Shaowmet Beach, R. I., late last night, they remained as mum as oysters throughout the day. They were unresponsive to questioning as to how approximately $6,500 worth of the stolen silver happened to be in the cottage they were found occupying, without the consent or knowledge of the owner. They declined to affirm or deny knowing anything about the sensational holdup at South Killingly yesterday morning. Asked if they had companions in their alleged adventure, reminiscent of the stage coach holdups of other days, they had no answer.

They do not look like desperate characters, Ferraioli being somewhat of a Beau Brummel, with a dab of moustache shading his upper lip and with proper clothes to step out and appear like a dapper young business man. In contrast, Cordoga appears a shiftless sort of fellow and was wearing striped denim overalls as he lounged about the barracks this morning. Peters appears to be a so-so sort of chap.

The refusal of the prisoners to talk about themselves or their recent activities did not prevent state officers here from getting something of a line on the histories of Cordoza and Ferraioli. Not so much had been learned up to this afternoon about the record of Peters.

Cordoza is said by state officers here to have done time both in Rhode Island and in Florida for breaking and entering. July 1, 1926, he was arrested in Rhode Island on that charge, later was found guilty and sentenced to prison, serving a term of 20 months. He is also recorded as having done a year in a Florida prison for the same offence.

Records of the Providence police department show that Ferraioli, whose father, Vincent Ferraioli, has a hardware store at 215 Atwell's avenue, Providence, was arrested in that city Oct. 2 of last year. He was charged with breaking and entering the jewelry store of J. A. Foster & Co., at 219 Weybosset street, and with the larceny therein of three necklaces valued at $45, and 69 finger rings worth $346. When his case came up for trial two days later he was found not guilty.

The trio of alleged bandits waived extradition from Rhode Island and were brought here from Warwick by Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart and State Officer Lionel Poirier. The local officers left here at 12:30 this morning for Warwick, and on their arrival there spent the remainder of the night in grilling, in company with Chief Cranston of the Warwick department, the three prisoners. The best efforts of the officers to get admissions of guilt were fruitless.

The silver recovered, brought back here and this afternoon deposited in the vaults of the Danielson Trust Co., includes 17 bars that look very much like plumbers' solder, and two boxes of finished silver. Its value is fixed at $6,500, and represents about half the amount stolen from the truck.

A complete checkup today of the silver aboard the truck when it was robbed makes the cleanup of the bandits dwindle from the originally reported $50,000 to $60,000 to about $13,000. The error in reporting the larger amount stolen is said to have been made by a transportation company representative who knew that the standard shipment of silver through here was around $50,000. It so happened that Sunday night's shipment was one of the smallest ever made, but in the excitement of yesterday morning and without careful checking of records the larger amount was given as having fallen prey to the bandits.

Driver Cornelius Wines of the robbed truck was in Warwick this morning and came back here today. It is possible that he may be able to identify one of the prisoners held at Brooklyn as one who helped rob his truck, but it was not admitted by state officers today that he has done so as yet.

When Cotton Was King

Paying a visit to Jewett City Tuesday, a man who was a cotton weaver here 40 years ago, was astonished to learn that there is now no cotton cloth manufactured in Griswold. Interest In Norwich Meeting

The fall meeting of the eastern district of the council of Congregational Women of Connecticut to be held at the United church, Norwich, on Thursday, Oct. 16th, is of great interest to many Jewett City women. Avery, who is at her home in Norwich Town after five years of work in India, will speak, dressed in the attractive native costume. Dr. Valena H. Parker, an expert in the field of social hygiene, will give an address on "The Church and Social Hygiene." Dr. Parker is much in demand throughout the United States. It is a rare opportunity to have her here. Other speakers will be Mrs. L. R. Howard, of the American Missionary association; Rev. Dr. T. M. Shipherd, minister of Park church, Norwich, and Miss Amy O. Welcher, president of the council. The girls' choir of the United church will sing. There will be choice exhibits of service work, literature and help in general. PUTNAM

DEMOCRATS INCREASE POWER IN PUTNAM POLITICS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 7.—A decidedly new political aspect was created in the town today as the result of Monday's election, won decisively by the democrats. The "dope" was completely upset when the returns showed that Selectman William P. Warren, republican member of the board, had been severely beaten by Francis X. Vadnais, his democratic opponent. Although Warren met defeat by the opposing candidate, he received only 36 votes less than his running mate, Clarence E. Pierce, of Putnam heights, who was returned to the board a minority party representative. The outcome of the election came as a great surprise to the community at large, since it proved to be a political gesture which the democrats have not made for the past 40 years, although two years ago they were successful in electing representatives to the legislature and last year elected their candidate for tax collector, who was, J. Alfred Bonneville, re-elected yesterday in the sensational party sweep.

Shortly after the announcement of the balloting results, the new board of selectmen were administered the oath of office by Town Clerk Henry N. Benoit. The ceremony, an impromptu one, was performed in the chamber of the selectmen on the second floor of the municipal building.

Damage Suit Before Court

In superior court today, Judge Newell Jennings of Bristol presided at the jury trial of the civil case of Cornelius Shea, administrator, vs. Andrew Link, Jr., formerly of Willimantic, and the Metropolitan Insurance Co. The case grew out of the death of John Shea of Willimantic, who died from the effects of injuries sustained in an automobile accident, which occurred on the Colchester road in New London county, on Dec. 6, 1929. Andrew Link, a defendant in the action, was riding in the car at the time of the accident. Following a criminal investigation, responsibility for the death of Shea was fixed on Link and in superior court in New London he was convicted of a charge of manslaughter and sentenced to serve a term of not less than one nor more than three years in the state prison. The trial of the civil case necessitated that Link be released from the prison in order to testify in his own behalf, in court today. Official authorization of the request was secured and Link, in custody of parole officials of the state prison at Wethersfield appeared in the Putnam court this morning and testified as to incidents occurring on the day of the fatal accident.

Progress of the case was delayed this afternoon because of the failure of a Hartford county deputy sheriff to serve a summons on a so-called "totally disinterested witness," residing in Willimantic, whose testimony the defense claimed is an important part of their case. Judge Jennings granted a recess of an hour and detailed court officials to locate and subpoena the witness. Indications at a late hour this afternoon were that the trial would be continued Wednesday.

Widespread interest being manifest by local fistic fans in boxing cards being staged weekly in surrounding towns is incentive for local promoters to prepare bouts for presentation to the Putnam fans in a Putnam auditorium, Promoter Daniel Trudeau announced this afternoon. Trudeau stated that his associates are now working to stage a series of amateur matches in St. John's hall at a date in the near future. If plans are successful, the season's cards will be the first to be staged locally since a ban was placed on the sport two years ago by the creation of a disturbance centering about the state boxing commission. There is a large number of fight fans in this city interested in the promotion of local boxing matches of the calibre which were arranged before the pastime was stopped two seasons ago.

The attendance report showing the records of the classes in the various schools established during the month of September has been prepared by Supt. of Schools Leon M. Farrin. Grades 5 and 6 at the Sawyer district school, taught by Miss Mary J. Millard, attained perfect attendance records during the month, as did the 29 pupils enrolled in Miss Charlotte A. Zakoloska's kindergarten class at the Israel Putnam school. The other records are as follows: Class of Sarah C. Barber, Putnam high school, 38 pupils, 92.34 per cent; Abbie H. Keith, Putnam high school, 51 pupils, 99 per cent; Sarah B. Kent, Israel Putnam school, 37 pupils, 99 per cent; Bertha W. French, Sawyer district school, 31 pupils, 99 per cent; Winifred E. Duffee, Putnam junior high, 36 pupils, 98.6 per cent; J. C. Jacques, Putnam high school, 36 pupils, 98.6 per cent; Marjorie McGillicuddy, Putnam high school, 37 pupils, 98.51 per cent; Emma J. Dutton, Israel Putnam school, 36 pupils, 98.48 per cent; Anna Kehiry, Sawyer district school, 27 pupils, 98 per cent; Edith M. Kent, Putnam junior high, 36 pupils, 97.62 per cent; Lewis F. Battey, Israel Putnam school, 37 pupils, 97.57 per cent; Ethel S. Strahan, 37 pupils, 96.37 per cent; Irene R. Bernier, Putnam high school, 33 pupils, 96.3 per cent; Elizabeth M. Smith, 30 pupils, Putnam high school, 96.20 per cent; Gertrude C. Warner, Israel Putnam school, 39 pupils, 95.8 per cent; Carrie B. Gascoigne, Israel Putnam school, 30 pupils, [illegible] per cent; Ella I. Etta Whiting, Israel Putnam school, 41 pupils, 94.50 per cent.

The city today was officially mourning the death of Fire Chief Ralph E. Thurston, who died Monday evening at the Truesdell hospital in Fall River, Mass., where he had been ill for more than a month. The central and north end fire stations were draped with black and flags on the building were lowered to half staff as a tribute to the department leader. Arrangements for the funeral of Chief Thurston have not been definitely announced, although it is believed it will be held Thursday at his late home in Fall River. City officials, including Mayor Charles A. Richand and a number of the firemen are to attend the services according to announcement made today.

Evening school classes at the state trade school on Providence street are closed because of the lack of sufficient enrollment to warrant the conducting of classes. Director H. H. Ellis of the school said today that he is especially interested in enrolling a student body for study of these trades and will welcome applications from anyone interested.

Republicans of the town will meet in caucus Thursday evening to nominate candidates for representatives in the general assembly and thereby locally, completing the republican phase of the state ticket. The town republican committee is holding regular sessions and drafting plans for the state campaign which will soon be underway, but as yet has made no announcement as to who its legislative candidates will probably be. Chairman Irving H. Miron said yesterday afternoon that the duty of the committee, "is to elect and not select," and the fact that he is firm in the adoption of this attitude, sets forth conclusively, that the committee's primary interest in the selection of the candidates is supporting them after nominations have been made. Many men are mentioned in rumors as seeking the nomination, but Leon T. Wilson, former internal revenue department officer and onetime newspaperman, is the only prospective candidate to declare his aspirations.

It was reported tonight that the fund for the nurses home of the Day Kimball hospital, now being raised by drive teams working in Putnam and Danielson and surrounding towns, had been advanced to the $21,000 mark during the past week. A week ago the fund had gone well over $20,000 and returns from benefits and other events staged for the home fund netted considerable sums during the past week. A meeting of the drive teams will be held at the Russian Bear tea room on the Thompson road Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. A. A. Vonsiatsky, general chairman, announced today.

Radio reports early today said that Alvin S. Martin, former Putnam bank employe and cashier of the First National bank of Springfield, Vermont, wanted by federal authorities for alleged misappropriation of funds and betrayal of his trust, was still at large, although a large posse of deputy sheriffs and state police were combing the country-side in search of him. Martin, who is well known in this city, in a note to his wife, the former Louise Weatherhead of this city, acknowledged that there were shortages in his accounts. His automobile and a few pieces of wearing apparel were found on a country road near Rockingham, N. H., early Sunday morning.

Deputy Fire Chief Alphonse Dumas is officially acting in the capacity of chief of the department. Deputy Chief Dumas has been directing the affairs of the fire department since the late Chief R. E. Thurston was first stricken a month ago with the illness that proved fatal to him Monday night.

Republican electors of Thompson have received notice of the caucus to be held October 9, for the purpose of nominating candidates for representatives in the general assembly, justice of peace, and judge of probate.

E. J. Keegan, chairman of the democratic town committee, has issued summons to the democratic electors to meet this (Wednesday) evening.

Election Aftermath

When the polls closed Monday afternoon it was found that 706 votes had been cast out of a possible 1400. The lack of competition is the reason for the small result, many candidates being on both tickets. The count showed: Straight republican 197; straight democrat 181; split votes 319.

Children Respond Quickly To New Treatment

Modern Laxative Safe, Dependable—Children Like Taste

Now-a-days mothers know the importance of keeping children regular and cleaned out inside. They know how often cross, irritable children regain happy dispositions, healthy appetites when constipation is corrected. And mothers everywhere are delighted with the way their children respond to Feen-a-mint, the modern chewing gum laxative.

Children love the fresh mint flavor of Feen-a-mint which never has to be forced down unwilling throats as do old-fashioned cathartics. Doctors recommend it for its mild, yet thorough action for Feen-a-mint works on the important principle of uniform internal distribution.

Because children chew Feen-a-mint, it is effective in milder doses than ordinary laxatives. For the effectiveness of a laxative is not so much depended upon the quantity swallowed as upon the thoroughness of its distribution throughout the alimentary tract.

While children chew Feen-amint the laxative it contains is gradually released and mixed with the saliva. Thus it is carried to the intestinal tract smoothly, even, without shock to the system or the distressing after-effects so common with old-fashioned laxatives. Each particle of the laxative in Feen-a-mint works with utmost efficiency, gently encouraging the intestinal muscles to resume the activity so necessary for healthful elimination.

The action of Feen-a-mint is thorough gentle, dependable. With the proper dosage it is not necessary to increase the amount one time or decrease it the next. Feen-a-mint is harmless and contains no habit-forming drugs. Truly the ideal health laxative to keep children regular and free from constipation. Get a package at any drug store.—Adv.

HUNTING ACCIDENTS

In the next several weeks many are going to set out with firearms for the purpose of shooting different kinds of game in season. Attention will be centered upon the birds, ducks or animals brought in, but in the quest for them, in the tramping through the fields or underbrush, it is well to realize that ever-present need of self-protection. The hunter must be careful not to start fires and he must be careful not to shoot his companions or himself.

It may be a simple matter to carry a gun, but it is quite as easy to discharge one unintentionally. This is demonstrated every season in distressing accidents which take life just as certainly as if the act was intentional.

One of these deplorable cases has just occurred in North Kingston, R. I., where a 17-year-old boy put his double-barreled shotgun in a boat preparatory to shooting ducks. He climbed into the boat and pushed off, the jar being enough to discharge both barrels. He was struck in the back and died in a short time.

This was a case where the gun was loaded and where it must have been cocked, when as a matter of fact it should not have been. The accident was on a par with those which too frequently happen when hunters climb over fences and walls or when they travel through the underbrush with gun ready to fire. Under such circumstances it takes little to trip the trigger, especially those which are expected to work quickly, and when the unexpected happens whatever is beyond the muzzle of the gun is going to get the charge of shot.

Those who carry firearms must be aware of the danger. A gun is something different from a walking stick. It must be handled with more care. There is no more excuse for dragging it along the ground or through a fence than there is for looking down into the barrel when loaded or aiming it at another person in fun. Even though it is employed for the purpose of killing game, it cannot be overlooked that it is just as efficient in killing individuals in the hands of a careless person. The time for reflecting on the fact that most hunting accidents are preventable is before they happen.

THE LEGION ADDRESS

In speaking in Boston to the American Legion convention, President Hoover dwelt upon the duties of citizenship and pointed to the preamble of the Legion's constitution as the real preface to American citizenship. That document itself recognized the importance of citizenship, as well as its responsibilities.

Referring to the service of the citizen army upon which the country depends in case of emergency, and upon which it has never depended in vain, the president maintained that peace doesn't depend upon treaties but "requires unremitting, courageous campaigns, laid with strategy and carried on successfully on a hundred fronts and sustained in the spirit and from the hearts in every individual in every town and village of our country."

As the result of the war some found reasons to expect that we would become an imperialistic power, but that was never our object. We have demonstrated our utter freedom from that and have taken a leading part in seeking to establish barriers against future wars. The Kellogg-Briand treaty and the London pact be regarded as tremendous victories. These do not mean that we are going to neglect our own protection, for the president says "the maintenance of respect requires that we sustain a preparedness for defense that is impregnable, yet that contains no threat of aggression," and "by limiting our strength we have given demonstration to the world that we seek no domination, but only adequate defense." Furthermore, he declared that "we have assured the maintenance of an efficient navy as the first line of defense."

The president further bore down on the important service the Legion can render in the way of good citizenship. He extolled the ideals of citizenship maintained by the organization and urged a renewal of effort in that direction through good will, the respect for law, the use of the ballot that the minds of the communities throughout the country may be awakened to such service. This he regarded as a rededication to the service of their country in which they played such an important part.

NEW YORK'S CORRUPTION

It isn't what can be called a good impression that is made by the Tammany leaders in connection with the investigation that is being made by the grand jury concerning the sale of judgeships. There is a situation there which calls for a complete unveiling of the details, and yet the grand jury is finding plenty of difficulty in doing so.

Inquiries which have been started concerning conditions in New York city have not gotten the support from Governor Roosevelt that ought to be furnished. He has restricted the scope of the inquiry and has not displayed a willingness to extend it. He has told the Tammany leaders that they should waive immunity on their official acts. But this helps the jury very little, for what the jury wants to know about is not their official acts, acts which were carried out in the discharge of official duties, but those acts which had any bearing upon the sale of judgeships. That they do not want to testify before the grand jury may indicate they know much that they do not want to reveal. That being so, it is evident that the governor's effort is accomplishing nothing and the grand jury which he authorized is being blocked, both by the unwilling witnesses and the attitude of the governor.

The revelations regarding conditions in New York city have come at an unfortunate time for the governor. He wants to seem anxious to have any disgraceful conditions cleared up, and yet he doesn't want to deny himself the benefit of the support which he expects from Tammany. He is trying to create the impression that he wants the deplorable situation cleared up and yet he isn't actually acting in keeping therewith.

It bothers the governor a bit to think that corruption is indicated in the big city and that Tammany is in any way concerned with it. It is a condition which he should insist upon being bared, let the indictments fall where they may. That is what might be expected in behalf of good government, but it isn't forthcoming. There has been a reluctance about such authority as has been granted and now there appears to be an unwillingness to add to the authority that the investigation may be carried through. It doesn't create a good impression.

A FINE SELECTION

This country as well as Mexico has had reason to appreciate the high character of the service that has been rendered by Dwight W. Morrow as ambassador to the latter republic. It is a record of important accomplishment that has been made by Mr. Morrow and for that reason his resignation from that post was the cause of regret in Mexico as well as here.

Nevertheless, it appears that President Hoover has been able to select a successor who has every promise of maintaining the excellence of the service and one who has the advantage of having had recent and close relations with the very post to which he has been named.

In naming Joshua R. Clark, former under-secretary and solicitor in the department of state, the president has named a man with the very qualifications required. He has received the endorsement of Mr. Morrow, which means a great deal, but in addition to that Mr. Morrow attributes his success in Mexico in no small degree to the aid that was given him by Mr. Clark. That being the case, it is apparent that the right man for a difficult office has been selected. Mr. Clark is the man who drew up the papers by which a settlement of the petroleum problems, the agrarian policy and various claims was obtained. He also wrote the treatise on the Monroe doctrine which set forth this country's position as being a pledge against European aggression and not a warrant for American intervention in the affairs of Latin-American countries.

Mr. Clark has qualified in many ways for the work for which he has been selected. He is particularly fitted for ambassador to Mexico and it is significant in this connection that Mexico City looks upon his choice in a most satisfactory manner.

BRAZIL'S TROUBLES

The spirit of unrest has made its rounds of South American countries until it has reached Brazil. Contrary to the experience in other countries, it has encountered resistance of a character which makes uncertain the outcome in Brazil. Although the aim is to oust the president, it appears thus far that he has the support of congress, which has provided for defensive measures, and the government seems assured of a determined test of strength.

The trouble in Brazil, as in other countries, is the economic situation. Brazil is the great coffee-producing country and it has been experimenting with the "valorization" plan, which hasn't worked out well. Under the arrangement there has been a restriction of coffee production in recent years, the idea being that with a reduced production the price could be controlled and kept up. It hasn't worked out, and the result is that Brazil is badly affected by the situation.

This development has provided the opening for the malcontents and trouble-makers, who are always eager to make the most of such a situation. They find encouragement from the action taken by those in other countries and find plenty who are willing to cast their support in their behalf.

A fact which indicates the seriousness of the situation in Brazil is that the states in which the revolt has taken place contain about half the population of Brazil. This makes plain their influence and possible effectiveness, likewise the difficulties that may be expected in controlling them, even though what approaches martial law and a strict censorship have been established. Unrest is feasting on the economic conditions in South America.

PHILANTHROPIC FLOSSIE

Flossie at 18 was obsessed with the desire to free caged lions, restore sight to blind old beggars, and help busy mothers lift baby buggies at difficult corner curbs. Life so far had handed her a wonderful break, and so enthused was she by her own good fortune that her heart waxed to the breaking point at the mere mention of another's hard luck.

It was at the chain store that she first met the attractive young man and she sensed immediately that he was out of his proper environment. He was wasting the most precious years of his life, thought Flossie, piling coffee beans into elusive paper bags and counting suspicious-looking eggs. Twice a week Flossie stopped at the store to order groceries. She always preferred to be waited on by the attractive young man and after her fourth visit to the store it was no secret.

"Do you like this work?" asked Flossie one afternoon when the store was cleared of the usual crowd.

"Rather," he returned, eying her with an enigmatical expression.

"Does your father approve of this sort of work for you?" Flossie continued, trying to draw the man out.

"You bet he does," he answered, "but mother had other plans for me."

Flossie gloated inwardly over his words, for she had sensed his mother had other plans for this promising young man. He should have been building bridges or making nonstop flights across the continent in some high-powered plane. Flossie contemplated ways and means to deliver him from his can-labeled prison. She knew he must be the oldest of nine children. His family probably had meat once a week and paid their grocery bill when they were able to. She decided to speak to her father at once. Flossie's father was also employed by the chain store for years and had spacious offices in the loop where he conversed in low tones about the profits of the company.

"Dad," she ventured one evening, "have you had any luck getting a moment with P. J.?" P. J. Flint was the big shot of the chain store company, and his private office was forbidden territory except to the privileged few.

"Why?" queried Flossie's father suspiciously. He was well acquainted with his daughter's impulsive philanthropy and marveled at the trait she had certainly never inherited from him.

"There's a young man at store eleven," Flossie explained, "with great possibilities. Perhaps you could convince P. J. of this and lead the way to some promotion."

"Getting sweet on the man?" asked her father.

"He's not exactly a strain on the eye, but my interest in him is merely benevolent, dad."

"If that's the case you must be serious and I'll try to page P. J."

The following day Flossie again walked into the chain store.

"Still like your job?" she asked the attractive young man.

"More than ever," he assured her.

"I've a secret," she whispered. "My father is rather an influential person in this company, and although I cannot promise anything definite, I think he might be able to do something for you in the line of promotion. He must manage to see P. J. That's the big boss, you know."

"Thanks. That's mighty nice of you," exclaimed the young man warmly surprised.

P. J. Flint was enjoying his favorite cigar when his secretary interrupted his thoughts. "Harold to see you, sir," he announced.

"Show him in," P. J. leaned forward and shook hands with the young man who entered. "Starting tomorrow you are the new manager of store eleven, which incidentally makes you the winner of the bet we made." P. J. looked at the young man admiringly. "I suppose I should congratulate you now."

"Thanks. I'm glad you advised me to start from the bottom. Climbing the ladder is going to be easy from now on. Wish I could stay—"

"Where are you rushing to?" queried P. J. noting the flush on the young man's features.

"To tell the good news of my promotion to a certain young lady," answered P. J. Flint, Jr., making a swift exit.—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6—Do you recognize the subject of this political pen picture?—

"—A constructive leader courageous to meet with firmness and determination every problem that faces him; possessed of vision and resourcefulness to advise and execute plans of the most farreaching remedial nature; patient yet energetic in handling vast executive and administrative duties, and instantly decisive when the moment for decision arrives."

You are going to hear a lot more about him between now and election day, although he is not running for office.

Well, just in case you have been listening to opposition pictures of the same man, that is Herbert Clark Hoover as the republican national committee sees him in the light of 16 months in the presidency.

It is set out in a new campaign pamphlet, the first of the 1930 series put out by the committee. And it seems, right at the jump off, to verify the previous intimation of Chairman-Senator Fess of the committee that Hoover is the almost exclusive issue of the present campaign.

No Modesty Here

Running for the presidency or actually being president in a campaign year would be every hard on a modest man. The white house is no place for a shrinking violet.

Political exigencies forbid that a president—any president—hide his light under a bushel.

If Mr. Hoover has doubts about the wisdom of his course at any time during those 16 months, the committee pamphlet might not make pleasant reading for him, although most men find fascination in reading about themselves.

For the pamphlet has no doubts. Neatly margined on the left to give room for red subtitles and with each paragraph decked out with an initial letter of the same bright hue, it enumerates 58 specifically numbered "Hoover Achievements."

The London naval treaty is No. 1 and "Home Ownership" No. 58. "Law Enforcement" requires five separate subtitles, Nos. 45 to 49 inclusive. No. 21, however, is "Panic Checked After Stock Exchange Crash," and No. 23 "Employment Provided for Labor."

That's Politics

Anyway, the pamphlet discloses that under the baton of Field Marshal Fess, the republican old guard is going to meet the opposition cry of lack of leadership head-on so far as Mr. Hoover is concerned.

And it is going to be hard for innocent folk to understand how two such utterly differing pictures of the same man, judged by the same acts, can be drawn. That's politics.

Stories That Recall Others

Farm Relief

Two neighbors, one of them a commission man, find delight in "kidding" each other. Recently the commission man acquired a new automobile, a snappy job worthy of bringing envy to any heart.

YOUR HEALTH

Seasonal Hay Fever

By Ray M. Balyeat, M. D., Oklahoma City, Okla.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

In season or out of season, it is always time to think about hay fever. There are countless sufferers from this unpleasant malady in the United States today and the approach of the hay fever season, for those afflicted, is an ominous as were the Ides of March for noble Caesar, and frequently the victims can name the hour and day of their downfall. They succumb, not because they are neurotic or fanciful or hypnotic, but because they are sensitive to one or more pollens from the wind-borne pollinated plants which are absolutely innoxious to the average individual. This sensitiveness is not a matter of mind but a chemical one and manifests itself by a train of symptoms relative to the upper respiratory tract. These symptoms consist of itching and congested nose accompanied by sneezing, itching and lacrimating (watery) eyes, and in many cases itching of the roof of the mouth, throat and ears.

About three per cent of the population of the United States suffer sometime in life from the above train of symptoms which is commonly known as seasonal hay fever. Some patients have symptoms in March, due to a sensitivity to tree pollen. Other patients develope symptoms a little later in the spring, due to a sensitivity to one or more of the grasses. Still others suffer only in July, August and September, due to sensitivity to the pigweeds or ragweeds.

The following rules are helpful if observed during the hay fever season by those who suffer from the above described malady:

(1) Patients should eat rather sparingly of eggs, meat, fish, cheese, ripe beans and ripe peas. Here sparingly means to eat about one-third of what is ordinarily taken by the individual.

(2) They should not go swimming on account of the danger of middle ear infections.

(3) They should not sleep in a draft. Keeping the windows closed after twelve or one o'clock on the side of the bedroom from which the wind is blowing will not only protect them from the pollen but also from the cold air.

(4) They should protect themselves the best they can from coming in contact with any kind of fine dust, such as house dust, barn dust, strawstack dust, dust from old books or clothing, or lint of any kind.

(5) Long drives on the country roads or traveling by train should be avoided, as it brings them in contact with massive doses of pollen.

Specific treatment against the pollen or pollens to which the patient is specifically sensitive can be given and today the treatment is as satisfactory, or more so, than the treatment for almost any other chronic disease. They can take their treatment either before their season begins (pre-season), or during the season (co-season.) Either is satisfactory, but the pre-season method of treatment is the one of choice and is not only more comfortable to the patient but is about twenty per cent more efficient. Those who wish to take pre-season will be advised by their physician to begin about sixty days prior to the onset of symptoms. This will assure most cases of no discomfort and the best results. Co-season treatment can be given to those who have procrastinated or who forgot about their hay fever symptoms entirely until they began again. In this form of treatment the physician gives the doses in rapid succession.

About sixty per cent of seasonal hay fever patients, unless protected, develop asthma. In a large per cent of cases, prevention of hay fever by treatment automatically prevents asthma—which makes the treatment of seasonal hay fever very important.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Hunting Licenses Too High

Mr. Editor: It seems to us it would be good policy and good business to make some changes in the present fish and game laws the coming legislature. As they now are very oppressive to the great majority of sportsmen and especially to the business man who sells those things that sportsmen use because the license fees are so costly and so many restrictions are placed upon them they will not take out a license. Consequently, all parties lose their business, their trade and much money. The state loses the license fee, the town clerk his fee and worst of all the dog breeder and trainer. The tired and worn out business and working man and growing boy, are deprived of their much needed recreation to restore them to health and more enabling thoughts and higher aspirations which are found only in God's great out of doors in the fresh and invigorating air and sunlight. We read in the papers a good deal about the value of game. It is all bunk. It is not worth half it costs in dollars and cents. We know because we have been a sportsman for over half a century. The only real value is in the inspiring recreation we get from contact with the forces of nature. We are perfectly satisfied if we happen to come back after a good day with dog and gun and are willing to pay a reasonable price for the privilege.

If the license fee was placed back where it used to be to $1.25 and 25c to the town clerk there would be more than double the number of licenses taken out and consequently more revenue to the state and everybody would be satisfied. Vermont has a resident hunting license of $1 and a resident fishing license of $1 and a non-resident license fee of $3.50. We are going there next week. There should be many changes in the game laws made this winter. They are very unfair and oppressive, especially to the farmers who furnish the place to hunt on and have to pay an exorbitant price for a license. They are good sportsmen and a mighty good sort. If they are approached right and their rights and property respected, they are perfectly willing for one to hunt on their land without a permit. This part of the law should be removed. The law that a boy cannot set a trap until he is 16 years old is a great injustice to the growing boy and should be repealed. It is far better for him to be out in the woods and fields trying to get a little spending money than to mingle with evil influences that surround him and learn bad habits. There should be an open season on quail next year.

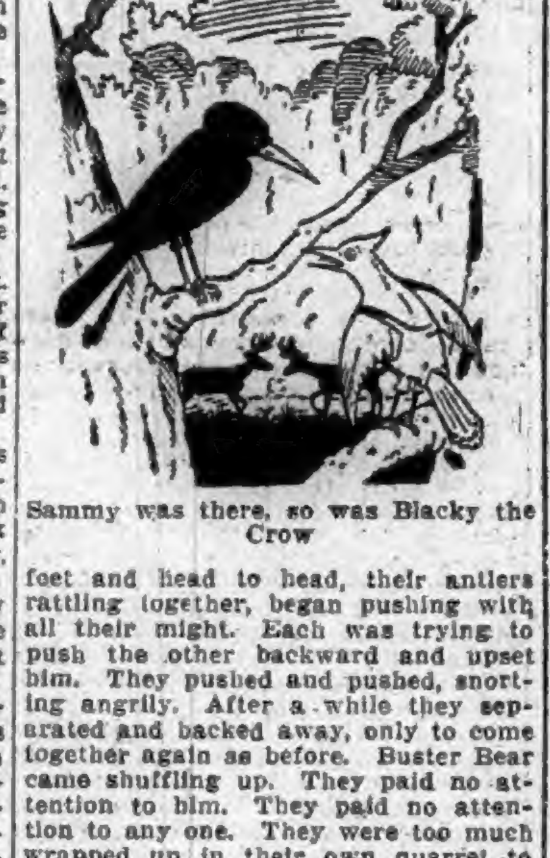
The Battle of the Beechnuts

The armed, rejoicing in their might,
Are always looking for a fight.
—Mother West Wind.

A great hush had fallen over the Green Forest in the neighborhood of the beech trees. Gone was the voice of Chatterer the Red Squirrel. No longer did Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel bark. Even the tongue of Sammy Jay was quiet. Sammy was there. So was Blacky the Crow. Both were leaning forward eagerly watching the scene below. Lightfoot the Deer was standing on the edge of a little opening among the trees. He was a picture of rage. One dainty forefoot pawed the ground. The hair along the back of his neck, on his shoulders and along his back was raised. On the other side of the little clearing a strange Deer, as big as Lightfoot, as handsome as Lightfoot and apparently as angry as Lightfoot, was also pawing the ground.

Where this strange Deer had come from no one knew. Probably he had come down from the Great Mountain. No one had seen him before. He was perhaps a little younger than Lightfoot, but every bit as fine looking. All of the little people looking on agreed to this. Standing half hidden in the midst of some small hemlock trees was beautiful Mrs. Lightfoot. She, too, must have thought the stranger very handsome. Certainly there was admiration in the shy glances which she gave him. To see her you never would have guessed that she was the cause of all this anger. She acted for all the world as if she wondered why these two should be threatening to fight.

Suddenly, as if by agreement, both plunged forward. As they came together they rose on their hind feet and struck with their forefeet. They struck hard. You know those forefeet are armed with sharp-edged little hoofs. Then they dropped to their feet and head to head, their antlers rattling together, began pushing with all their might. Each was trying to push the other backward and upset him. They pushed and pushed, snorting angrily. After a while they separated and backed away, only to come together again as before. Buster Bear came shuffling up. They paid no attention to him. They paid no attention to any one. They were too much wrapped up in their own quarrel to think of anything else. Buster sat down at one side to watch the fight.



Sammy was there, so was Blacky the Crow

Rearing up and striking with those sharp hoofed forefeet, coming together head to head and pushing with all their strength, Lightfoot and the strange Deer continued the great fight. Now and then one would try to get back of the other, but never succeeded. The ground was torn up. Once Lightfoot slipped to his knees and it looked as if he might be overthrown. A moment later he was up again, however. The same thing happened to the stranger. Neither could get an advantage. They were very evenly matched.

"Oh, I do hope Lightfoot will win!" whispered little Mrs. Impy.

"So do I," replied Impy.

This was the wish of all the other little people, too. You see, they had known Lightfoot for so long that he seemed to belong there and they knew that whoever should lose this battle would have to leave the Green Forest. So all those little people in feathers and fur looking on hoped and hoped that Lightfoot would win. As for pretty Mrs. Lightfoot, probably she hoped so, too, though it was clear that she admired the stranger very much. If the latter should win she would be quite willing to bestow her favors upon him. If he should lose, she probably wouldn't be sorry. Now, wasn't that a queer state of affairs?

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

Eagerness to Get Ahead too Fast Results in Many Failures

One of the practical lessons which S. W. Straus sought year in and year out to impress upon the masses of the people of this country was the value of what he termed "patient thrift." It was his doctrine that eagerness to get ahead too rapidly was responsible for the financial hardships of many persons. "To many," he once wrote, "the processes of systematic saving and prudent investing seem a little slow. Experience, nevertheless, has shown that advancement through thrift is in many cases rapid because of the opportunities that are unfolded for those who prepared themselves in every way for these circumstances. Thrift is the happy forerunner of improved opportunity."

With most persons the chief objective of their thrift habits is to have enough to live on when they shall have reached the age of retirement or the period of life when they will be able no longer to earn a livelihood. It was always the doctrine of S. W. Straus that, with this objective in view, no one could afford to take a chance with his savings in an effort to obtain abnormal returns such as might be derived from speculation or from any investment of funds where promises of unusually large and alluring returns were held out. It was better, he always pointed out, to be satisfied with what might be called a fair return on one's savings and investments.

While this might seem a slow process the result of "patient thrift" along these lines is in reality somewhat surprising unless one has made a close study of possible results. For example, a young man starting at 25 and saving $50 a month until he is 40 would have approximately $15,000, provided his savings were invested and the proceeds re-invested at 6 per cent. What this really means is that while he is saving only $600 a year he is adding $1,000 a year to his capital, and if he should keep this up until he reaches the age of retirement, say at 60, he would have a sum from which he could derive a very livable annuity for the rest of his years.

Aerial Explorer Gets Instructions by Telephone 6,000 Miles Away

A telephone bell jingled in the office of Dr. John Oliver LaGorce, vice president of the National Geographic society, in Washington at noon a day or so ago, while that official was receiving a verbal report from Frederick Simpich, leader of the society's aerial survey of the islands of the Caribbean and eastern South America, who had returned to Washington within the hour.

"Captain A. W. Stevens wishes to speak with you," said the operator.

"Stevens is still in South America, there must be some mistake," said Dr. LaGorce.

"He is calling from Santiago, Chile," explained the operator.

"I will talk with him," replied Dr. LaGorce.

In an eight-minute conversation, heard with complete clarity at both ends of the line, the aerial photographer of the survey party explained that the Chilean government had graciously offered to place at the disposal of the members of the society's expedition still in South America, a Chilean army airplane and pilots for a photographic survey of all parts of that republic, an especially noteworthy tender of co-operation in view of the fact that under army regulations in Chile no air passengers are permitted to carry cameras in flights over that country, except under strict military surveillance.

Captain Stevens' voice was carried over 900 miles of wire from Santiago over the Andes to the suburbs of Buenos Aires, Argentina, then dispatched by short wave radio to Nectong, New Jersey, where it was picked up by wire again and carried to New York city, then relayed to Washington. The Washington end of the conversation traveled by an entirely separate route (to New York city, Lawrenceville, New Jersey, thence to another radio station in Argentina, then by wire across the South American continent) to avoid interference of ether waves.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

Inland Paper Board Company, Inc., Versailles and Montville.

Previous to 1916, when the Federal Paper Board Company, Inc., took over the mill now owned by the Inland Paper Board Company, Inc., at Versailles, the owners were making a grade of paper called sheathing paper. At that time they had only one paper machine, producing 12 tons per day. In 1921, another machine was added, thereby increasing the production until at the present time the mill has an average production of 140 tons per day, and makes all grades of box board.

Soon after the Federal Paper Board company took charge, a railroad siding was built, which greatly reduced the cost, for prior to this time all raw material and also the finished product had to be trucked about three-eighths of a mile to the railroad station at Versailles.

In 1927 the Inland Paper Board company purchased a mill at Montville, known as the "Bank mill." It was taken over from the receivers of the Fort Griswold Paper company. The production at this mill has now been increased from 22 to 38 tons per day.

The two mills employ over 200 persons, with a payroll of $6,000 weekly.

During the latter part of 1927, a box factory was built at Versailles for the use of the Brooklyn Cooperage company, a subsidiary of the American Sugar Refining company, and was leased to them for the making of all American Sugar Refining company cartons, the board for which is made by the Inland Paper Board company.

The two mills furnish board to be made into boxes for many nationally advertised products. One of the particular advantages of the Versailles mill is the exceptionally fine brook water used in the process of board making. This is important on account of the quantity of board made into boxes for food products.

The present officers are: William G. Shortess, president; Howard T. Brown, vice president and manager; Miss L. C. Eckhardt, secretary and treasurer.

FACTS FOR FAT FOLKS

A Pennsylvania woman writes—"I find Kruschen Salts wonderful as a laxative and also a reducer and they are worth their weight in gold to me." Mrs. Fred Barringer of Lewistown, Mont., lost 19 pounds of fat in 4 weeks.

Take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning—don't miss a morning—an 85 cent bottle lasts 4 weeks—get it at any drug store in the world—Millions take this little daily health dose.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD, DRINK WATER

Add a spoonful Jad Salts to first glass before breakfast to clear intestines of poisons that may pass from intestinal tract to kidneys and invite trouble.

If you have miserable pains in your back, or strained feeling, don't jump to the conclusion you have a bad kidney ailment and start dosing yourself with a lot of medicine. Plain water is the best diuretic—the best flusher of the kidneys you can find.

Drink a full glass one-half hour before breakfast to which you've added a spoonful of ordinary Jad Salts. The water will flush the kidneys. The Jad Salts will cleanse the intestines of the dangerous toxins of Systemic poisoning which are probably the real cause of those back pains.

According to recent discoveries of able men of science, these toxins frequently pass from the lower intestines to the kidneys, causing pus formations and pain—and inviting trouble. Get them out of your system and chances are, those pains you've diagnosed as "kidney pains" will go like magic. You'll feel a general easing up, less of that horribly tired and strained feeling at your back. You'll feel more snappy and alert than perhaps for years.

You can get the Jad Salts at any corner drug store. Just ask for ordinary Jad Salts. Take as suggested above. Also drink two glasses of plain water between every two meals and at bedtime. Then if your "kidney pains" aren't completely gone in six days or less, see a good doctor. Try this simple way today. You'll be glad that you did.

WIFE OF MAYOR OF CHICAGO ROBBED OF $17,000 IN GEMS

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—(AP)—Mayor William Hale Thompson tossed down the gauntlet to his police chiefs today to find the men who robbed his wife of $17,000 worth of jewelry and sent her to bed, prostrated by the shock.

John H. Alcock, acting commissioner of police, accepted the responsibility with few words. The whole department is working to apprehend the robbers.

Between the lines that told of the midnight holdup in front of the Thompson's Sheridan road apartment the public read two questions: "Who? and Why?"—the "why" inspired by the theory that underworld foes of the Alcock administration took the sensational method of robbing the mayor's wife to jeopardize the commissioner's post.

"I have my own ideas about that," Alcock said. "The matter will be fully investigated."

Another theory as to the motives behind the robbery was that Mrs. Thompson was the victim by a mere chance, that the robbers were waiting to hold up anyone who came along or possibly that they had "spotted" her because of her expensive jewels.

The three men who took the jewelry from Mrs. Thompson and slugged and robbed her policeman-chauffeur said nothing to indicate they knew Mrs. Thompson's identity. They did, however, express surprise at finding a star on the chauffeur, Peter O'Malley, one of the robbers, saying he was a "cop hater" threatened to kill O'Malley "on general principles" but was interrupted by his companion's return with the jewels.

977 NAMES OF VOTERS TO BE MADE RECEIVED BY REGISTRARS OF VOTERS

When the limit for receiving applications of to-be-made voters expired at 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, there had been 977 names handed in to Registrars of Voters Tyler D. Guy and Joseph B. Downes and the assistant registrars in the various districts. Of the applicants 548 were men and 429 were women.

The number is 103 less than the to-be-mades in 1926, which was a year similar to the present with a state election just ahead. This year the men applying to be made voters have kept up the mark of four years ago but the women have fallen off, as there is a gain of one on the men's side but a decrease of 104 on the women's side.

The number of applications in the six districts of the town this year were the following:

	Men	Women
First district	180	125
Second district	141	103
Third district	78	64
Fourth district	45	43
Fifth district	70	55
Sixth district	34	39
	548	429

Total—977.

Four years ago the applications were as follows:

	Men	Women
First district	199	198
Second district	117	132
Third district	91	101
Fourth district	40	36
Fifth district	68	36
Sixth district	32	35
	547	533

Total—1080.

Those whose names have been put in this year will now be required to appear on either of two Saturdays this month, the 11th or the 18th, before the board to be made voters. The board will sit in the common council chamber at the court house on the days named from 9 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. and from 1:30 to 8 p. m.

Those who are made voters will be able to vote in the state election in November, but any applicant whose name has been put in will not be able to vote unless he is duly made a voter by the board.

Printed lists of the voters are to be posted in the corridor at the court house for public inspection and should be consulted by voters to see if they are in the proper district, especially if they may have moved from one district to another.

TEACHERS CONTRIBUTE TO SCOUT FUND

Recently a letter was sent to teachers in Norwich from the local Boy Scout council asking for contributions to the scout work. In the letter an address of James E. Russell, dean of American school men and women, is quoted. "My friends, as a schoolmaster, I want to tell you that it is my honest conviction that our schools in America supported by the public for the public good will not be equal to the task of the next generation unless we incorporate into them as much as is possible of the Scouting spirit and the Scouting method, and in addition to that, fill up just as many as possible of the leisure hours of the boy with the out and out programme of Scouting"

According to the local scout headquarters, a number of teachers have made contributions to the fund during September and are as follows: Miss M. Vetter, William G. Tarbox, Miss Mildred Dunlop, Miss Faith Bonfoey, Miss Gertrude Browning, Miss Gertrude Ward, Miss Agnes Bresnan, Miss Aida Watrous.

SAYS NORWICH LEADER IN MENTAL HYGIENE WORK

Norwich is in the front rank of communities of its size in co-operative work along the lines of mental hygiene, according to Dr. George S. Stevenson of New York, who was the speaker Tuesday at the luncheon meeting at Norwich inn which was the first meeting of the fall season held by the Social Workers Council of New London and Windham counties. Dr. Stevenson is the director of the division on community clinics of the national commission on mental hygiene.

There was an attendance of about 50 with the vice president, Miss Gertrude Osborne, visiting nurse of New London, presiding in the absence of the president. Miss Margaret Bridgers, visiting teacher of Norwich, was in charge of the programme.

Mental hygiene was difficult of definition, said Dr. Stevenson. It consists not so much of caring for those who are mentally sick as in keeping people well when upset by sudden stree. In other work all welfare activities contributed a part, the family, the public health nurse, the public school through the visiting teacher, while the clinic was of course necessary for serious problems. He spoke of the way these could co-operate and said that only six communities in the class of Norwich had such a well correlated programme as is carried out here, and which is being watched with much interest.

A general discussion followed his talk.

SCOUTLEADERS TO HEAR EXECUTIVE FROM HARTFORD

Local scoutleaders and boy's work leaders will hear an interesting discussion of boy's work by Scout Executive Fred Hill of Hartford this (Wednesday) evening at 7:15 p. m., in room 215 Thayer building. Mr. Hill's talk will mark the opening of the advanced training course for scout men in this city.

The course which will last twelve sessions of two hours each and will be held every two weeks, is open to all adults interested in work for boys. Considerable interest has been manifested in the training work by local men and it is expected that about 20 men will enroll in the course.

Following the meeting refreshments will be served.

Studying Public Speaking

The civic leadership and public speaking class at the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday evening elected the following officers at its opening meeting: President, Judge Nelson J. Ayling; vice president, R. D. Judd; secretary, Miss Mary E. Bundy. The lesson was taught by Rev. W. J. Sly on How to Make a Four-Minute Speech. The question for the next meeting is: What is the greatest Need of Norwich? Should There Be an Airport or Miniature Golf Course? Several members are to speak on this.

CONTRACTOR SUES DOCTOR ON CONTRACT BALANCE

On a claim that a balance of $8,700.71 is due him, as the balance on a bill for $15,414.17 against Dr. Frank C. Atchison, of this city, Fred D. Miller, a Preston contractor, has brought suit against the doctor in the superior court.

The complaint alleges that there was a contract signed March 8, 1930, by which Miller was to construct a concrete walk, curb and sidewalks at the doctor's property on and near Washington street, payment for which was to be on the basis of ten per cent over the cost with a stipulated sum for the use of machinery and equipment. While the work was in progress, it is claimed that Dr. Atchison notified Miller he would be unable to make the payments at the times specified under the agreement and it was thereupon agreed that Miller should borrow the necessary money and that Atchison would reimburse him for the interest charges. The total money claimed due is $15,414.17, on which $6,713.76 has been paid.

For Women's Citizenship School.

What agencies have we in our public school system which can prevent the maladjusted child from becoming a delinquent? This is the question which the Connecticut League of Women Voters will attack on the first morning of its two day citizenship school, October 21-22, at Connecticut College for Women, New London. Miss Margaret Danehey, school nurse in Willimantic, will discuss this phase of preventive work with children. Miss Margaret Bridgers, visiting teacher in Norwich, will describe the work that can be done by a person in her position. Miss Maud Keator, director of the division of special education and standards of the state department of education, will tell of the work that can be done by the special class teacher.

Other sessions of the citizenship school on the prevention of juvenile delinquency will include such questions as the child guidance clinic, the foreign child in our schools, probation, the child and his leisure.

Christopher Baldwin, 76, well known resident of Ledyard, died at his home there, Tuesday morning after a long illness. He was born in Woodbridge county, Ipswich, England, October 27, 1853, and at the age of 14 ran away from home, shipping as a sailor on a sailing vessel. He became a professional paper hanger, painter and interior decorator.

Mr. Baldwin was united in marriage Sept. 15, 1878 with Ruth Ann Mallison and until 1892 they made their home in Brooklyn, N. Y. They then moved to Connecticut, in the interests of Mrs. Baldwin's health. Sometime after coming here Mr. Baldwin purchased the Chapman estate which became his permanent home. Miss Jennie M. Case

Miss Jennie M. Case of 422 Washington street, a life long resident of Norwich Town, died suddenly Monday afternoon. She was a daughter of the late George and Elizabeth Roath Yeomans Case. For many years Miss Case was a teacher in the public schools in Norwich and an active worker in the First Congregational church, Norwich Town, where her loss will be keenly felt. She was also prominently identified with the social affairs of that section of the city. She leaves a sister, Mrs. Thomas Browning of Norwich and five nieces, Miss Gertrude Fuller of Wichita, Kan., the Misses Gertrude and Ruth Browning, Mrs. Frank M. Rathbone and Mrs. Cooper Boyd.

The following tribute to Miss Case is expressed by H. L. Yerrington.

In the death of Miss Jennie M. Case, this community has lost one who was a person of a quiet, yet estimable character, who always did what she thought was right under all circumstances.

The First Congregational church of which she was a valued member for many years, will miss her greatly. She was always present when possible at every service, and especially at the prayer meetings was one of the few there. Truly, her works follow her and will be an inspiration to those of us who are left in the years to come

James M. Babbitt

James Monroe Babbitt, who passed away at his home in Lisbon early Monday morning, was born in East Killingly on October 12, 1868, the son of James Monroe and Julia Smith Babbitt. He received his education in the public schools of East Killingly. As a young man he went to Montville where he worked in the Pequot cotton mill being, for some years, the boss spinner.

On October 22, 1886, he was united in marriage with Miss Sarah S. Johnson of Montville.

Twenty-two years ago, he moved with his family to Hanover where he was in the employ of the Airlie mills until he secured a position with the state highway department as district foreman. About ten years ago, when his son, A. Z. Babbitt, opened up the Occum garage, Mr. Babbitt went in with him and had been a valuable helper there until failing health this summer caused him to give up all work. Five weeks ago, Mr. and Mrs. Babbitt left Occum and since then have been making their home with their youngest son, James Jr., of Lisbon.

STAID OLD QUAKERTOWN IS ALL PEPPED UP OVER THE SERIES TODAY

(By Edward J. Neil, Associated Press Sports Writer)

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7—(AP)—Staid old Philadelphia, suddenly aware that the closing act of a highly dramatic world series is to be staged upon her doorstep, went slightly baseball batty today.

Pride in the hammering Athletics of Connie Mack, surprise in the gallant comeback of the St. Louis Cardinals, mingled to stir up in the faithful the excitement that was so obviously lacking when the American league champions swept the opening two games of the annual classic here. The rally of the Cards that captured two of the three battles in St. Louis has set the whole town to scrambling for a chance to see the sixth game tomorrow afternoon in Shibe park.

Philly Baseball "Bugs" Fooled

The baseball bugs of William Penn's colony had no idea that the mighty sluggers of Mack would ever be back to wind up the series in their own backyard after belting the National league title holders around in the first two matches here. They saw the Cardinal aces, Burleigh Grimes and Flint Rhem, go down under the clouting of the boyish Jimmy Foxx, Smiling Al Simmons and the fighting Mickey Cochrane, saw Lefty Grove and big George Earnshaw dominate the pitching situation, and concluded, as they had thought all along, that there was not enough opposition in the thing to get much excited about.

Can the Cardinals Do It?

But the Cardinals, grim and determined, rolled back into Philadelphia early this afternoon, trailing two games to three in the series count, faced with the problem of winning tomorrow or joining in defeat three National league champions in a row before them, the Pirates of 1927, the Cardinals of 1928 and the Cubs of 1929. There was nothing of the beaten about them as they jostled about gaily in the railroad station, threw their bags into a line of taxicabs, and wheeled away to their hotel under escort of motorcycle police.

Crowd at Station to See Hallahan

A crowd of several hundred formed in the station to point out Slim Bill Hallahan, the quiet southpaw who plastered a shutout on the A's in the first game at St. Louis Saturday, Jess Haines, the knuckler who baffled the Mackmen Sunday, and Grimes, scrappy, courageous, fighting foreman, who went down yesterday to a 2 to 0 defeat when Foxx hit him for a homerun with Mickey Cochrane on base in the ninth. There was respect for these western warriors in the attentiveness of the faithful, and the hoots and catcalls from the fringe of the crowd attested at least to the fact that the rabid ones still consider them dangerous.

"Goodbye, St. Louis"

"Goodbye, St. Louis," one group sing-songed over and over again as the players bundled into their cabs.

The Athletes stared at them icily.

With the Cardinals berthed for the afternoon in movies or about the hotel lobby, thinking, talking, acting out baseball, and the Athletics still speeding east in their special train from St. Louis to arrive at 5:45 p. m., the city itself went back to talking baseball and figuring ways and means of getting into Shibe park tomorrow.

30,000 Reserved Seats All Gone

The 30,000 reserved seats in the park have been sold but speculators have enough of the pasteboards to make the hunt interesting. Prices tonight were rising steadily with single seats for the sixth fray selling readily at 15 apiece and up. If a seventh game is needed to decide the issue, all tickets for the last game will be placed on sale at the gates of the ball yard Thursday at 11:30 a. m.

Will a Seventh Game Be Necessary?

There seemed to be considerable feeling among the fans in the street that a seventh game will be necessary if Bill Hallahan, already nominated to do the hurling for the Cardinals, pitches anywhere close to his shutout performance against the A's last Saturday. The general impression is that Lefty Grove will be on the hill for the Athletics again tomorrow but the fans are beginning to wonder if the Maryland southpaw can go on indefinitely winning ball games for Connie Mack. Grove captured the opener, lost to Haines in a tight duel Sunday, and came back to hold the Cards safe after Earnshaw retired for a pinch hitter in the eighth yesterday. The general belief is that Mack will hold Earnshaw in reserve for the final battle Thursday if Lefty fails tomorrow.

Gabby Street Still Full of Pep

Gabby Street, manager of the Cards was full of pep and ginger as he marshalled his cohorts around the town.

Street Don't Think He's Licked Yet

"We're far from licked," he insisted. "We're one game behind but that don't matter. We're better off than the A's are for pitchers. We'll be right back at them tomorrow with Hallahan pitching, and he'll win."

Grimes Looking for Another Chance

Burleigh Grimes, aching for another chance to get at the A's, replayed the series in the hotel lobby for a group of the interested, and hoped that he would be selected to pitch the seventh game if the Cards win tomorrow. Jess Haines, however, seems to be Gabby Street's reserve man, with Grimes held for relief duty.

"We'll win in there tomorrow," Burleigh announced, "because the head of our batting order is due to do some hitting. Grove and Earnshaw haven't been striking us out so much. We've been getting a piece of the ball most of the time. Tomorrow we'll begin to get it all. I wouldn't be surprised to see both teams hit and turn in one of those 12 to 10 things."

QUINN SAYS HE WOULD NOT CONSIDER McCARTHY

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7—(AP)—Robert Quinn, president of the Boston American league baseball team, announced tonight that he had called off all negotiations with Joe McCarthy, recently deposed manager of the Chicago Cubs, to manage the Boston Red Sox and that under no circumstances would the Red Sox consider him as manager.

"After conferring with McCarthy for more than an hour," Quinn said, "and finishing up by making him the most generous proposition ever made to anyone connected with the game of baseball, I am satisfied I have done everything humanly possible to secure his services.

"During the course of our conversation he impressed me with the fact that he preferred to handle a ready-made ball club that requires little or no managing, to one that needed attention. So, after several days' serious consideration, I have come to the conclusion that it would be a mistake to let McCarthy 'shop around' and then come to the Red Sox if he could not land elsewhere.

"Therefore, under no circumstances, will the Boston Red Sox further consider McCarthy as manager."

BING MILLER

HACK WILSON VOTED MOST VALUABLE IN NAT. LEAGUE

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7.—(AP)—Lewis R. (Hack) Wilson, pudgy outfielder of the Chicago Cubs who smashed all National league home run records this year besides dethroning Babe Ruth as the major league circuit clouting champion, was proclaimed tonight his league's most valuable player, by vote of a committee of the Baseball Writer's Association of America.

The selection was unofficial, inasmuch as the National league last year abandoned its annual custom of picking the most valuable performer and rewarding him with $1,000. However, it was made by the same committee that functioned on behalf of the league last year and was announced by James Crusinberry of Chicago, the retiring president of the writers' organization.

Wilson won the distinction, for the first time, after a close contest with Frankie Frisch, captain of the St. Louis Cardinals, and Bill Terry, first sacker of the New York Giants, and the new National league batting king. Wilson received 70 votes out of a possible maximum of 80. Frisch received 64 and Terry 58. No others were close.

The extraordinary feature of the voting was that Wilson led the tabulation despite being accorded only one ballot for first place among the eight writers, each of whom ranked ten players. Frisch, on the other hand, was voted the most valuable by four and Terry by the remaining three. Wilson's total points were higher by reason of his receiving five votes for second place, one for third and one for fourth, while his rivals were shoved further down the list by some of the selectors.

None of the three leading contenders has ever won the honor before. Rogers Hornsby won the last official National league award last year, it being his second prize.

Wilson, in addition to his record of hitting 56 home runs, created a new all-time major league record for runs-batted-in, totaling 190. Frisch's all-around playing was a feature of the rapid rise of the Cardinals to the top and he batted .346. Terry topped the hitting list with an unofficial mark of .401.

The leading ten players were as follows:

Hack Wilson, Chicago	70
Frank Frisch, St Louis	64
Bill Terry, New York	58
Babe Herman, Brooklyn	36
Chuck Klein, Phillies	33
Kiki Cuyler, Chicago	27
Glenn Wright, Brooklyn	27
Fred Lindstrom, New York	17
Paul Waner Pittsburgh	14
Elwood English, Chicago	13

William L. Veeck, president of the Chicago Cubs, when he learned of the selection, announced that the Chicago club would give Wilson $1,000, which in the past had been given by the National league.

N. F. A. FOOTBALL COACH K. OF C. MEETING SPEAKER

Tuesday evening, at the K. of C. home, Courtland G. Whitney, coach of football at the N. F. A., delivered a most interesting and instructive talk on football to a large audience assembled in regular meeting.

After the transaction of the regular routine business of the meeting presided over by Grand Knight Patrick Coleman, the speaker of the evening was fittingly introduced by Lecturer Matthew J. Sheridan.

Mr. Whitney dealt with his subject in a masterful way, treating it from the viewpoint of the spectator, the player, and the coach. Rules governing the situations arising in the case of a fumble, blocked kick, incompleted forward and lateral passes were explained and indicated by the speaker as those which frequently give rise to discussion among spectators and with which familiarity is necessary for a reliable understanding of the progress of the game.

The history of football from its inception in England, its gradual growth from a contest of brute strength into one of science an dstrategy, and the various ramification of the game today were illustrated on a black board by the speaker who showed the difference existing today in the best formation of Rockne, Warner and Zuppke.

In closing, Mr. Whitney emphasized his attitude toward the game as being one valuable in the development of character rather than important from the standpoint of losses and defeats.

Enthusiastic applause greeted the closing of the talk following which a rising vote of thanks was tendered the speaker. A smoker luncheon and social time followed.

CITIZENS ACCEPT DEFI OF WESTERLY TEAM

Immediately following word of the challenge in Tuesday's Bulletin of the Westerly Independents directed toward either of the two local teams, the Polish Citizens or J. B. Martin, came notice from Manager George Bizinski of the Cits that he had written accepting the defi and was ready to start festivities. If arranged, the series would probably be a three-game affair and should the weather hold out, would draw large crowds.

If Westerly does not accept, then the Citizens season will be closed. During the course of the season, the Cits won the City league pennant and then went on to trim the New London Kaceys in their county series by taking three games in four. It is this county title that Westerly is after for they have put in a bid for it by virtue of a win over the Citizens last May, but this was before the Citizen team was really organized.

NEW KIND OF NOTE PAPER

He and she were very good friends and had been for a long time, always joking one another about this and that. She was a stenographer and he had occasion to drop into her office on business every day or so. One day he came and not finding her in his accustomed place thought he would play a little joke on her.

Seeing a blank piece of paper on her desk he took out an indelible pencil and scribbled the following note:

"Dear Love:

I will not see you Monday or Tuesday but I will be in to see you Wednesday."

He did not sign his name and went out. In due course the young woman returned and the first thing that attracted her attention was the note. The wording of the note interested her not a little for she quickly turned the note over and gave a gasp of chagrin. The note had been written on a check that the boss had made out to be sent out to pay a bill. What was to be done? She could not take it to the boss for he might misunderstand the text of the note. And again he might think she was careless in leaving a check around so that people could write on it.

She decided that she would take it to the bank. At the bank she was informed that there was nothing to do but take it back to the maker of the check and have a new one drawn. With fear and trembling this she did and the new check was made. But she has informed the young man that if any more notes are to be written that he bring his own note paper.

NAVY AND COLGATE MAY BE HANDICAPPED BY INJURIES

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—(AP)—Navy and Colgate suffered casualties today that may seriously handicap them on Saturday when they take the field against Notre Dame and Lafayette, respectively, in their first major football games.

In the course of a two-hour scrimmage at Annapolis, Lou Kirn, one of the Navy's most consistent backs, suffered a wrenched knee that may keep him out of the lineup against Notre Dame at South Bend. Kirn scored all of Navy's touchdowns against William and Mary last Saturday and was counted on to give Notre Dame's defense a busy afternoon.

Up at Hamilton, N. Y., Colgate's triple-threat back and captain, Leslie Hart, was confined to the infirmary with a severe cold and may not get into the game with Lafayette. If he is out his post probably will be taken care of by Antolini and Ask, sophomores.

The eye infection that struck Snead forced Mal Stevens at Yale to re-arrange his backfield formations in preparation for Georgia. McLennan's backfield got three new members in Sullivan, replacing Snead; Kemp Dunn, transferred from Albie Booth's backfield, and Crowley at fullback in place of Taylor, who went to fullback in Booth's quartet. A host of minor injuries kept Pitt's drill down to a minimum but the Panthers have a "breather" this Saturday in Western Reserve.

On the other side of the picture, all of Harvard's long list of injured reported for work today except Mays and White, who probably will not be able to play against Springfield. At Cornell, Chris Martinez Zorilla, a tackle who has been on the sidelines, appeared in uniform but is not expected to play against Hampden-Sydney, Coach Gil Dobie preferring to save him for the Princeton game a week later.

Carnegie Tech, which faces the formidable Georgia Tech team, was encouraged by the return of two injured stars, "Slats" Flanagan, halfback, and "Tank" Highberger, tackle. Tech was kept at work until long after dark.

Brown devoted more than two hours to forward passing practice as Captain Link Fogarty again worked out, giving rise to hopes that he will be able to start against Princeton. The Tigers, meanwhile, were rolling up 13 first downs in an informal scrimmage with Rider college of Trenton. Princeton's running attack was clicking but most attempts to take the air were failures.

Syracuse and New York university both were driven hard in preparation for Rutgers and Villanova, respectively, but Army took it easy, anticipating no trouble with Swarthmore.

Some improvement in Dartmouth's attack was noted as the Indian varsity beat the freshmen, 25-0. Penn's workout for Virginia was featured by some intensive practice on the forward pass.

STEVENS ORGANIZES A THIRD VARSITY BACKFIELD

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 7.—(AP)— Coach Mal Stevens organized a third varsity backfield today and made several changes in his two original backfields during a 45-minute scrimmage which resulted in a 12 to 0 victory for the varsity over the freshmen.

Three new men appeared in McLennan's backfield. Pat Sullivan replaced Snead, who will be out of the line-up for at least two weeks because of an eye infection; Kemp Dunn was transferred from Albie Booth's backfield to replace Taylor, and Joe Crowley was sent in at fullback instead of Parker. Taylor was shifted to Booth's backfield, with otherwise remained unchanged.

The new backfield organized by Stevens consisted of Heim, quarterback; Wiener and Conklin, halfbacks, and Levering, fullback.

Heim and Al Beane each scored one of the varsity touchdowns today.

LOCAL BOYS PLAYING WITH COLLEGE ELEVENS

The Academy again this year has a good representation on college football teams, former local boys being listed from Conn. Aggies and Wesleyan around home down to William and Mary college in Virginia.

At the Aggies, Jim Moore is the regular varsity center and Jim Williams has seen much service at quarterback; at Wesleyan, Billy Tirrell is holding down a regular backfield post, and down at William and Mary Jack Marks has already broken into the varsity line-up. Last Saturday, Jack played against the Navy, relieving Constantine, the veteran fullback.

Rain Predicted for Today

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7—(AP)—The prospect of the sixth world series game between the Athletics and Cardinals, was none too promising tonight. The weather man predicted increasing cloudiness for tomorrow probably followed by rain, in the afternoon or evening.

EARNSHAW WILL PROBABLY HURL AGAINST HALLAHAN IN TODAY'S GAME

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7.—(AP)—As advertised, the well known fast-ball firm of Grove, Earnshaw, Earnshaw and Grove has been given the contract to pitch the Philadelphia Athletics to their second straight world's championship at the expense of the highly persistent and still very dangerous Cardinals of St. Louis.

Connie Mack, insofar as he ever commits himself before any game, intimated as much upon arrival today to share with his men a noisy reception from a crowd of rooters, with a band, at North Philadelphia station at 5.45 p. m.

They will resume business at the old home stand, Shibe park, tomorrow afternoon in the sixth game of the contest for major league baseball laurels and personal dividends that mean more than $5,000 to the winners as against around $3,300 to the loser.

All of the warring forces, including the somewhat exhausted correspondents, came back to the eastern battlefront today, with the Athletics holding the lead, three games to two, after a desperate fight to take the last of three torrid engagements on the western front.

The Mackmen, therefore, need only one more game to settle the issue and the probability is that the order of operators by the pitching firm will be big George Earnshaw, as the starter, and Robert Moses Grove, as relief man, if necessary. In this order, they proved thoroughly effective yesterday in blanking the Cardinals in a thrilling game decided by Foxx's ninth-inning homer and they will be shot right at the Red Birds, unless Mack undergoes a sudden change of mind and heart.

Th Cardinals, knowing they must win to prolong the series to its limit of seven games, will rely on their able young southpaw, Bill Hallahan, who shut out the Athletics in the third game at St. Louis and inaugurated the come-back of the Red Birds.

The prospects are for a continuation of the spectacular battle of pitching wits and strong arms, by far the greatest succession of twirling performances in a decade of world's series competition.

Before it started, the prediction was that the sage of the House of Mack would be obliged to put virtually the entire pitching burden for the A's on his right and left-handed aces, Earnshaw and Grove subsequent events have thoroughly justified this forecast.

Grove won the first game, Earnshaw the second and they combined to capture the crucial fifth contest after three of the lesser Mackian lights had been pounded in the third game and after Grove had lost a close fight to old Jesse Haines in the fourth. Having gambled once with his boxmen and lost, Connie Mack is not likely to take any further chances, especially with both Earnshaw and Grove strong and willing enough to shoulder all of the remaining boxwork.

Earnshaw started two successive games in the last world's series, with a day in between, so there is a precedent for his nomination to start again tomorrow. Grove repeatedly has demonstrated his ability to work, either as a starter or a relief man, with a minimum of rest.

The Cardinals, although the odds are against them once more, believe they have another come-back in their systems, especially with their two previously victorious pitchers, Bill Hallahan and Jesse Haines, prepared for further duty. These two are not as sturdy, on the records, as their brilliant rivals but then have been good enough so far to justify the Cardinal hopes of prolonging the battle. In winning the two straight games that put the Red Birds back on even terms last Saturday and Sunday, Hallahan and Haines held the slugging Athletics to 11 hits and one run in 18 innings.

Hallahan and Haines have had as much to do with the striking of batting averages in the current series as Grove and Earnshaw. Even Burleigh Grimes, twice the victim of Athletic bats in hard-fought games, has pitched well enough to have won a majority of times. In some quarters the belief is, in fact, that Grimes, being stronger than Haines, will be selected to pitch for the Cardinals if the seventh contest is played, but Haines is the more logical choice, all things considered.

Al Simmons and Jimmy Foxx, with some timely aid early in the series by Mickey Cochrane, have hit up to their season's averages so far, but as a whole the team mark of the Athletics—.181 in five games—is far below their American league figure of .294. Similarly, the clouting Cardinals have skidded from a season's hitting figure of .314 to a series mark of only .206.

Jimmy Wilson, sparkling catcher of the Cards, and Charley Gelbert, shortstop whose all-around play has been a sensation, are hitting well above their normal marks but the rest of the Red Birds, especially Bottomley, Hafey and Frisch, have fallen far below standard.

The most extended world's series battle in four years will result in the gate receipts nearing the million-dollar mark by the time the returns for the sixth game tomorrow are tabulated. They exceed $800,000 for the first five games and upwards of $150,300 will be collected if Shibe park is filled to its capacity of nearly 33,000 again. A seventh game would send the "gate" over the million mark for the first time since 1926.

PLENTY OF ACTION AT DANIELSON AMATEUR BOUTS

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 7.—There was a lot of action and plenty of rugged slugging in the town hall tonight when the amateur boxers opened their fall indoor season. Despite the good show, the attendance was hardly up to average.

Kid Brouillard, 105, Danielson, won a more or less unpopular decision over Joe Jackson, 106, Goodyear. Brouillard appeared the stronger but Jackson handed him so many left jabs as to be in line for the decision in the opinion.

Ray Landry, 126, Danielson, won a sluggish match from Young Bonin, the same weight, of Holyoke. Bonin took the count of eight in the second round and lost by decision.

Anselm Bernier, 126, Danielson, won on a technical kayo over Tony Burte, 124, Worcester. This bout was marked by good mixing throughout. Burte was down for a count of eight in the first and took a similar count in the third when the referee stopped the bout.

William Leo, 130, Danielson, took the decision over Harry Woods, 130, Worcester. This was a free-for-all socking match. Leo got to Wood in the third and won handily, although the Worcester boy stuck it out to the finish.

Kid Tourney, 114, Webster, defeated Patsy Long, 113, Worcester, by coming through in the third and final round, after a fairly even battle. This was a fast bout.

Young Plasse, 130, Webster, got the decision over Ray Bellou, 129, of Holyoke. Bellou took a good licking for two rounds and at the end of the third and final round both were tired.

Johnny Kroul, 148, Holyoke, surprised the crowd by winning a decision over Gene Billings, 148, of Goodyear, in one of the star bouts of the evening. Kroul, a six-footer, had it his own way from the very first and upset the dope. In the third, Kroul had Billings down for a count of nine. This particular circumstance apparently decided the bout in Kroul's favor.

Jimmy Wilson, 176, Worcester, got a technical K. O. over Mike Klowik, 171, of Holyoke. Klowik was swinging round-house shots all over the place through this bout, missing the most of them. Klowik went down for a count of nine towards the end of the fight and then went down again and the referee called it a night, Wilson being the victor.

The next bouts here are scheduled for October 21.

MALONEY SPRINGS SURPRISE BY TAKING VERDICT FROM CARNERA

BOSTON, Oct. 7.—(AP)—Jimmy Maloney, considered a "ham and egg" heavyweight everywhere except in his home city of Boston, upset the pugilistic world here tonight by clearly outpointing Primo Carnera, 265 pound Italian behemoth, in a wild and savage 10 round battle in the Boston Garden.

Giving 65 pounds away to the giant, Maloney carried the battle to him in every round except the first two and landed the cleanest punches throughout the furious slugfest that caused more than 12,000 spectators to yell themselves hoarse in every round.

Maloney, once he found a way to prevent the giant from pushing him into a corner or against the ropes, lashed Carnera's head with wide rights and short straight lefts to his body. None of these blows hurt Carnera much but, from the third to the ninth rounds, they stung enough to make him miss often. While Maloney gamely slugged on to his lead, Carnera instinctively closed in on him and battered his head and body with short blows.

This chopping wore Maloney gradually but he digested his punishment in impressive fashion and beat Carnera to most of the punches up to the ninth round.

The defeat was the first suffered by Carnera since he started his American campaign early this year. He piled up a record of 23 victories, 22 by speedy knockouts, but ugly rumors followed most of his contests. The boxing public appeared convinced that his bout with Maloney would be honest and decided to judge him by his showing against the Boston favorite.

Carnera, against the aggressive Maloney, was impressive only at close quarters. Giving away such weight, Maloney had to depend upon fast footwork and it was seldom that the Italian could land a clean blow on his circling rival.

And even against the ropes or in a corner, Carnera was only able to chop short but terrific blows on Malone's head, neck and body The Italian did not even stagger Maloney at any time and the only time that Jimmy lost his footing was when he slipped against the ropes missing a wild swing for Carnera's head.

The Italian giant towered almost eight inches over Maloney and during the first two rounds he used his great weight and height advantage to turn and twist Maloney into position for heavy lefts and rights to the head and body.

Maloney was able to avoid these tactics in the third when he held Carnera even, and then the Boston boy improved in every round. Starting with the fourth, Maloney's best round the Boston battler scored lefts to the body and hard rights to the head almost at will. He evened matters in the fifth and won the favorable verdicts of Referee Johnny Brassill and Judge W. F. McDermott and W. A. McMenimen by taking the points in the sixth, seventh and eighth.

The ninth found Maloney weary. Carnera's bulk and gigantic strength slowed him down considerably but Jimmy tired, was as courageous as ever and his head continued clear enough to escape the traps that the towering Italian tried to make against the ropes.

Maloney had to hold frequently during the final two rounds, which Carnera won with his close quarter slugging, but the Boston boy always managed to escape the knockout blows that the desperate Italian launched at him. They were slugging toe to toe at the final bell, which they failed to hear, and had to be pried away by their seconds.

The Associated Press score card called the third even and gave Maloney credit for the fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth. The card also revealed that Carnera landed a total of 195 blows to Maloney's 192 but the latter's were the cleanest.

CHUBBUCK OUT OF FOOTBALL FOR SEASON

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Oct. 7—The Connecticut Aggie football squad went through its hardest and longest drill of the week here this afternoon.

The first team spent most of its time on offensive and defensive work on forward passing, following this with a dummy scrimmage and a signal drill. Teams B and C played a vigorous and closely contested practice game.

Coach Dole used this afternoon to give his men some of the finishing touches before they meet the University of Maine at Orono next Saturday. Tomorrow will be their last day of practice before they start on the trip Thursday.

Dan Chubbuck, tall and rangy regular halfback is now definitely out of football for the remainder of his college career. After having his right knee examined last night, it was decided that Chubbuck had better forsake football in order that he will be able to play basketball next winter on the team which he was elected captain last spring. Chubbuck is also a star on the Aggie track team, holding the school records for the shotput, discus, broad jump, and low hurdles. He holds the Eastern Intercollegiate records for the two first named events.

Bob Rebman will be on the field again in a week if his broken rib continues to mend as rapidly as it has been mending during the past week, physicians stated. Rebman is a regular tackle and his services are greatly desired for the remaining games of the season.

Pinky McCombe seems to have recovered completely from his knee injury which he received in practice last week. He worked out in his regular position as right halfback on Team A today and will be expected to do a large share of the work of the backfield in the game with Maine Saturday. He is considered one of the best defensive backs that has ever played for the Aggies.

ORGANIZATION MEETING OF BASKETBALL LEAGUE TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin)

PLAINFIELD, Oct. 7.—The meeting of the Southern New England basketball league will be held Wednesday evening at the Plainfield Community house with President Lester Sallsbury presiding. Organization of the league will be completed with eight teams entered from Willimantic, Putnam, Woodstock, Danielson, Moosup, Taftville, Westerly and Plainfield. It is planned to have all games played on the Community house floor. Amateur rules will prevail. At the last meeting it was undecided which night to play the games but it will probably be Monday or Tuesday evenings of each week. The meeting is to be called at 8:15 p. m. and all basketball managers interested, other than those mentioned, are cordially invited to attend.

ACADEMY FACES TOUGH ASSIGNMENT IN HARDING

The Academy is hard at work this week preparing for the third game of the season, which will be played Saturday at Bridgeport with Warren Harding high. This is regarded as one of the stiffest tussles on the Wildcat schedule and Coach Whitney is determined to have his men at their top form.

An added incentive will be the fact that N. F. A. has never beaten the Presidents in football. The first game was played in 1927 and every tilt since has been a victory for Harding, the games being alternated between the two cities each year.

The Wildcats have started their season auspiciously with victories over Chapman Tech and Hartford Bulkeley in the first two contests.

Wesleyan Baseball Schedule

MIDDLETOWN, Oct. 7—(AP)—Wesleyan university baseball team will play 17 games next spring, it was announced today. Army appears on the schedule for the first time.

The schedule: April 17, Vermont; 18, Stevens Institute of Technology at Hoboken; 22, Yale; 25, Army; 28, Clark at Worcester; 30, Bowdoin; May 2, Amherst; 6, Trinity at Hartford; 8 Connecticut Aggies at Storrs; 9, Massachusetts Aggies at Amherst; 13, Worcester Polytechnic institute; 16, Williams at Williamstown; 20, Springfield; 23, Lowell Textile; 27, Amherst at Amherst; 30, Connecticut Aggies; June 13, Williams.

Harvard Has Stiff Practice

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 7.—(AP) — The Harvard varsity football team went through the hardest workout of the season here today when Head Coach Arnold Horween ordered a wto-hour scrimmage session with the scrubs. Plays were tried time after time and the scoring was not counted.

All of the Crimson regulars, with the exception of Eddie Mays and Bernie White, practice. Both are still nursing injuries and are not expected to be in the starting backfield against Springfield on Saturday.

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW YORK, Oct. 7—The scores of twenty of the big football games next Saturday were predicted over the radio last night by "Chick" Meehan, head coach of New York university, and he prophesied that two members of the "Big Three" would be defeated—Yale by Georgia and Princeton by Brown. (Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Oct. 7—The regular October meeting of the Westerly chamber of commerce was held Monday evening in the council chamber with President Dr. John Champlin, Sr., presiding. Reports were heard from various committees as follows: Trades and manufactures, by Charles T. Eccleston, chairman, showing that the New England silk mills, formerly owned by E. S. Rosenthal and now conducted by Frank Ix, showed some industry and progress was reported in the location of an aircraft accessories company, and also in the sale of the White Rock mill.

For the recreational committee, reports presented for Frank J. Sullivan, as from the New England conference that Westerly hotels in comparison with similar hotels, were leaders the past season. This statement was questioned by Frank L. Furnace, proprietor of the Elm Tree inn in Pawcatuck. Chairman Champlin, named as delegate to the next New England council meeting to be held at the Hotel Statler in Boston, James McCormick, Harry R. Milner and the third to be named later after Horace E. Burdick, A. G. Martin and Fred S. Opie had declined. In the absence of Harry R. Milner, chairman of the municipal improvement committee, President Champlin stated that the report of the federal authorities gave assurance of the erection of a new Pawcatuck river bridge at Broad street.

The recommendation of the Westerly chamber for legislation to have public food handlers have physical examination, was discussed and President Burdick of the town council stated that the town council had left the matter in the hands of Westerly Town Solicitor John Ferguson. SEVERAL FINED FOR AUTO LAW INFRACTIONS

WESTERLY, Oct. 7—Stonington town court judge, William A. Wilcox of Pawcatuck, on Tuesday morning held regular session of the town court when Prosecutor Henry P. Hammacher of Mystic had a number of continued cases brought before the court.

R. D. Guynap, 20, soldier from Fort H. G. Wright, Fishers Island, charged with the operation of an automobile on the Boston Post road, without an operator's license, apprehended by Connecticut State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh, had D. J. H. Weeks named by the court as his guardian ad litem. Waivure of a reading of the complaint was made and a plea of guilty entered and the accused found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $10 and costs which totalled $28.95 and was paid.

John J. Fascale, of Central avenue, Glendale, Long Island, N. Y., arrested for reckless auto operation by State Police Officer Whitmarsh, did not make his court appearance. On the recommendation of Prosecutor Hammacher the cash bond of $43 was called and declared forfeited.

Melvin A. Gavitt, 23, 263 Broad street, Groton, arrested by Officer Whitmarsh on Oct. 4th for the operation of a taxi without a special license, entered a plea of guilty. He pleaded guilty saying that he now had such license. Found guilty he was fined $10 and paid fine and costs of $12.95.

A month's continuance was granted in the cases of operations of motor trucks which in seven counts failed to meet the Connecticut state motor law requirements of no emergency brake, no reflector, exceeding the prescribed width, defective horn, no tail lights and no capacity side markings, against two brothers, Raymond G. Hanson, 20 of 116 Goodhue street, West Haven and William L. Hanson, 37, same address. They were arrested by Connecticut State Officer William E. MacKenzie of the Groton barracks on Oct. 4th. The continuance was to enable them to earn fines and costs of $25 each and $11.96, respectively.

Benjamin Sebastian, 30, colored, of Mystic, hobbled to the bar on a crutch and was found guilty of driving an automobile on last Labor day night near the Old White House inn on the Westerly-Stonington state highway while he was under the influence of liquor. He was sentenced to 30 days in New London county jail.

Sebastian, so Prosecutor Hammacher informed the court was the driver of a Chevrolet car in which were four adults and one child which caused a collision of five automobiles a Hudson car of Donald Whaley of Westerly, a New York Buick, another Chevrolet car and a Marmon car. In the mixup there were 15 people more or less seriously injured. The accused pleaded guilty to the offense and admitted that he had been released from the Westerly hospital a month ago and was still under the care of Dr. John E. Ruisi of Westerly. He was committed to the New London jail by Officer Whitmarsh.

A week's continuance was given the auto law infraction case against Joseph Stevens, a soldier from Newport, R. I.

The charges of angling in inland waters without licenses against Percy Crompton and John Welsh of Westerly were continued to next Saturday at 9:00 a. m. to permit the men to continue at their employment when it was reported that they were working but three days a week.

98 Westerly Legionnaires at Boston

There were 98 people from Westerly and vicinity who left town on Tuesday morning for Boston to attend the parade and activities of the 12th annual convention of the American Legion, and took advantage of the special New Haven coach train at 7:40 a. m. with an excursion rate of $2.25. The Westerly ticket office had available some 500 tickets, but there were many who preferred to leave earlier and return home at a later hour than the special excursion train. There were seven cars on the train which made a last stop at Auburn, R. I., and five coaches were filled when the train left Westerly. Among its passengers were members of the Legion, mostly in uniform, to whom some 40 or more special tickets had been sold. The special train was followed by the regular morning accommodation train and then shortly before 8 a. m., a second excursion train of twelve coaches, apparently well filled passed the Westerly station without stopping, Boston-bound. Later trains also took Westerly people to Boston and many made the trip by auto. A few Legion members took early morning expresses, some leaving before 6 a. m., for Boston.

Probate Judge Frank H. Hinckley of Mystic was a business caller on Tuesday when he held a session of Stonington probate court for Pawcatuck in the probate court rooms in the Walton block on Tuesday afternoon.

Amos Brown, wife and daughters, Harriet and Shirley, were the New Haven guests of Westerly relatives on Sunday.

Dr. James P. Read, communist candidate for United States senator from Rhode Island, failed to keep his appointment in holding an open air communistic meeting Tuesday evening in front of the Dixon street armory. Some discouragement was given the gathering a week ago when the schedule was laid when Westerly Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown placed Dr. Read under arrest. He was charged with holding a public assemblage without first securing a license to do so. His case will be heard in third district court at a Friday session.

Herbert F. Bothemich has returned to his Pawtucket, R. I., home after a Westerly motor visit the first of the week.

EIGHT PROBATE MATTERS COME BEFORE JUDGE BURKE IN WESTERLY COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Oct. 7—Probate Judge Edward M. Burke held the first October session of Westerly probate court in the probate court chambers of the town hall on Tuesday afternoon when probate matters were disposed of as follows:

Estate of William H. Barnes. Inventory, submitted by Administrator Howard Barnes, received, examined, allowed and ordered recorded.

Estate of Emma J. Doust. Attorney John J. Dunn appeared in court to represent the interests of a grandson, John Wilson, and entered serious objections to the entrance of accounts claimed not supported by proper vouchers and declared his intention to file a request for a bill of particulars. The items questioned were for the guardianship account of a daughter, Mrs. Martha D Wilson for services as housekeeper and her daughter, Miss Helen G Wilson, for services as nurse for her grandmother, who died March 24, 1926, aged 84 years, and who for a number of years prior was reported as of unsound mind. Attorney S. H. Davis who appeared for Miss Wilson, stated that ill health was the cause of the non appearance of Mrs. Wilson in court on her guardianship account. At request of Mr. Dunn a two weeks' continuance was granted for him to examine items in accounts submitted and to examine witnesses, if possible, at the next regular court session. Judge Burke declared that although the death of a ward terminated a guardianship, he would rule that the account continued until properly filed.

Estate of Alvina A. Sisson. Petition received from Albert A. Hall, administrator, represented in court by Attorney C. E. Roche, to sell an undivided interest in certain real estate on Cemetery avenue. Certificates of appraisal had been filed by Howard E. Thorp, appraiser, and with no objection permission was granted to sell interest at public or private sale for not less than $1,350.00. Bond was made $2,000 with surety satisfactory to the clerk.

Estate of George E. Egger. Inventory filed by Washington Trust Co. administrator, d. b. n., c. t. a., and the same was examined, allowed and ordered recorded.

Estate of Martha Edwina Arnold. Inventory received, examined, allowed and ordered recorded.

Estate of Clara E. Percy. Inventory, received, examined, allowed and ordered recorded.

OAK FLOORS PROVE MOST PERMANENT

If new flooring is to be a part of the interior remodeling program the permanence of the material selected should be considered. The durability and beauty of oak makes it desirable for this purpose. Any coloring or texture which the home owner may wish to have can be obtained from among the various widths and grades of white or red oak, plain or quarter-sawed.

In laying a new floor no interior woodwork need be disturbed, except the quarter-round, and the entire house may be floored, one room at a time, with little disturbance to the household. The appearance of the finished floor and its wearing qualities are as great as if the oak had been laid when the house was built.

HOOVER'S ADDRESS AT KINGS MOUNTAIN

KINGS MOUNTAIN, S. C., Oct. 7.—(AP)—In an address at the celebration here today of the 150th anniversary of the battle of Kings Mountain, President Hoover said:

My Fellow Countrymen:

This is a place of inspiring memories. Here less than a thousand men, inspired by the urge of freedom, defeated a superior force intrenched in this strategic position. This small band of patriots turned back a dangerous invasion well designed to separate and dismember the united colonies. It was a little army and a little army and a little battle, but it was of mighty portent. History has done scant justice to its significance, which rightly should place it beside Lexington and Bunker Hill, Trenton and Yorktown, as one of the crucial engagements in our long struggle for independence.

The battle of Kings Mountain stands out in our national memory not only because of the valor of the men of the Carolinas, Georgia, Tennessee, Kentucky, and Virginia, who trod here 150 years ago, and because of the brilliant leadership of Colonel Campbell, but also because the devotion of those men revived the courage of the despondent colonies and set a nation upon the road of final triumph in American independence.

No American can review the vast pageant of human progress so mightily contributed to by these men without renewed faith in humanity, new courage, and strengthened resolution.

My friends, I have lived among many peoples and have observed many governments. Each has its own institutions and its own ideals, its own spirit. Many of them I have learned to respect and to admire. It is from these contrasts and these experiences that I wish to speak today—to speak upon the institutions, the ideals, upon the spirit of America.

Growth Of The Country

In the time since the battle of Kings Mountain was fought our country has marched from those struggling colonies on the Atlantic seaboard to the full sweep of the Pacific. It has grown from fewer than 3,000,000 people to more than 120,000,000. But far more inspiring than its growth of numbers has been the unfolding of a great experiment in human society. Within this land there have been builded new and powerful institutions designed of new ideas and new ideals in a new vision of human relations. Through them we have attained a wider diffusion of liberty and of happiness and of material things than humanity has ever known before. Our people live in a stronger security from enemies abroad and in greater comfort at home than has ever before been the fortune of a nation. We are filled with justifiable pride in the valor, the inventions, the contributions to art and literature, the moral influence of our people. We glow with satisfaction at the multitude of activities in the nation, the state, the local community, which spread benefits and blessings amongst us. We may be proud of our vast economic development over these 150 years, which has secured to the common man greater returns for his effort and greater opportunity for his future than exist in any other place on the earth.

In the large sense we have maintained open the channels of opportunity, constantly refreshing the leadership of the nation by men of lowly beginnings. We have no class or caste or aristocracy whose privilege limits the hopes and opportunities of our people. Science and education have been spread until they are the universal tools of the common man. They have brought to him the touch of thousand finer things of life. They have enlarged the horizon of our vision into the inspiring works of God.

Rise Of American Man And Woman

This unparalleled rise of the American man and woman was not alone the result of riches in lands or forests or mines; it sprang from ideas and ideals, which liberated the mind and stimulated the exertion of a people. There were other parts of the world even more easily accessible to new invasion by man, whose natural resources were as great as those of the United States, yet their history over this 150 years presents no achievement parallel to the mighty march of the United States. But the deadening poverty of other lands was in the absence of the stirring ideas and ideals which have lightened the path of the whole American people. A score of nations have borrowed our philosophy from us, and they have tempered the course of history in yet a score of others. All have prospered under them.

These ideas and these ideals were in the hearts and inspired the souls of the men who fought the battle of Kings Mountain. They had spurred the migration of their fathers from the persecutions and restricted opportunities of Europe, had been sustained by their religious faith, had been developed in their conflict with the wilderness, and had become the spirit of the American people, demanding for man a larger mastership of his own destiny. Our forefathers formulated them through the declaration and the constitution into a new and practical political and social system unique in the world. Devoted generations have secured them to us.

It is never amiss for us to review these principles, that we uphold our faith in them, that we search our fidelity to them, that by stretch of our vision over the vast pageant of our accomplishment we should gain courage to meet the difficulties of the day

Our political system was a revolt from dictatorship, whether by individuals or classes. It was founded upon the conception that freedom was inalienable, and that liberty and freedom should rest upon law, and that law should spring from the expressed wisdom of the representatives of the majority of the people themselves. This self-government was not in itself a new human ideal, but the constitution which provided its framework, with the checks and balances which gave it stability, was of marvelous genius. Yet of vastly more importance than even the machinery of government was the inspired charter of the rights of men which it guaranteed. Under them we hold that all men are created equal, that they are equal before the law, and that they should be safeguarded in liberty and, as we express it latterly, in equality of opportunity to every individual that he may achieve for himself and for the community the best to which his character, his ability, and his ambition entitle him.

Principles And Ideals

No student of American history can fail to realize that these principles and ideals grew largely out of the religious origins and spiritual aspirations of our people. From them spring at once the demand for free and universal education, that the door of opportunity and the ladder to leadership should be free for every new generation, to every boy and girl. It is these human rights and the success of government which has maintained them that have stimulated the initiative and effort in each individual, the sum of which has been the gigantic achievement of the nation. They are the precious heritage of America, far more important, far more valuable, than all the riches in land and mines and factories that we possess. Never had these principles and ideals been assembled elsewhere and combined into government. This is the American system.

We have lived and breathed it. We have seldom tried even to name it. Perhaps we might well abandon efforts to define it—for things of the spirit can be little defined. Some have called it liberalism, but that term has become corrupted by political use. Some have called it individualism, but it is not an individualism which permits men to override the equal opportunity of others. By its enemies it has been called capitalism, and yet under its ideals capital is but an instrument, not a master. Some have called it democracy, yet democracy exists elsewhere under social ideals which do not embrace equality of opportunity.

System Unique With America

Ours is a system unique with America—an expression of the spirit and environment of our people—it is just American.

Parallel with us, other philosophies of society and government have continued or developed and new ones have come into the world, born of the spirit of other peoples and other environments. It is a function of freedom that we should search their claims with open mind, but it is a function of common sense that we should reject them the moment they fail in the test. From experiences in many lands I have sometimes compared some of these systems to a race. In the American system, through free and universal education, we train the runners, we strive to give to them an equal start, our government is the umpire of its fairness. The winner is he who shows the most conscientious training, the greatest ability, the strongest character. Socialism or its violent brother, Bolshevism, would compel all the runners to end the race equally; it would hold the swiftest to the speed of the most backward. Anarchy would provide neither training nor umpire. Depotism or class government picks those who run and also those who win.

Whatever the merits or demerits of these other system may be, they all mean the destruction of the driving force of equal opportunity, and they mean the destruction of our constitution, for our political framework would serve none of them and many of its fundamental provisions are the negation of them. They mean the abandonment of the nation's spiritual heritage.

Religious Faith

It is significant that some of these systems deny religion and seek to expel it. I can not conceive of a wholesome social order or a sound economic system that does not have its roots in religious faith. No blind materialism can for long engage the loyalties of mankind. Economic aspiration, though it strongly marks the American system, is not an end in itself, but is only one of many instruments to accomplish the profound purposes of the American people, which are largely religious in origin. This country is supremely dedicated, not to the pursuit of material riches, but to pursuit of a richer life for the individual.

It would be foolish for me to stand here and say that our political and social system works perfectly. It does not. The human race is not perfect yet. There are disheartening occurrences every hour of the day. There are always malevolent or selfish forces at work which, unchecked, would destroy the very basis of our American life. These forces of destruction vary from generation to generation; and if we would hand on our great inheritance to our children, we must successfully contend with them.

While we can not permit any foreign person or agency to undermine our institutions, yet we must look to our own conduct that we do not by our own failure to uphold and safeguard the true spirit of America weaken our own institutions and destroy the very forces which upbuild our national greatness. It is in our own house that our real dangers lie, and it is there that we have need to summon our highest wisdom and our highest sense of public service.

Must Bar Corruptive Influences

We must keep corruptive influences from the nation and its ideals as we would keep them from our homes. Crime and disobedience of law are the very incarnation of destruction to a system whose basis is law. Both pacifism and militarism court danger from abroad, the one by promoting weakness, the other by promoting arrogance. Failure of many of our citizens to express their opinions at the ballot box is at once their abandonment of the whole basis of self-government. Manipulation of the ballot is a denial of government by the people. Corruption or even failure of moral perceptions in public office defiles the whole spirit of America. Mere destructive criticism destroys leadership and substitutes weaklings.

Any practice of business which would dominate the country by its own selfish interests in a destruction of equality of opportunity. Government in business, except in emergency, is also a destruction of equal opportunity and the incarnation of tyranny through bureaucracy. Tendencies of communities and states to shirk their own responsibilities or to unload them upon the federal government, or of the federal government to encroach upon the responsibilities of the states, are destructive of our whole pattern of self-government. But these evils can not shatter our ideals or subvert our institutions if we hold the faith. The knowledge of danger is a large part of its conquest.

It is the first duty of those of us who believe in the American system to maintain a knowledge of and a pride in it, not particularly because we need fear those foreign systems, but because we have need to sustain ours in purity and in strength.

The test of our system of government an dof our social principles and ideals as compared to others may in part be interpreted by the practical results of the 150 years of growth that have brought to us the richness of life which spreads through this great nation. I can give you some measurement both of our standards and of our social progress. In proportion to our population, we have one-fourth more of our children in grade schools than the most advanced other country in Europe, and for every thousand of our young people we have six and one-half times as many in colleges and universities. And I may add that today we have more of our youth in institutions of higher learning than all the rest of the 1,500,000,000 people of the world put together.

Material Well-Being

Compared with even the most advanced other country in Europe, we shall find an incomparably greater diffusion of material well-being. We have twice the number of homes owned among every thousand people that they have; we consume four times as much electricity and we have seven times as many automobiles; for each thousand people we have more than four times as many telephones and radio sets; our use of food and clothing is far greater; we have proportionately only one-twentieth as many people in the poorhouse or upon public charity.

Doors Of Opportunity

There is a profound proof, moreover, that the doors of opportunity have indeed been kept open. The posts of leadership in our country, both in government and in other activities, are held by men who have risen to command. A canvas of the leading administrative officials of our federal government, of our industries, and of our professions, shows that 90 per cent of them started life with no financial inheritance. Despite the misrepresentations of demagoguery, there are today more chances for young men to rise, and for young men to rise, and for young women too, than there were thirty years ago.

We shall not have full equality of opportunity until we have attained that ultimate goal of every right-thinking citizen—the abolition of poverty of mind and home. Happily for us we have gone further than others on this road and we make new gains every decade.

But these tangible things which we can reduce to statistics and comparisons are but a part of America. The great intangibles of the spirit of a people are immeasurable—our sense of freedom, of liberty, of security, our confidence of future progress, our traditions of past glory and sacrifice, the example of our heroes, the spiritual enrichment of our people—these are the true glories of America.

The world about us is tormented with the spiritual and economic struggles that attend changing ideals and systems. Old faiths are being shaken. But we must follow our own destiny. Our institutions are a growth. They come out of our history as a people. Our ideals are a binding spiritual heritage. We can not abandon them without chaos. We can follow them with confidence.

Our problems are the problems of growth. They are not the problems of decay. They are less difficult than those which confronted generations before us. The forces of righteousness and wisdom work as powerfully in our generation as in theirs. The flame of freedom burns as brightly in every American heart. There need be no fear for the future of a republic that seeks inspiration from the spirit of the men who fought at the battle of Kings Mountain.

DULL MATT GLAZED TILE FOR KITCHEN

Forming a fitting background for the colorful cabinets, ranges, and furniture now in vogue, tile has become a popular kitchen wall covering. Particularly in the culinary department of the home is it desirable to have walls which can be easily cleaned as cooking and dish-washing are prone to leave their tell-tale marks, especially about stove and sink.

An effective tile for this purpose has a dull matt glazed surface from which grease can be easily removed with a damp cloth—leaving no permanent spots. The housewife will find it a simple task indeed to keep the kitchen looking bright and clean when so little effort is involved in keeping walls clean Dull matt glazed tile can be obtained in any of 18 colors—three shades of pastel blue, canary yellow, shell pink, cloud gray, jade green peach blossom, black and white. Tiles in several of these colors can be combined to make an attractive wall covering which will blend with any desired kitchen decorative scheme.

LARGE NUMBER OF STOCKS CLOSED YESTERDAY AT NEW LOWS FOR THE YEAR

NEW YORK, Oct. 7—(AP)—The financial markets jolted downhill over rough roads today. Important stocks managed to make irregular recoveries after toppling to new lows for the year, but a majority of the large number of issues traded closed lower. Brazilian and other Latin American bonds were weak, wheat lost more than 2 cents a bushel and corn more than a cent.

To the stock market, the most interesting news development was the information that the exchange authorities had warned certain members against unethical practices in short selling. This was interpreted at first glance in some quarters as meaning that the exchange had declared war on the bears, but second thoughts led to a revision of such an impression. Short selling, it was pointed out, has always been regarded as a necessary part of market procedure and what the exchange sought to do in its warning to some members, it was explained was to prevent unfair practices tending to demoralization.

Nevertheless, the first reaction to the news was a rally at the opening. Prices rose 1 to 7 points under covering by timid shorts, only to break widely when heavy selling came into the market in mid-forenoon. U. S. Steel, American Telephone, General Electric, General Motors and Radio, to mention only a few, were pushed through their previous 1930 minimums on large turnovers and by early afternoon the average for 90 stocks was about a point below the year's low. Prices stiffened thereafter, however, and the 1 to 5 points declines were more than recovered. Sporadic selling on the rally brought recessions from the top.

The market was most active on the decline; the recovery was made on much lighter trading. Sales for the day reached the comparatively large total of 2,568,040 shares.

Extension of the revolutionary movement in Brazil had its chief effect in the bond market, where Brazilian loans broke 1 to 16 points. Coffee, on the other hand, rebounded substantially from yesterday's lows on covering prompted by a belief that the disturbances would curtail movement of the crop. Transactions in Brazilian exchange were necessarily halted by the closing of the banks in that country.

Current trends in the money markets are regarded as holding at least the germ of trade revival. Call funds held at 2 per cent as the banks withdrew about $400,000,000, the second successive day in which loan calling was substantial. In addition, there was a $79,000,000 rise in commercial loans of federal reserve member banks.

Official figures on steel ingot production for September revealed that the average daily output of 110,307 tons was the lowest for that month since 1924. Operations were placed at 55.10 per cent of capacity. The unofficial ratio statistics for the past week appear tomorrow, and a decline in operations would not surprise Wall street.

Today's decline in stock prices attracted attention chiefly because so many issues broke to new lows, although they had been dangerously near the old levels several times. U. S. Steel went to 151 1-4, American Telephone to 198, General Electric to 57 5-8, General Motors to 37 3-4, New York Central to 146 1-4, Westinghouse to 121 and Radio to 23 1-8. With the exception of General Electric and Radio, which closed fractionally lower, and Steel, which finished unchanged, this group ended the day higher. American Can touched a low for the decline and then rallied a point net.

There were gains of a point or more in DuPont, Eastman Kodak, Consolidated Gas, National Biscuit, Southern Railway, Southern Pacific, Sears Roebuck and United Aircraft. Cerro De Pasco, whose annual dividend was cut to a $4 basis from $6, advanced more than 3 and so did J. I. Case. American and Foreign Power recovered more than half of a 5 point drop. Peoples Gas, down 17 points, closed only 1 lower. Missouri Pacific, Prairie Pipe, International Telephone and American Tobacco B, were heavy.

Wheat was sold in sympathy with the weakness of stocks and lost 2 1-4 to 2 1-2 net. Corn eased about a cent and a half, reflecting large offerings and a weak southwest market.

Foreign currencies eased, featured by breaks in the South Americans and the Spanish peseta.

DIVIDENDS JANUARY, APRIL, JULY, OCTOBER

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Oct. 7—(AP)—Chiefly affected by severe temporary downturns of stock market quotations, grain values underwent a pronounced tumble today, more than 3c per bushel in some cases. Contributing impetus to the fall of wheat prices was news that timely rains were benefitting the entire wheat belt of North America, and parts of southern hemisphere countries as well. Meanwhile, also the world's available supply of wheat showed 5,762,000 bushels increase for the week, but for the first time in many months totaled less than at the corresponding date last year.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled 2 1-8 at 2 3-4c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1 at 1 3-8c down, oats 1 1-4 at 1 1-2c off, and provisions varying from 35c decline to a rise of 25c.

Provisions averaged lower with cereals despite upturns in hog values.

COTTON

NEW YORK, Oct. 7—(AP)—Futures closed barely steady, 10 to 12 points lower; spot quiet; middling 10.15.

MONEY

NEW YORK, Oct. 7—(AP)—Call money firm, high 2; low 2; ruling rate 2; close 2 per cent. Time loans steady; 30 days, 1 1-2 at 2; 60 days, 2 at 2 1-4; 3-4 months, 2 1-4 at 2 1-2; 5-6 months, 2 1-2 at 2 3-4; 6 months, 2 3-4 at 3. Prime commercial paper 2 3-4 at 3; bankers' acceptances, unchanged.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7—(AP)—Treasury receipts for October 4 were $5,966,626.78; expenditures $8,985,739.00; balance $308,863,727.36.

Safeway Stores reported September sales of $17,974,158, a decrease of 5.1 per cent from $18,943,644 in September last year. Sales for the first nine months this year, totaled $165,447,527, an increase of 3.8 per cent over $159,374,501 for the corresponding period of 1929.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 7—(AP)—Curb stocks closed irregularly lower today in a session in which extensive liquidation carried the utility group into new low ground for the year. A mild rally in the final hour recovered a portion of the losses and domestic utilities closed about steady. Total sales were 812,800 shares.

Electric Bond and Share was the focal point of attack. It sold down to 58 5-8, a new 1930 low, before rallying to finish at 62 off 1 3-8, net. American and Foreign Power warrants reacted 3 points before recovering more than a point. Brazilian Traction was half off at the close. American Gas and Electric duplicated its year's low and closed 2 3-4 net lower. American Super Power, Niagara Hudson, United Gas, and United Light and Power A were fairly well supported and closed steady to firm.

The weakness of utilities shares had an adverse effect on a few specialties. Driver Harris reacted 3; Deere 5, and Aviation Corporation of the Americas more than 5. Amer. Cyanamid B, was off 5-8. With the exception of Gulf, which rested at a new 1930 minimum with a drop of 1 3-4 points, the oil shares were fairly steady. Cities Service, Standard of Indiana and Vacuum were fractionally higher.

Investment and holding company shares gave ground rather readily before the rally developed. Goldman Sachs reached a new year's low with a 3-4 net loss.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 7—(AP)—Resumption of the selling movement had a devastating effect upon prices of a wide list of Brazilian bonds today. Prices slumped 1 to 16 points, reflecting the uneasiness of American investors over the revolution in the South American country.

While virtually the whole list of foreign bonds was unsettled, prime domestic bonds displayed a firm undertone in dull trading. Most of the activity was in second grade liens and stock privilege issues where a lower trend dominated. Some bonds reacted sharply to new lows for the year.

The day was notable for the appearance of the largest piece of foreign financing of the year in the domestic market—the $100,000,000 Canadian government 30 year 4 per cent bond issue being brought out under the auspices of an international banking group. It was over-subscribed during the day.

The liquidating in both foreign and domestic bonds swelled the volume of business to more than $14,000,000 the largest since May 1. The turnover in South American issues was larger than usual in contrast with fractional movements that usually prevail. Latin American bonds were in supply several points below the previous close. Government, state, municipal and industrial bonds of Brazil were the hardest hit.

Sao Paulo state 8s slumped 16 1-2 points; Brazilian 8s, 15, Rio Grande Do Sul 7s and Brazilian Central Electric Railways 7s and Antioquia first 7s, 10 each. Bonds off 5 to 10 points included Brazilian 6 1-2s, Caldas department 7 1-2s, Cauca Valley 7 1-2s, Pernambuco 7s, Rio Grande Do Sul 6s of 1968, City of Sao Paulo 6 1-2s, and Bolivian 7s of 1969.

Liquidation was extensive in some issues of Chile, Colombia, Peru, Uruguay, Argentine, and Mexico but the losses were narrower, ranging from 1 to 3 points. The European group contained many soft spots. The German International 5 1-2s slumped 2 1-4 to 77 1-2 a new year's low compared with an offering price of 90. Italian 7s were under pressure and reacted 3-4.

There were some wide changes in the domestic list, where an irregular movement again prevailed. Selling dominated the trend of many stock privilege, second grade rails and industrials. Here and there a high grade bond registered a small advance but the majority were on the downside as reflected by the averages, off 2-10ths of a point.

There was an unusually large turnover in St. Paul railroad issues. The 5s of 1975 yielded 1 1-4, and the adjustment 5s of 2,000 reacted 4 3-4 points to the year's low.

Bonds of International Telephone and American and Foreign Power, having extensive interests in South America, were weak. St. Louis, San Francisco 4 1-2s, and Paramount Publix 5 1-2s, reached new lows for the year. Erie 5s, Rock Island convertible 4 1-2s, and Nickel Plate 4 1-2s C, off fractionally were unusually active.

Treasury issues reacted slightly to announcement of the prospective sale of $100,000,000 bills. Liberty bonds were steady to firm.

Offerings tomorrow will include $4,000,000 City and County of San Francisco, Cal., 4 1-2 per cent bonds. A $5,000,000 Mid-West States Utilities company six per cent bond issue has been authorized by the board of directors.

Lester N. Selig, formerly assistant to the president of the General American Tank Car corporation, today was elected president to succeed Elias Mayer, resigned.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7—(AP)—F. and W. Grand-Silver Stores reported September sales of $2,748,980, an increase of 14.0 per cent over $2,409,959 in September of 1929. For the first nine months, sales were $25,168,902, an increase of 29.3 per cent over $19,453,960 for the like period last year. The figures for this year include sales of the Canadian units of Metropolitan Chain Stores, Ltd., recently purchased by Grand-Silver, the terms of the acquisition of the properties having provided for the taking over by Grand-Silver of the business as of January 1, last.

EXTRA BATHROOM IS EASILY MADE

If the average householder realized the small space required to contain all the essentials of a charming modern bath, or an extra lavatory, many old homes would have additional conveniences. These are almost a necessity in a home where there are children or over-night guests.

There is scarcely a dwelling-house in the country which cannot be remodeled at comparatively small expense to accommodate an extra bath or toilet. An old clothes closet or storeroom, be it only a few feet in size, is large enough for the essential appointments. With only such an area to work with, a skillful master plumber can find room for a bath of the built-in-type, a closet, a lavatory and a dainty dressing table and chair. A medicine cabinet recessed into the wall above the lavatory will supply space for many little requirements without occupying valuable room.

No bathroom ever had enough mirrors to satisfy every one who used it. In a little made-over closet, it is often possible to adjust a mirror on the inside panel of the entrance door. Space for a linen press might be found in an adjacent hall.

MIXED STUCCO USED FOR INTERIOR WALL

A prepared stucco, already mixed by the time it reaches the job, with the exception of adding water is being used as interior wall finish. This material is a scientifically blended portland cement product of the desired basic mineral colors—waterproofed and easily applied. It is guaranteed not to effloresce into white streaks or blotches.

Hydrated lime, imported, washed and dried silica sands and other ingredients are blended with mixed portland cement to make a plastic and durable base coat. The finish coat is of cement mixed with mineral colors and other ingredients, making it rich in color and nonfadable in either sun or rain. This stucco is available in white and 12 standard colors.

MRS. JENNIE LESTER SUFFERS BAD INJURIES IN FALL

Mrs. Jennie Lester, 72, of 106 Blinman street, is a patient at Lawrence-Memorial hospital suffering from an injury, which, ordinarily, would not be considered. The outcome of the hurt cannot be foretold, owing to the fact that shock may bring about a seriousness that would not be the case but for the advanced years of Mrs. Lester. The woman was descending the stairs leading from her living rooms to the cellar the latter part of last week, tripped and fell, sustaining a fracture of the right hip. Mrs. Lester remained where she fell for nearly two hours until found by Hiram Keeney, another occupant of the house. Mr. Keeney had a physician summoned and the woman's injury being so serious, she was transferred to the hospital.

WOULD-BE SUICIDE LIVED WITH SAILOR FROM SUB-BASE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 7.—The condition of Mrs. Wilda Ryane, 24, wife of a sailor who is a member of the crew of U. S. S. Oglala, stationed at this port and which now is in Boston, and who attempted sucide last night by swallowing a quantity of tablets of potassium of permanganate, remained serious today at Lawrence Memorial hospital. Still it is believed that the woman will recover. Mrs. Ryane and her husband have been estranged for several weeks and since the estrangement started Mrs. Ryane and another sailor, Louis Weibel, stationed at the base, have been residing in a two-room furnished apartment at 24 Brewer street and out of wedlock. Last evening when Mrs. Ryane and Weibel were at the home of a friend, 86 Washington street, the woman and the sailor engaged in a heated quarrel and a short time later, Mrs. Ryane seized a box of the tablets and swallowed two or three. She soon lapsed into a state of semi-consciousness and was rushed to the hospital. Today, Motorcycle Officer Clarence Martin was assigned to the case but an investigation brought out nothing more than the fact that the woman and Weibel have been residing together as man and wife and that she swallowed the poison during a fit of moroseness. Mrs. Ryane, at the hospital, would or could not give any additional information. This afternoon Weibel was brought to police headquarters and questioned, but other than revealing that a dispute occurred between himself and the woman, he could throw no light as to the act of Mrs. Ryane and he was not held for there was no charge that could be levied against him.

A man who was found drunk on Shaw street was given suspension of judgment as was another, for neither had been presented in court within many weeks.

Weibel will be arrested within a few days on a serious charge, for he has admitted that he rented the apartment where he and the Ryane woman had resided and allowed her to use his name as being his wife. He has attempted to deny that in spite of the fact that he has defrayed the bills for the upkeep of the apartment he had illicit relations with the woman, although occupying the same apartment. Another sailor and a young girl, who has been a resident at the apartment have been questioned and the girl, it developed, is a runaway from New York. She is being held at the police detention home until such time as one of her parents comes to this city and takes charge of her. She is but 16. The police are not in possession of any information that the couple have been guilty of illicit relations.

Robert Capwell, Quaker Hill youth, who was arrested yesterday by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh, charged with the theft of brass from the yard of the Thames Towboat company, Riverside, will not be prosecuted. It is believed that the youth did not steal intentionally, but while he did take the metal he was accused of removing from the yard, it is believed that he was of the idea that he was taking metal that had been discarded and considered useless. The youth found the metal and after taking it away disposed of it for junk. The Towboat company had been missing metal and ore a long time and its employes were on the lookout for the thief, with the result that when Capwell was seen to remove the metal he was complained against and arrested. The parents of the youth have agreed to reimburse the Towboat company any loss which they may have suffered by the act of the boy.

A woman arrested on Huntington street last night by Patrolmen Dennie Cavanaugh and William Manice, charged with intoxication, was not presented in the police court this morning for she was ordered discharged by Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer.

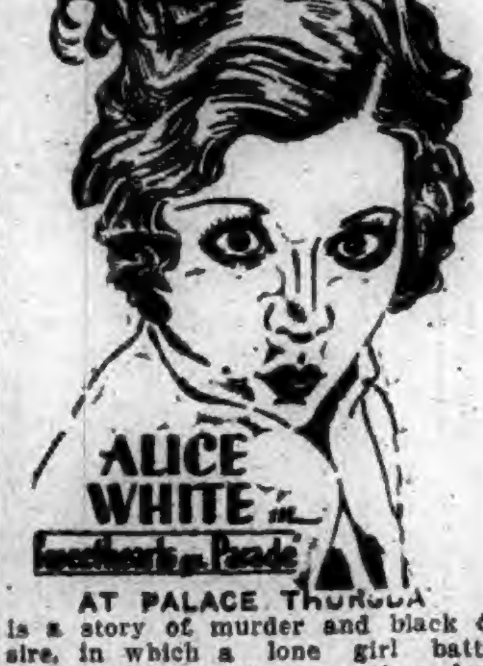
ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

What is perhaps the finest double feature program ever presented at the Palace theatre is the one which this popular Norwich playhouse is offering for three days beginning tomorrow. Patrons who have been accustomed to getting big programs at the Palace won't be surprised to hear that Manager Hamilton has booked as his next attractions, that flaming melodrama of the Carribean, "Hell Harbor," and that great New York comedy success, "Sweethearts on Parade."

Lupe Veles, the bruette tigress of the screen is starred in Hell Harbor. She is the perfect girl for the part. Here is a dramatic scene laid on an island inhabited by the descendants of that famous and terrible buccaneer, Morgan and his followers. Here is a story of murder and black desire, in which a lone girl battles against death and worse than death in this hell hole of the southern seas.



AT PALACE THURSDA

Of a different kind is "Sweethearts on Parade," Alice White, Lloyd Hughes, Marie Prevost and Kenneth Thomson combine to make this at once tuneful and romantic. It is the story of a girl who goes from a small town to a metropolis with her head filled with the notion of marrying a millionaire. Does she get her millions, or what does she get? This is the question that "Sweethearts on Parade" answers with daring comedy.

Today for the last times the Palace presents that naughty yet irresistible picture, "What a Widow," starring the delectable countess, Gloria Swanson. Nobody should fail to see this.

Broadway Theatre

Milton Sills, who portrays the leading role of "Wolf Larsen" in the Fox Movietone all talking version of Jack London's epochal sea story, "The Sea Wolf," saw the first light of day in Chicago, Ill. After graduating from the University of Chicago, with an A. B. degree in philosophy, Sills went on the stage and gained for himself an eminent position in the theatrical world. In 1914 he made his film debut in "The Pit," and has been loyal to the silver sheet ever since. Some of his better known pictures are "The Sea Hawk," "The Barker," "His Captive Woman," and the Fox Movietone "Man Trouble." Playing with Sills in "The Sea Wolf," which opens at Warner's Broadway today are Jane Keith, and Raymond Hackett. Alfred Santell directed.

The black diamond used in industry is said to be 3 per cent. harder than the gem diamond and is therefore the hardest known substance.

Norwich Produce Market

Furnished by Bureau of Markets Conn. Dept. of Agriculture

Today's markets were quiet and mostly inactive. Offerings of a number of late summer vegetables have become light and scattering and selling at premium prices when of good quality. This was particularly true in snap beans, sweet corn and tomatoes. More active demand for fall vegetables is also reported. Potatoes were liberal and holding steady and unchanged. Peppers continue to be the weakest feature on the vegetable market.

The apple situation remains practically unchanged. Higher average quality fruit is now being offered and demand slightly improved. Prices were generally unchanged.

Live poultry continues to be offered liberally and market dull. Native egg receipts are lessening in full size stock and market firm with price advances in the better grades.

THE ANNUAL BUSINESS MEETING FOLLOWS ELECTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

HEBRON, Oct. 7—A short business meeting followed the town election when it was voted to accept the reports of the selectmen, to care for the highways and bridges for the ensuing year as left to the decision of the selectmen; to allow the town to avail itself of state aid in paying railroad indebtedness; and the town officers were authorized to borrow money not to exceed $4,000 for current expenses. It was voted to give $15 annually to the American Legion toward the expenses of Memorial day exercises.

The citizens decided to allow the use of the town hall free for all patriotic, church educational and charitable affairs. It was voted to close a short section of road south of the Congregational church, Gilead, town of Hebron, about 100 to 200 feet on the crossroad that leads to the Bolton road. The town was empowered to provide a dumping ground.

FURNITURE AND DECORATIONS ARE IN SAME FIELD

Furniture and decorations should never be considered as separate and unrelated. If the effect of the room as a whole is to be pleasing these elements must be regarded as a unit.

If a rather prominent figure is used in wallpaper, carpet and drapes, we should incline towards furniture of simple design to avoid an effect of over-ornamentation.

In a room of plain surfaces, plain carpets and simple drapes, one can safely and wisely turn to more elaborate furniture.

And, of course, one must always keep in mind the scale or size of one's furniture, in relationship to the room.

Beware of placing an unusually large object in a cramped space. The largest wall space should be reserved for the largest piece of wall furniture. Don't group all of the heavy pieces on one side, or two adjacent sides of a room, giving an unbalanced effect. There should be an equal distribution of mass objects.

In the small room, plan to keep the furniture away from the center. This lends an impression of size.

Every room should have one piece or more of high furniture. Thus one avoids having all of one's furniture on an even line. This broken line effect is very necessary to avoid monotony. High furniture should be placed on a solid wall, and, if possible, opposite a window.

No room should be overcrowded with furniture. But it is better to err in this respect than to give an impresson of barrenness. An overcrowded room is more livable than one under-furnished.

MILTON SILLS IN THE SEA WOLF AT THE BROADWAY THEATRE

POETRY

Home, Sweet Home!

Mid pleasures and palaces though we may roam
Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home;
A charm from the sky seems to hallow us there,
Which, seek through the world, is ne'er met with elsewhere.
Home, Home, sweet, sweet, Home!
There's no place like Home! There's no place like Home!

An exile from home splendor dazzles in vain;
O, give me my lowly-thatched cottage again!
The birds singing gaily that came at my call—
Give me them—and the peace of mind, dearer than all!
Home, Home, sweet, sweet, Home!
There's no place like Home! There's no place like Home!

How sweet 'tis to sit 'neath a fond father's smile,
And the cares of a mother to soothe and beguile!
Let others delight mid new pleasures to roam,
But give me, oh, give me, the pleasures of home!
Home, Home, sweet, sweet, Home!
There's no place like Home! There's no place like Home!

To thee I'll return, overburdened with care;
The heart's dearest solace will smile on me there;
No more from that cottage again will I roam;
Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home
Home, Home, sweet, sweet, Home!
There's no place like Home! There's no place like Home!

—John Howard Payne.

Stay-At-Home

In dreams I've been to London,
In visions I have seen
The mountains of Himalaya
And the Argentinian green.
By fireside and by window
I've glimpsed that Paris of
The genius that was Villon
With his wild song and love.

I've been to old Benares,
To Burma, Singapore;
I've traveled with a little book
To Bangkok and Lahore.
I've seen the strange old citie
Of mosque and minaret;
In dreams I've walked in Edinburgh
And 'mid old Dublin's fret.

I can remember clearly
That time so far and cool
When I walked up the lordly dock
In town of Liverpool.
Old shops were strange and wondrous,
And faces, how they seemed Like phantoms in those olden towns
Of which I've only dreamed!

—Baltimore Sun.

Health Better Than Riches

"Before I was married, my mother and sister and I did all the farming work on a 64-acre farm for eleven years. I married a farmer and now in addition to my housework and the care of my children I help him with the outside work on our farm. After my last child was born, I began to suffer as many women do. Our family doctor gave me medicine but no results. One day he told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did and now I am a new woman and I know that good health is better than riches."—Mrs. Clyde I. Sherman, R. #1, Lickdale, Pennsylvania.

TELLS SCHOOLMEN PARENTS WANT HIGH SCHOOL EDUCATION FOR CHILDREN

Over two score members of the Eastern Connecticut Schoolmen's association gave a welcome dinner to Dr. Ernest W. Butterfield, state commissioner of education, at the Norwich inn Tuesday evening. The school supervisors, superintendents and teachers gathered at the inn about 5:30 o'clock and enjoyed the following delicious menu:

Cream of Asparagus, Croutons
Crispy Flakes Relishes
Roast Native Chicken
Dressing Cranberry Sauce
Baked Jersey Yams
Cauliflower, Butter Sauce
Garden Salad
French Dressing
Golden Vanilla Ice Cream
Assorted Cake
Coffee

During the menu there was spirited singing, Fred J. Maples acting as the song leader and Morgan R. St. John presiding at the piano. There was a brief business session during which the yearly programme and problems were discussed. There were suggestions as to classroom procedure in junior and senior high schools, elements of good drill, the new type testing, teacher tests and programmes for the special child.

James F. Connolly and Calvin Stanley appeared in an interesting dialogue entitled "Pedagese," which emphasized the need and value of proper school supervision. Edwin B. Floyd of this city was the toastmaster and in opening the after dinner programme, expressed his appreciation of the large attendance at the dinner meeting.

Commissioner Butterfield was introduced to the gathering by Henry A. Tirrell, principal of the Norwich Free Academy. The state commissioner made a decidedly favorable impression on his audience, a number of whom he includes among his personal friends. Mentioning several by name he said they were "star pupils" in his summer class at Bates university. The commissioner paid tribute to school boards in general which, he said, take most of the responsibility of the schools and get a great deal of abuse.

Speaking of the modern trend of education Mr. Butterfield traced the development of education from the days of the Pilgrims to the present time. In the early days, he said, the attitude of the parents was, to a large extent, that their duty ended wheen they provided food, clothing and protection for their children. This attitude has undergone great changes until today parents realize that it is their duty to feed, clothe, protect and send their children through high school. The commissioner said that education has come from the people rather than having been given the people. The people themselves have developed education to the high standards of today.

The commissioner was heartily applauded at the close of his talk, following which there was a discussion of school problems.

COLCHESTER BAPTIST CHURCH TO OBSERVE CENTENNIAL

Colchester Baptist church is to observe with appropriate exercises on Sunday, Oct. 12, the 100th anniversary of its founding. The church society was organized in 1830 and in May, 1835, the constitution was adopted, Elder Andrew M. Smith being the first pastor. Services were first held in the Congregational Conference house until August, 1836, when the present church edifice was completed and dedicated. John Turner, Avery Morgan, Enoch Brown, Elknah Williams, Shubel Smith, David B. Carroll, William Keeney, Russell Chapman, D. Worthington, Asa Cone and Caleb Dart were the principal organizers and leading contributors to the building fund. The church was built on land formerly belonging to Howell Rogers, father of the late Dr. Charles H. Rogers. Two other sites west of the Bacon academy building were considered favorably but a borough meeting voted not to sell the land, so the Rogers tract, farther down South Main street, was selected. The following is a list of pastors from its organization up to the present time: Andrew M. Smith, Augustus Bolles, Robert C. Mills, Pierpont Brockett, Augustus Bowles, G. W. Pendleton, Philo Williams, Daniel Robinson, N. M. Matteson, E. N. Watrous, Dr. D. Lyon, William Ashley, Lyman Teft, C. N. Nichols, W. N. Walden, Joseph Butterworth W. N. Thomas, I. Naylor, A. H. Manee, E. D. Shull, E. A. Cornet, A. E. Harriman, Frank Day, 1879-1900; C. I. Ramsay, 1901-1906; Byron D. Remington, 1909-1922; Dana A. Lane, 1926-1928; J. C. Worden, 1928-1930. From 1906 to 1909 and from 1922 to 1926 the pulpit was filled by several different pastors from surrounding towns. The present pastor comes here weekly from Meriden, Rev. Gustav Friendberg. The two deacons of the church are Edwin R. Sherman and Lucius C. Brown, the former having held the office about 20 years, while Mr. Brown has been a deacon of the church for 50 years.

The anniversary exercises are to commence at 7 o'clock Sunday evening and will open with an organ prelude, followed by the invocation; responsive reading; hymn singing; scripture lesson; prayer; offering; hymn; sermon by Rev. Ellis Gilbert, of West Hartford; hymn singing; historical address by Deacon Lucius C. Brown; addresses of greeting by Lieutenant Governor Ernest E. Rogers, of New London, and Rev. E. E. Gates, of Hartford, general secretary of the Connecticut Baptist convention. Lieutenant Governor Rogers' ancestors from the neighboring town of Salem were faithful attendants at the local church. The program will close with a hymn sing and the pronouncing of the benediction by the pastor. A large number of members and friends of the church from many places about the state are expected to be in attendance.

The plaintiff brought action against the defendant to collect for services which the plaintiff claimed he performed for the decedent from Oct. 15, 1924, until Jan. 27, 1930. Baker claimed that the decedent agreed to provide remuneration for these services in her will but died intestate and the administratrix disallowed the claim.

PARK CHURCH BROTHERHOOD TO HAVE NOTABLE SPEAKER

The Brotherhood of Park Congregational church is making an eastern Connecticut affair of their opening dinner on Monday evening, October 20. The Park church men have been so fortunate as to secure as their guest of honor and principal speaker, Dr. Fred B. Smith, of New York.

Dr. Smith is probably the most widely known guest the club will entertain in Norwich for many a day. Years ago he was a power in Y. M. C. A. circles. Later he was a major factor in the development of the Johns-Mandville company and for some years its vice president. He is now the executive of the committee of one thousand which concerns itself with law enforcement. He is chairman of the executive committee of the Church Union For World Peace. Last winter one of the notable dinners given in New York was a testimonial affair given by his many friends in the metropolitan area. Last June Syracuse university honored the leaders of seven different Protestant churches for their distinguished services, and at this time Mr. Smith was given an honorary LL. D. This summer Dr. Smith was the only American chosen to speak in Old London's famous Guild Hall, when he made response in behalf of the Good-Will pilgrimage. This hall was filled to its great capacity by the seven hundred visiting Americans and their English hosts, after being received by the lord mayor and his lady.

Dr. Smith is returning from a church congress in Oakland, California, and will be in New York in time to come to Norwich for the Park church men's meeting.

Mayor Lee Roy Robbins will welcome Dr. Smith to the city and the opportunity has been given to 30 Congregational churches of eastern Connecticut to meet and hear the head of their far-extended family.

He is one of the best informed men in the nation on the conditions and of the sentiment of the nation on prohibition.

BALTIC ACADEMY STUDENTS HAD ENJOYABLE OUTING

The Baltic academy pupils recently spent a most enjoyable afternoon at Camp Happiness, through the generosity of its proprietor, Mr. Watson. The day proved an ideal one in every way and the girls unanimously agreed that it was gone all too quickly. An appetizing luncheon was served by the senior refreshment committee after which the pupils found ample time to delight in the almost inexhaustible store of amusement which the camp provided for its guests. Several popular piano selections were rendered by the seniors and dancing was enjoyed by all the young people in the pavilion which Mr. Watson courteously opened for the convenience of the students.

Previous to the above trip which was enjoyed by the entire student-body, it was decided that the graduating class of '31 have a separate outing. No sooner were their intentions noised abroad than a most cordial and pressing invitation reached them from a kind friend and former pupil of the academy to spend the holiday at her beautiful summer home at Neptune Park, New London. With the ready permission of their superior, the seniors gladly accepted the cordial invitation. Morning saw the seniors up bright and early, bound for Neptune Park and on pleasure bent. Some of the students went thither by auto with Miss Mary O'Neil, the physical culture teacher, while others preferred to ride by trolley.

Their kind hostess and her sister spared no efforts on their part to make the day a memorable one in the annals of the seniors' school life. After the pupils had enjoyed boat-riding, bathing and diving at this popular beach resort they partook of a particularly tempting buffet lunch, again generously provided by their hostess. The seniors' heartfelt thanks are due to their thoughtful friends who so affably contributed to make their holiday one of genuine pleasure.

BRAZILIAN FED. GOVT. MOVES TO CRUSH THE REBEL ARMIES

Government is Pouring Out Army and Naval Forces—Troops Are Being Concentrated in Several States—Revolutionaries Claim Control of Pernambuco—Latest Advices From Rio Janeiro Say the Federal Government Should Soon Dominate Everywhere in Brazil—Important Movements Against the Insurgents in the South Are Expected

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 8—(AP)—The federal government of Brazil, faced with revolutionary movements in the north and south, today poured out army and naval forces to crush the rebel armies.

The government devoted particular attention to extensive plans against the rebels in the states of Minas Geraes to the northwest and Pernambuco in the north. A concentration of troops also was being carried out in the state of Santa Catharina.

The main purpose of these movements was to prepare for the overthrow of the rebel forces in the state of Rio Grande Do Sul where the insurrectionary movement has been centering.

Army planes today continued bombing operations in the state of Minas Geraes, the planes flying over the capital city of Bello Horizonte. The capitol building itself was reported to have been hit.

A warship has been sent northward to the city of Pernambuco which was reported in the hands of the insurgents and a new army commander with reinforcements also was started northward.

The same measures were taken for dealing with the seaport of Florianopolis in the southern state of Santa Catharina. It was understood the government was planning to base its later activities against the rebels in Rio Grande Do Sul from this city.

The federal forces have reoccupied several towns in the state of Minas Geraes along the central railway.

Food supplies, about which there had been some concern, are now coming into Rio De Janeiro and providing for the taking over of private stocks if necessary.

Latest advices received in the capital stated that aside from Rio Grande Do Sul, the federal government should soon dominate everywhere in Brazil.

Volunteer battalions for government service are being formed especially in the state of Sao Paulo where the regular troops and the state police are being withdrawn for active service against the insurgen ts.

Railway traffic from Rio De Janeiro to Minas Geraes is slowly being reestablished and bridges which were bloown up by the rebels are being repaired. The government has taken over the Southern Minas Geraes railway for the movement of troops and supplies.

Dispatches from the great coffee center of Sao Paulo said that progress favoring the central government was reported from Minas Geraes. The city of Palmyra has been recaptured and a troop mvoement has been directed against Barbacena which is expected to be successful thus opening the road again to the capital.

The dispatches indicated that important movements against the rebels in the south were expected shortly.

PERNAMBUCO UNDER CONTROL OF INSURGENTS

PERNAMBUCO, Brazil, Oct. 8—(AP)—The important northern city of Pernambuco tonight was under the control of revolutionary forces which reported that the insurgent movement against the central government had been victorious in all states north of Pernambuco.

The capture of this city, which is one of the largest in Brazil followed a 48-hour struggle which broke out early Saturday morning between revolutionary forces and part of the garrison and state military police who remained loyal to the federal government. Casualties in the fighting were reported to number 150.

The revolution, in combination with other states in Brazil, broke out in Pernambuco at 1 a. m. Saturday. On the revolutionary side were the students, civilians and part of the army garrison while on the federal side were the state military police and the remainder of the army.

The revolutionists immediately took control of the arsenal and the surrounding streets. The police launched counter-attacks and there was heavy fighting with rifles and machine guns. The insurgents then laid siege to the cavalry barracks, the two police headquarters, the jail and the governor's palace. An armored car was captured and after 48 hours of fighting the last police stronghold was taken at 4 o'clock Monday morning. The police and soldiers adherred to the movement.

WASHINGTON PUZZLED ABOUT AFFAIRS IN BRAZIL

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8—(AP)—Rumors and counter-rumors of isolated successes claimed for each side in the Brazilian revolt continued to reach Washington tonight, but left officials at a loss to understand the actual status of the insurrection.

Adding to the confusion word reached here today that a strict censorship had been imposed on all press and private dispatches from Brazil to other parts of the world.

The message telling of the censorship said it was "not official" in character, which was interpreted as indicating the government is closely scrutinizing all outgoing news, commercial and private wireless and cable messages without announcing that it is doing so. It was said that private telegrams which the government considered contained information false or subversive are not permitted to leave the country.

To enforce its control, the Brazilian government has taken over all telegraph and cable companies.

FOUR MORE YEARS OF LIFE FOR DIRIGIBLE LOS ANGELES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Two to four more years of life were forecast for the Los Angeles, the huge navy dirigible, by the board of inspection and survey of the navy department today after a study of the physical condition of the ship.

Christened the Los Angeles by Mrs Calvin Coolidge in 1924, the ship already has lived double the three-year period predicted by its makers, the German Zeppelin Co.

"The Los Angeles is now over six years old and has had over 2,500 hours underway, representing over 110,000 air miles and in addition has operated about 1,200 hours at mooring masts," the report said. "This represents a longer useful life than that of any rigid airship known to date."

Describing the ship as in good condition, the board sees no reason why the airship should not be continued in service for two to four years longer, "with proper care."

London Pays Homage To 47 Dead Of R-101

All But a Few of the Bodies Remain Unidentified—Two Memorial Services

LONDON, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Peers and commoners mingled today in homage to the 47 dead of the R-101 whose bodies rest, all but a few of them unidentified, in the mortuary chapel of Westminster Abbey.

Coffins ranged in grim rows, over each a flag, gave England silent testimony of the completeness of the di[illegible]aster which had overtaken the wo[illegible] largest dirigible airship, to [illegible] many Londoners waved a farew[illegible] it departed on its journey east [illegible] Saturday.

While sentries trod their funeral beats before these gruesome reminders throngs passed through the chapel, some persons to help in giving names to the victims, others in profound grief and many prompted by curiosity.

A glimpse of the dead was denied to all save those necessary officials and relatives who might aid in identification.

The interior of the chapel, ordinarily severe and cold in ancient dignity, today was a bower of floral tributes sent by persons from many walks of life.

Tomorrow the bodies will be removed to Westminster hall, adjacent to the Abbey. This venerable building will then again become a national shrine for the moment, as it was 20 years ago when King Edward VII lay there in state. Westminster hall, which dates from the time of Edward the Confessor and has been the scene of some of the most celebrated trials in English history, will be opened to the public on Friday morning, with the bodies lying in state during the whole day.

The memorial services will be in two parts, in each of which separate creeds will have their part, each paying homage to its dead.

The Church of England memorial will be held in St. Paul's cathedral and Westminster cathedral will be the scene of a stately mass of requiem by the Church of Rome.

Distinguished visitors from many foreign lands will attend both of these services, joining with British officialdom and laity in last honors to the victims of the most fearful airship disaster of all time.

Former Congressman Guilty Liquor Charge

Manuel Herrick and Two Other Men Convicted in Federal Court in Baltimore

BALTIM[illegible] Oct. 8.—(AP)—Arrested while w[illegible] a $15 a week handy man [illegible] in southern Maryland, Man[illegible]ck, former member of co[illegible] Oklahoma, was convict[illegible] by a jury in federal district [illegible] manufacture and possession [illegible]or.

[illegible] will be imposed tomorrow, [illegible] Morris A. Soper announced. The [illegible] deliberated but ten minutes. Two other men were convicted with Herrick, William F. Airey, who Herrick said employed him, and Pius B. Engels, a Negro.

Acting as his own attorney, Herrick, who is 53 years old, read from what he described as a record book of his three weeks' career at the still, where he was arrested Aug. 8. He maintained that he was trying to get evidence of prohibition violations, in the hope of being paid, but John P. Moore, a minor prohibition department official at Washington denied that Herrick had been commissioned or promised immunity.

Attired in a neat blue suit, contrasting with the overalls he wore when arrested, Herrick argued his case before the jury, and observed that "the enforcement of prohibition nowadays is mighty suspicious."

He introduced as a defense witness Morris McGrath, a former prohibition agent, who testified that he had received several letters from Herrick in southern Maryland. The contents of the letters were not disclosed. McGrath said he turned them over to active prohibition officials at Washington.

Moore, a defense witness, said it was agreed that if any of Herrick's information resulted in seizures he would try to see that Herrick was rewarded.

Herrick was elected to congress from the eighth Oklahoma district in the Harding landslide of 1920, but ran a poor third when he sought reelection in 1922. He was a picturesque figure. His interest in aviation earned for him the sobriquet of "The Flying Congressman."

In 1921 he was the defendant in a $50,000 suit brought at Washington by the guardian of a New York girl, and later, Miss Ethelyn Chrane, his Oklahoma stenographer, sued him for slander. Herrick countered with a breach of promise action.

His term of office over, Herrick's fortunes drifted downward. Tonight he was sent back to jail, where he has been since his arrest, in default of $1,500 bail.

POLICE CHIEF KILLED, TWO POLICEMEN AND TWO BANDIITS WOUNDED IN BATTLE

MURPHY N. C., Oct. 8.—(AP)—Seven men, four policemen and three alleged postoffice robbers, fought with pistols on the outskirts of Murphy early today.

Bryson, brother of Walter, was being sought. He was believed wounded.

Only Policeman Toby Fain escaped unhurt.

Late yesterday, Fain said C. C. He loosed his bonds, and made his way to a telephone, advising Carringer the men were headed toward Murphy.

Early today Carringer and his men, keeping watch on the outskirts of the town, sighted an automobile answering Linderman's description. He halted it and began questioning the occupants. One man fired point blank. The chief died instantly, a bullet in his heart.

Out of the subsequent firing, a scream sounded and one man fled into dense woods, later identified by the wounded man as his brother. He was trailed tonight by dogs.

COMMUNISTS AND HOODLUMS CONDEMNED BY THE LEGION

Resolution Was Passed Urging Congress to Enact Legislation to End All Communistic Activities in the United States—Also a Resolution Rebuking the Hoodlums Who Created a Disturbance and Engaged in Street Brawls With Policemen and Civilians

BOSTON, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The serious matters of a national convention occupied the attention of the American Legion here today. The outstanding events of a five-hour session were:

The choice of Detroit as the 1931 convention city.

The adoption of resolutions condemning communism and regretting and condemning the acts of vandalism by hoodlums who took advantage of the convention to spread disorder last night.

The speeches of General Henri Gouraud of France, Major General Sir William Hickie of Ireland; Admiral William S. Benson, naval chief during the war; General Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans affairs and William R. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

In his speech Admiral Benson, now retired, urged the Legionnaires to study and eradicate the causes of crime and to vindicate the laws. Sir William brought the greetings of the Irish veterans.

General Gouraud represented the government of France and reviewed the association of France and United States down through the years. Green warned against forces at work to "commercialize unemployment for the purpose of breaking down our government." Hines expressed the hope that an effective plan of veteran relief would be evolved.

The resolutions dealing with communism and that condemning the activities of the hoodlums were cheered. In the first the Legion endorsed the appointment of a special congressional committee now investigating communists in the country and urged that after it has reported congress enact legislation to end all communistic activities in the United States. The second rebuked those who tipped over automobiles, set fires and engaged in street brawls with policemen and civilians late last night and during the early hours of today.

Green said his organization had been optimistic regarding the unemployment situation and had looked forward with hope for trend toward the return of prosperity. He added, however, that the forthcoming winter would see much economic distress and it was the duty of labor and the Legion to work together to bring relief. He declared there was a permanent relief for unemployment and that it was in the application of American good sense and American good judgment.

General Gouraud's speech was that of an appreciative soldier to his allies. He presented the Legion in behalf of his government, a large silver cup to be offered for any competition the national committee of the Legion sets.

General Hines traced the history of veterans relief legislation from the time of the days following the revolution. He said a study of the present method of dealing with disabled veterans shows the inadequacy and deficiency and indicates plainly the need for the development of a uniform policy.

The delegates gave General Hickie a rousing welcome. He told of his association with General Clarence R. Edwards, war-time leader of New England's own division, the 26th, and also of the part Irish veterans have played in the affairs of their country.

The fight for the next convention was one between Detroit and Los Angeles. The vote was 658 to 570 in favor of Detroit.

After the business session the Legionnaires and members of their auxiliary journeyed to Nantasket to attend a clambake, it was a novelty for many of them whose homes are in the inland states.

COMMUNISTS EXCLUDED FROM A. F. OF L. MEETING

BOSTON, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Massachusetts law which permits the judiciary to rule on the constitutionality of legislation before it is passed, was criticized today before the American Federation of Labor convention here by John P. Frey, secretary of the metal trades department. Frey spoke on the so-called "yellow dog" contract.

An attempt by a group of 50 communists to gain entrance to the convention hall was thwarted by federation officials. The communists, who said they were workers and entitled to entrance, relented and departed only when police threatened them with arrest for trespassing.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The first big move of the United States navy to bring its fleet within the limitation of the London naval treaty was announced today by Admiral William V. Pratt, chief of naval operations.

Sixteen destroyers and two light mine layers will be withdrawn from the destroyer squadrons which now have 103 destroyers and 6 mine layers. The destroyers will be held in a state of preservation for possible recommission.

RED ARMIES RENEW WARFARE IN CHINA

SHANGHAI, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Red armies continued to scourge China tonight as cessation of civil warfare seemed near. With the rebellious northern alliance near collapse, communists increased depredations in south China.

COLCHESTER

TOWN BUILDING COMMITTEE UNABLE TO SECURE SITE

A report of the town record building committee included in the annual report of the town officers discloses that as yet they have been unable to secure a desirable location for the building. The committee is still of the opinion that the logical site would be the Cragin vacant lot between the library and Rutka's market. Such a building would not obstruct the view of the library and as the town records are really a part of the library system, many persons coming here to search the records, could retire to the library for reference to books on genealogy. It is understood, however, that the Cragin family does not wish to sell the land at this time. The members of the building committee are C. A. Kramer, James F. Purcell, C. E. Pendleton, Edward H. Norton and Samuel McDonald.

MUCH ATTENTION PAID TO MATERNITY WARD IN NEW HOSPITAL PLANS

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 8—Out of 328 births recorded in this hospital district last year, only 93, or 29 per cent were babies born in St. Joseph's hospital. As compared to other districts this is a low percentage, other small cities and towns showing that from 40 to 60 per cent are hospitalized while the average for larger cities is between 70 and 90 per cent.

In consideration of this low hospitalization of maternity cases, and in view of the opinion of practically all doctors that a hospital is the one right place for mothers during childbirth, considerable attention to the maternity department has been given in the plans for the new Windham Community Memorial hospital. It is planned to have this department equipped to fully meet the demands of the district which the new hospital will serve.

Statistics from the state department of health show that in the town of Windham there are 82.3 deaths per 1,000 living births. This figure is higher than the average rate for the state as a whole and for 33 cities with over 10,000 population. The department reports last year 64.7 deaths per 1,000 living births for the entire state, and 62.2 deaths per 1,000 living births for the 33 cities.

While the maternity ward at the present hospital contains but eight beds in private rooms and eight cribs, the department in the new hospital will have conveniently arranged labor and delivery rooms, a sterilization room, a nursery with 16 cribs for infants and an isolation nursery. The beds for maternity patients will be in bed wards, private rooms and flexible rooms which are so constructed that each may contain a single bed for private occupancy or two beds for semi-private occupancy according to the variation in the demand.

E. L. DARBIE RETAINED AS TOWN COUNSEL

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 8.—Announcement was made late this afternoon of the reappointment by the selectmen, following their reorganization meeting of Attorney E. L. Darbie as town counsel. Henry G. Gilbert was reappointed tree warden for the town, a position he has filled for some time past.

Other appointments by the selectmen were those of William Allen, Rev. C. A. Downs and Jesse B. Child, all of Goodyear, and John Dagenais of Attawaugan as public weighers. These appointees' chief duties are weighing cotton that comes in for mills in the villages mentioned.

At their meeting the selectmen again named Mr. Tillinghast as clerk of the board. Under their agreement of road assignments, supervising the upkeep, Mr. Tillinghast again has the roads in the first district, Mr. LaBelle takes over the roads of the second district, supervised by N. P. Gingras last year, and Patrick Riley, suceeding Alcott D. Sayles on the board, takes over the roads of the third district. Care of outside poor is likewise divided between the selectmen by districts, as mention for highways.

Whoopee!

Many interesting tales were entertainingly related here today by persons who were at Boston yesterday for the great parade of the American Legion. The local people got a host of thrills out of the great spectacle and out of watching the crowds. Two Danielson veterans of the World war, snatching an hour's sleep in the lobby of the Copley Plaza hotel during the small hours of Tuesday morning, told of a dignified appearing woman who complained bitterly that one man making whoopee in the lobby was carrying things just a bit too far. "And all he was doing," casually related Bernard Casey, who was one of the Danielson veterans, "was dancing about clad in his B. V. D.'s, one arm around a nice looking girl, the other arm and hand guiding the destiny of a bottle of gin from which he took an occasional swig." "It was quite a party," says Mr. Casey.

RESENTS BEING GAGGED WITH DIRTY RAG

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 8.—Cornelius A. Wines, the towering colored truck driver who was held up and his machine robbed of a cargo of silver bullion at South Killingly early Monday morning, remained at the state police barracks here today. Wines, a powerfully built man standing 6 feet 5 1-2 inches and weighing around 240 pounds, with hardly an ounce of fat on him, mourns over being subjected to the indignity of being gagged and trussed up by a band of bantam gunmen that he could take, individually, and just about break in two. There are those who will bet that he could beat up the whole mess of them if they were without guns. Wines is particularly incensed over being gagged with a dirty rag.

He is strangely impressed with a little incident that occurred at his home in Waterbury last Sunday night just before he went out to go to work He has a little daughter, about five years of age, who pleaded with and teased him not to make the trip that was to end in the holdup. "She never did anything like that before," said Wines, "and I just can't understand it."

The three men arrested at Shawomet Beach, R. I., in connection with the holdup remained at the county jail in Brooklyn today. They are not doing any talking about the matter in which they are accused. Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart was in Providence today, continuing his investigation of the case.

Following a meeting of the directors of the Killingly Trust Co., an announcement was made that the usual dividend at the rate of 5 per cent per annum had been declared to all depositors in its savings department, and will be credited as of Nov. 1. The company reports a successful and profitable business during the past six months.

E. C. Griffith of Pascoag, R. I., carried off the honors in the monthly shoot of the Danielson Rod and Gun club. In the 100 16-yard event, Griffith was high with 96. George K Keith of Grafton, Mass., and Charles F. Peabody of New London tied for second place with 92 each. In Class B, G. M. Slade and E. A. Underwood tied for first place with 90 each, and J. B. Tebo was second with 89. In Class C, Mark W. Buck was first with 86. George L. Ingalls second with 83

E. C. Griffith won the 50 distance handicap with 45. Buck was second with 44, and George Ingalls and Keith tied for third with 43.

The detailed score was as follows: 100 16-yard targets—E. C. Griffith, 96; George K. Keith, 92; Charles F. Peabody, 92; W. J. Stainton, 91; Charles M. Slade, 90; E. A. Underwood, 90; John B. Tebo, 89; K. A. Smith, 88; L. S. Ingalls, 87; Mark W. Buck, 86; George L. Ingalls, 83; J. A. Carter, 82; George B. Prest, 79; John R. Sherman, 78; R. J. Sherman, 74; A. J. Smith, 71; 50 distance—Griffith, 45; Buck, 44; G. Ingalls, 43; Keith, 43; K. A Smith, 42; L. Ingalls, 41; Slade, 41; A. J. Smith, 41; Carter, 40; Prest, 40; Stainton, 39; Tebo, 39; Peabody, 37; 50-doubles—Griffith, 40; K. A. Smith, 39; Stainton 37; Keith, 25.

Shooting conditions were the best and all the participants thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

The return tide of Legionnaires who have been attending the national convention of their organization set in today. Many cars rolled through Danielson carrying Legion men and their friends. Some of them, the registrations of their cars indicated, were bound for distant western states.

FUNERAL

Mrs. Catherine Myers

At the home of her son, Henry A Myers, Mechanic street, at 2 o'clock this afternoon, funeral services for Mrs. Catherine Myers were conducted by Rev. Albert Abbott of the Methodist Episcopal church. Burial was in Westfield cemetery. The bearers were Mrs. Myers' three sons, William, Charles and Henry, and her nephew, Charles Conwell, of Meriden. A F. Wood was in charge of the arrangements.

The Killingly High school orchestra will play at the first scheduled meeting of Quinebaug Pomona grange for the fall season. The meeting will be with Ekonk grange on the evening of Saturday, Oct. 25. In addition to the music to be played by the Killingly High orchestra, the lecturer's program provides for a talk by Mrs Louise Rodman lecturer of the Rhode Island State grange, a reading by George Ingalls of Brooklyn, and a talk by Mrs Sarah Curtis, lecturer of the Connecticut State grange.

In common with his host of friends in Putnam, hundreds here have been expressing their regret over the death of Ralph E Thurston, long well known to many Danielson people.

Frank Flournoy, matchmaker at Madison Square Garden, and Joseph Humphrey, the famed announcer, will be guests here over the coming week-end of Frank Barber. The New Yorkers were so taken with the beauty of the country hereabouts when they visited here two weeks ago that they have planned to return and enjoy it for a couple of days.

Men who have been roaming afield the past few days tell of some interesting experiences with pheasants. Some of these game birds are so tame, probably recent releases by the state, that persons have walked right up to them in tall grass where they have been feeding, without frightening them into flight. One local man told of picking one up, fondling it a minute and then releasing it again.

Steady progress is being made with the construction work at the new booster station of the A. T. & T., on the West Side, opposite Day street. While the building will not be closed in for some time, a great deal of work already has been accomplished. A considerable length of time will elapse before the building is completed and in service.

The first meeting of creditors of Helene E. Chappelle, bankrupt, is scheduled to take place here next Saturday. Mrs. Chappelle, who operated a restaurant here since early last spring, was adjudged a bankrupt in late September, when her place of business was closed. A trustee will be appointed at Saturday's creditors' meeting.

Thomas Lessard of Pawtucket will receive his mail, if any, at the county jail in Brooklyn for the next seven months. Lessard was before Judge W. Fenner Woodward in the town court this morning to answer to charges of having been intoxicated and with setting a fire on land owned by the Quinebaug Co. The fire was accidentally set, it is believed, through Lessard's carelessness with matches or a cigarette. For being intoxicated he was given 30 days, and 180 additional days for setting the fire. A companion, James McDonald, also of Pawtucket, was given 30 days for having been intoxicated.

PUTNAM

ESCAPE FROM BURNING HOME IN NIGHT CLOTHES

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 8.— Mr. and Mrs. John Leader, who live at 324 South Main street, were driven to the street in their night clothes at an early hour this morning when fire broke out in the closet of their home and filled the house with dense smoke. A general alarm from box 113 at 4:35 a. m., brought all the available apparatus in the city to the scene of the blaze, where firemen under the direction of acting Chief Alphonse Dumas battled with the stubborn fire for nearly an hour before flames, which were confined to the wardrobe, were extinguished.

The cries of the frightened Leader child awakened Mrs. Leader who arose to find the bedroom filled with the smoke which was issuing from the closet. Terrified, she awakened her husband who conducted his family to safety and clad only in bedclothes ran to the nearby fire alarm box to ring in an alarm. So dense was the smoke that firemen in order to carry a hose line into the room were forced to crawl on their stomachs with the faces covered with dampened cloth to avoid suffocation. The fire was extinguished with small property damage, although the clothing stored in the wardrobe was ruined.

Chief Dumas, after investigating, said that he believed the fire to have been caused by a lighted spark from a flake of pipe tobacco, setting fire to the pocket lining of the tenant's coat. Firemen returned to quarters at 5:15 a. m.

COUNCIL HEARS TALK ON NEW STREET SIGNS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 8.— The common council at its October session held Tuesday evening listened to a sales talk of a high pressure calibre, given by a representative of a Minnesota street sign manufacturing company, intent upon closing a deal with the city fathers for the refitting of the streets with new and badly needed name plates. The salesman did his best but Mayor Richard and members of the council decided that at a future meeting representatives of other sign firms bidding are to be called in and given an opportunity to personally defend and laud the merits of their products. This means that Putnam is not to have its new signs for a while and until such time as the sign company agents meet to debate and determine which is the sign for Putnam the people of the community must be content with the present stone-chipped, weather-beaten, obliterated and otherwise delapidated street markers.

Three specimens of signs were considered by the highway committee and Alderman E. J. Migneault stated that for first choice the committee had selected a sign of aluminum plate background with large raised letters which were in black. The sign was an attractive one, but other members of the council expressed their approval of a large sign which had a dark background with an indented letter of silver finish. A third subject won no favorable comment and was left out of the discussion which ended in the sign selecting matter being tabled until the next meeting of the council.

Precedent was overruled and Mayor Richard's opinion disregarded last night when Alderman Joseph Dubois, d, ward 2, was successful in having a motion passed providing for the installation of two street lights on Mohegan street, which is not an accepted city street. The matter caused heated discussion in which Alderman Francis Vadnais and other council members took an active part. Mayor Richard opposed the placing of the lights on the ground that years ago an unwritten ruling was laid down providing that no lights would be installed on unaccepted or private streets. "This policy has always been adhered to by everybody except the present council," the mayor said, "and if we start violating it now where are we to discriminate," he concluded. Alderman Vadnais favored the motion in view of the fact: "The two lights mean so little to the city and so much to the people of that street." The motion was unanimously passed for installation of the lights when Alderman Dubois offered his motion and had it quickly seconded.

Attorney Arthur S. MacDonald, newspaperman secretary of the chamber of commerce, when asked for his opinion on public and private streets, recommended that the council consult the corporation counsel for a final opinion on this matter and "be set right."

City Engineer George W. Perry, cooperating with sanitary engineers of the state, has recently completed a survey of the sewer conditions in the city and at the sewage outlet on Arch street. A drawing made by his son, Gilbert F. Perry, was presented to the council last night, but because of the absence of Mr. Perry no action on the matter was taken. The drawing is one of the most complete and comprehensive chartings ever made for the municipal department of engineering and will be an important guide in the obtaining of estimates and other figures necessary for use when the city begins its installation of sewage beds.

Alderman J. M. Dean, of the fire committee, instructed acting Fire Chief Dumas to obtain a list of the sizes of hats, coats and boots needed by the various fire companies in order that the additional equipment may be ordered at once.

The council, by an unanimous motion, approved the quarterly payroll of the fire department, which was prepared by the late Chief Thurston and incidentally his last official act in that capacity.

The police report showed that 13 arrests were performed during the month of September, and that fines and costs imposed in city court amounted to $147.80. A list of uncollectable taxes was presented to the council by City Collector Harvey J. Grinsell, who stated that he had conferred with the corporation counsel and had been advised to secure an abatement order from the council. The order was approved.

The common council approved the application of the chamber of commerce to permit members of the Brunswick Fox club to hold a dog show in Cargill park on Monday. More than 100 members of the club are expected to be in this city Saturday when the clubmen meet to hold their annual field trials.

Lieut. Allen A. Thayer, 13th Inf., U. S. A., stationed at Fort Ethan Allen, Winooski, Vermont, is spending a furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Thayer, of King street. Lieut. Thayer, who is a graduate of the United States Military academy at West Point, has received notification from military authorities of the army first corps area of his transfer to foreign service with assignment to a post in the Hawaiian islands, which becomes effective in December.

Dr. Frederic G. Goodridge of Pomfret, who has traveled extensively at home and abroad and as an explorer of the Arctic regions of North America, delighted the members of the Putnam Rotary club today with an interesting account of his experiences and adventures in the Arctic circle encountered when he was a member of a scientific research party which was headed by Commander Robert Peary, discoverer of the North Pole. Dr. Goodridge spoke at length on the subject of habits, customs and ceremonies of the Eskimos and amused his hosts with a vivid word picture of the stranger incidents which occurred to him during his three weeks' stay in an Eskimo village. Visiting Rotarians attending the luncheon and meeting of the local club today were: Fire Chief A. Putnam Woodward, Henry Dubuc and County "Y" Secretary L. Edwin Hill of Danielson; Herman L. Bennett and Floyd Day, both of Webster.

Treasurer Arthur F. Hughes of the Putnam Savings bank stated today that a total amount of $73,654.13 was credited to accounts of the institution on October 1, when the semi-annual dividend of the bank, computed at five per cent, was declared.

Firemen at the Central station in Union square were called into action at 1:40 o'clock this afternoon to extinguish a fire in the New Haven railroad bridge on Providence street. Acting Chief Alphonse Dumas directed the firemen in fighting the fire which was kindled by a spark from a passing locomotive which lodged in the wooden studding of the span. When the apparatus arrived fire was spurting through the street surface. The flames were quickly checked by a drenching of water from the booster tank of the No. 1 pumper.

The funeral of Fire Chief Ralph E Thurston is to be held from his late home on Highland avenue in Fall River, Thursday afternoon. Mayor Richard, members of the common council and a detail of firemen from the Central and Smith street stations, under the direction of acting Chief Alphonse Dumas, are to attend the service. Representatives of the Putnam lodge of Elks and the Quinebaug lodge, A. F. & A. M., are also planning to attend the last rites for the power executive and municipal official.

Mayor C. A. Richard announced last night, following a conference with Fire Alarm Superintendent Charles A. Thayer, that the fire bells in the towers of the various churches throughout the city will be tolled at two o'clock as a final tribute to the dead chief engineer.

Members of the Anslem Mayotte post and of the American Legion posts of North Grosvenordale and East Woodstock, who attended the monster parade of the Legion posts of the nation, held yesterday in Boston where the national convention of the order is taking place this week, arrived in Putnam late last night aboard a special train. The train made up of several coaches, all filled to seating capacity, was run over the Midland division in sections.

Applications for enrollment in various departments of evening school are still coming in. Sessions in all departments except the electrical and the masonry are being carried on with instruction being given to large classes. An item in this column of The Bulletin this morning conveyed the impression that the entire school is closed because of lack of sufficient enrollment. This was incorrect, but the phrase does apply to the above-mentioned departments, which are not as yet in operation. Some applications, Director Ellis has stated, have been received for electrical instruction but are not sufficient to warrant the opening of the course for evening training. The management is anxious to provide training in its evening school program wherever possible, and if a large enough class can be enrolled in electrical work or in masonry these departments will be opened.

Alexander Gilman, democratic candidate for state senator from the 28th senatorial district in 1928 and renominated for this office by his party in convention in Danielson last week, has announced that he will not run. In declining the nomination, Mr. Gilman's only reason for not entering the race is the fact that "I do not wish to run."

JURY DISAGREES IN $10,000 SUIT AGAINST METROPOLITAN INSURANCE CO.

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 8.—The jury sitting on the $10,000 damage suit action instituted by Cornelius Shea of Willimantic against the Metropolitan Life Insurance company and Andrew Link, Jr., of Willimantic, now at the state prison, serving a one to three year term for manslaughter, which was tried in superior court in this town yesterday and part of today, entered the chambers at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon and through its foreman, John M. Dean of this city, informed the court that after 5 hours of deliberation no satisfactory agreement could be reached.

The defense concluded its argument at 11:30 and after receiving the charge from Judge Jennings, the jurymen repaired to their chambers. Late this afternoon Judge Jennings summoned the deliberating men to the court room and received from Mr. Dean the statement of disagreement. Under the circumstances, Judge Jennings accepted the verdict and instructed the attorneys concerned with the case that new trial proceedings would have to be instituted if a disposition of the case is expected.

Immediately after the Shea jury retired to chambers, the court undertook to empanel a new jury and upon its completion began the trial of damage suit of Charles Lincoln vs. Patrick Cahir. Jurymen on the Shea case were excused until October 21, when they were instructed to report for duty at the continued civil term to be held in Willimantic.

NASH

Announces . .

3 new EIGHTS and a new SIX

NEVER was such motor car quality offered at prices so sensationally low. The literally startling difference becomes at once apparent when you contrast the prices of the new and finer Nash series, with prices of corresponding models a year ago.

Its low non-productive overhead, its elimination of borrowed capital, and remarkably foresighted manufacturing alone enable Nash to offer so much for so little. The unique example in value-giving thus provided the industry was planned last November. At that time, C. W. Nash and the strong group of executives surrounding him, clearly foresaw present conditions. They at once began to design cars affording value so great, so unmistakable, as to overcome all buying reluctance.

The result is instantly apparent. Even casual inspection of the four new Nash cars establishes the fact that nothing even remotely approaching them in downright dollar value has ever been available in their respective price fields.

SENSATIONALLY PRICED!

STUDY THESE SENSATIONAL PRICES!

Compare what is probably the most remarkable achievement of Nash in greater value-giving—the New Six—with the Single Six it succeeds. The new Six offers a multitude of superiorities—at prices which range from $160 to $140 below the prices of the Single Six.

Body Style	The New Six W. B. 114½"	Last Year's Six W. B. 114½"	Price Difference
Sedan (4-door)	$845	~~$1005~~	—$160
Coupe	$795	~~$940~~	—$145
Coupe (rumble seat)	$825	~~$980~~	—$155
Sedan (2-door)	$795	~~$935~~	—$140

Compare the New Eight-70 with its two additional cylinders, its longer wheelbase, its larger, more luxurious body, with the six-cylinder car it replaces. Then consider the remarkable fact that there is actually a basic price differential in favor of the New Eight!

Body Style	The New Eight-70 W. B. 116½"	Last Year's Six W. B. 114½"	Price Difference
Sedan (4-door)	$995	~~$1005~~	—$10

Coupe (rumble seat)	$975	~~$980~~	—$5
Special Sedan (4-door)	$955

Compare the New Twin-Ignition Eight-80 Series with the 6-cylinder car it replaces. The Eight-80 is larger, longer. Design, appointments, upholstery are finer—prices are radically lower.

Town Sedan (4-door)	$1375

Compare the New Twin-Ignition Eight-90 Series, now with a 115 H. P. Engine, with the last year's 100 H. P. Eight. Body appointments are finer, upholstery more luxurious, and prices are far lower!

MAINTAINING AMERICAN SYSTEM

In his address at King's Mountain, S. C., President Hoover dwelt upon the battle that occurred at this point during the Revolutionary war 150 years ago and took occasion to set forth the advancement in this nation since that time, attributing it to a large degree to the "ideas and ideals, which liberated the mind and stimulated the exertion of a people." Others have attributed American development to its great resources, but the president pointed out that other territory equally well blest has not measured up to our attainments. It is where they have borrowed our philosophy that they have prospered.

Citing the ideals of the American founders, he termed them the American system. He compared the advantages provided therein with those existing in other systems, such as socialism, bolshevism and despotism, and insisted that these other systems all mean "the destruction of the driving force of equal opportunity, and they mean the destruction of our Constitution, for our political framework would serve none of them and many of its fundamental provisions are the negation of them. They mean the abandonment of the nation's spiritual heritage."

The president didn't claim perfection for our system, but he urged successful contention with the forces of destruction which are always at work and which would destroy the very basis of American life, and in urging this he warned against the weakening of our own institutions by a failure to uphold and safeguard the true spirit of America. He pointed out the necessity of fighting corruptive influences, crime disobedience of law, pacifism and militarism, the failure to exercise the right of suffrage, and corruption in public office.

Well did he say that "it is the first duty of those of us who believe in the American system to maintain a knowledge of and a pride in it, not particularly because we need fear those foreign systems, but because we have need to sustain ours in purity and in strength."

THE VICTORIOUS ATHLETICS

Faced with the chance to carry off the baseball championship of the world, the Athletics met the Cardinals in the sixth game of the 1930 series and won with little difficulty. It was another instance where the Mackmen were on their toes and out to get everything possible, and the results show that they did. They made everything count and wound up the series in a wonderful exhibition of baseball.

It will be generally agreed that the series has been a grand exposition of the national game. In the same way that they put and kept themselves at the top of the American league, the Athletics defended and retained the coveted trophy. They faced an aggregation of players that tried their mettle. It is no discredit to St. Louis to lose after producing the character of baseball they did. It is inevitable in such a series that one team must win. The expectation is that the better team will carry off the honors and it cannot fail to be admitted that such was the outcome.

The series was characterized by excellent team work, some remarkable individual playing, masterly pitching and timely and telling batting. It profited from the guidance of real baseball generals and it is to the credit of the experienced Connie Mack that his team has again been successful. Fandom must take off its hat to one of the greatest baseball leaders. He has been in the game a long time but he hasn't lost any of his cunning. He has not only the ability to bring together a remarkable team but to make them play a superior type of baseball. And, even though there are the stars in their respective places in the field, in the pitching box and at the bat, it is through the team work that victory is obtained.

The close of the series means the conclusion of baseball for this year. Its fine points will be the subject of discussion for many weeks to come and its high points will retain a permanent place in baseball history. It always does the lovers of the game a world of good to witness and read about such a clean-cut exhibition of high-grade baseball.

EXPORTING HELIUM

There were the days when this country was having difficulty in securing an adequate supply of helium. Its importance and value was appreciated. The need of protecting ourselves against emergency requirements and to take care of our own wants first was realized. This resulted in placing restrictions on the exportation of the non-inflammable gas.

Now it appears, according to Rear Admiral Moffett, that we have plenty of the gas and to spare. It is not conceivable that one in his position as chief of aeronautics would offer suggestions that would handicap this country if carried out.

It seems that there is a board, made up of the president and the secretaries of the navy, war and commerce, vested with the power to permit the exportation of helium. Evidently the framers of the law recognized the need of assuring our supply, but saw the possibility that there might come a time when exportation would be justified. It would call for careful study and depend upon circumstances, but a way was provided for meeting the situation if viewed favorably.

With the R-101 disaster resulting, because of the use of hydrogen, with the large loss of human life, and with this country's unlimited supply of helium, the Moffett suggestion may well be carefully studied. It calls for the careful checking of the admiral's claim and it means that if any exportation is allowed that there must be full knowledge as to where it is going and the use for which it is intended. Any such exportation must be for peace-time use and not for rehandling.

It is not improbable that, if supplies of the gas are sought by other countries and those seeking it can convince the federal authorities that it will be employed in peace-time activities and in the interest of human safety, that exportation will be permitted. If and when good and sufficient reasons are found or advanced for refusing such a distribution then they will be expected to govern. Just now it seems to be a question of determining whether anything stands in the way of carrying out the admiral's recommendations if other countries want the gas.

HIGHWAYS

Much discussion is indulged in these days concerning the handling of motor vehicle traffic, new ordinances to govern the use of the highway and the construction of more and better roads. More develops from the changing demands for alterations in the codes and rules that have already been established.

The reason for it lies in the fact, as pointed out by R. D. Chapin, past president of the National Automobile chamber of commerce, that where there were fewer than 25,000 automobiles 25 years ago there are today over 26,000,000 motor vehicles. He further points out that "Then only 155,000 miles of improved road existed in all the United States. Of that road but 144 miles had a high type surface. Today there are more than 800,000 miles of improved highways and another 500,000 of usable dirt road. Where in 1905 we were spending less than $100,000,000 a year in our highway improvement today we are spending more than $1,500,000,000. Our people want more roads than are being built."

These figures indicate all too plainly the problem that is being faced and increased each year. Regulation must be had. Conditions must be met and greater safety must be insured.

But attention cannot escape the point made by Mr. Chapin that more roads are wanted than are being built. He doesn't say what kind of roads these are. He may have in mind the best of modern roads, but it is certain that, while there is a demand for such, there is also a strong and relentless demand for the improvement of the country roads, those which reach out to the sections which need greater consideration than they have been getting, those which service a large number of people who have not been getting a fair return for their special taxation.

ANOTHER PINCHOT FIGHT

Pennsylvania is one of the states which continues to keep political interest tuned up to a high pitch. It has come to be so whenever Gifford Pinchot puts himself into any contest in that commonwealth. However much of a political hotbed it might be otherwise, the entrance of the former governor into the political arena is the signal for added heat. It was so during the primary campaign, and it is coming to attention in the preliminaries leading up to election next month.

Mr. Pinchot obtained the republican nomination in Pennsylvania in a contest that left much dissatisfaction. There are those who cannot forget his work as governor and the part he played in connection with his ambitions to be United States senator. There are those who are also convinced that the time has come for a stand against prohibition, while Mr. Pinchot is and always has been bone dry.

Developments point to the probability that there will be a serious falling off in the republican support for Mr. Pinchot. Whether the republican majority under normal conditions is enough in that state to overcome the defections is a question. It isn't this time a division of the vote between two republicans, but support of the opposing candidate, J. M. Hemphill, democratic-liberal candidate, that develops interest in the Keystone state.

In the contest for the United States senator, Mr. Pinchot succeeded in taking Senator Pepper out of the job and putting W. S. Vare in his place, refusing to certify his election, and kept the state from proper representation for many months. He seeks to return to the governor's chair this year, is encountering bothersome obstacles and may well be said to be repeating the harvest of his past performances. He is destined to lose powerful support and experience a hard fight.

BILLY COMES BACK

"Oh, but Billy was just a childhood sweetheart," Maxine exclaimed a bit haughtily.

"Yes," her Aunt Marjory countered, "but you must remember you haven't seen him for almost ten years. Billy is a man now. He has completed university and has been attached to the forest service for three years. I'd imagine you'd be thrilled to death to meet him."

"I suppose I should be, but I'm not. Billy wasn't so much as a kid, and I have met many nice boys since. Why I just corresponded with him automatically. I surely wouldn't think of engaging myself to him—"

"Oh, but he hasn't asked you to, has he?"

Maxine reflected.

"No," she said. "But he might. He's rather romantic in his letters."

Maxine stretched contentedly and flounced back her bed covers. She slipped on her flimsy dressing gown and stood before the wide window overlooking her garden. Spring was in the air with its certain laziness. But Maxine had no time for laziness. As she prepared her bath Maxine tried to fancy how Billy would look. He had been thin and rather puny as a kid. But she had heard that he was quite a man now. He had rescued a band of trail builders in the Rainier National forest when they were cut off and virtually surrounded by a raging forest fire. He had swam a violent stream with a rope with which the men could pull themselves across the water to safety. If he had performed a feat like that he couldn't possibly be a weakling. But she couldn't picture him as being dashing.

Tea time in the conservatory at the Carstensens'. Maxine in a lovely afternoon frock, Marjory, handsome and elegant in the latest from Paris, Mrs. Carstensen, a beaming hostess, Mrs. Starr, Maxine's mother, sweet and youthful. But no Billy.

"I can't understand the boy," Mrs. Carstensen was saying. "He appeared very anxious to meet his sweetheart."

Maxine smiled affectedly.

"But he must be home before you go. I want you to be sure and see him before he runs away again."

Maxine was burning up. She didn't want to meet that Billy Carstensen anyway. And here he had the nerve to keep her waiting.

And at that moment a boyish laugh was heard in the hall.

"Oh, here he is at last," Mrs. Carstensen said. "Oh Billy!" she called.

"Yes, mother." A tall, athletic figure came bounding down the marble stairs.

"Well, where have you been? Gracious, Maxine can't wait forever for you."

Billy stopped short and surveyed his mother's guests with a touch of embarrassment.

"Why, er, mother, I plumb forgot about your arrangement. Er, which one is Maxine? Oh I know her! I can recognize her. Hello, Maxine, and I'm, ah, glad to see you, Mrs. Starr and Miss Pomeroy Er, you'll excuse me, please."

He dashed back up the stairs and was gone before his mother could stop him. Maxine felt hurt. No, indignant. No, angry. That was a nice thing for him to do! After she had waited all afternoon to see him. Billy certainly was handsome and dashing, but he certainly didn't have any manners.

"Billy has become awfully rude since he has been associating with those rough woodsmen," Mrs. Carstensen was explaining. "I do wish we could change his ways." Maxine wasn't listening. She was wondering why Billy had run away.

"He'll come back to bid his little sweetheart good-by," Mrs. Carstensen smiled. She was awfully sweet, but she irked Maxine.

"I'm not his sweetheart, Mrs. Carstensen," she said, jumping up. "And I never want to see him again."

She ran up the stairs and out of the conservatory. She didn't mean to be rude, but she just couldn't stand it any longer. On the verge of tears she ran down the hall. A strong hand seized her by the arm and almost upset her in her haste.

"Where are you going, my pretty miss?" a calm, well regulated voice inquired.

Maxine looked up into the bronzed features of Billy. Tears formed in her eyes.

"Why, you're crying!" he said.

"I'm not," she snapped.

"What is the matter?"

"Oh, nothing. . . Why did you run away?"

"Run away? Why I wanted to catch you alone."

"Ooooh—if I could only believe you."

Mrs. Carstensen quietly closed the conservatory door. She turned and beamed.

"Our children are together, my dear Charlotte. It looks as though Billy is home for good."—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8—(AP)—When Charles Lee Cooke of Washington, D. C., sailed to help crown Haile Selassie as first emperor of Ethiopia, a 30-year old dream was realized, at least in part.

For Cooke, or "Cooke-e," as irreverent youngsters and a lot of oldsters, too, of the state department call him, started out that long ago to be a diplomat of career. He has been trying ever since, yet this is his first job abroad.

Social Arbiter

The trouble is that some place in that dim past, after Cooke surrendered a job in the patent office to transfer to the state department, somebody turned over to him the task of fixing up the social precedence and other necessary formalities of some official function.

And being even then what he still is, a painstaking, methodical man, young Cooke did a good job of it—so good that he's been doing similar jobs ever since.

He's a valuable cog in the government machinery. He's almost indispensable. He's guide, philosopher and friend on all ceremonial matters, not only for everybody in the government service from the white house down, but also for all the embassies and legations.

The Washington diplomatic corps would be sunk if it did not have Cooke at the other end of a telephone to help straighten out all social snarls, advise as to seating arrangements, what to wear and all that. He is a walking textbook on diplomatic social etiquette and now is ceremonial officer of the state department.

Finally—A Break

What tales Cooke could write—if he would—of social jealousies among the mighty. But he will not. He would not be Cooke if he did. He has sat here in Washington all these three decades as virtually unchallenged arbiter of things social in officialdom—and hated and loathed his work all the time.

From the very first he pulled every string he could reach, trying to get free and out into the foreign service, but it was no go.

He was too valuable at home—too good at his job. Other career men have come and gone in legions, but Cooke just was glued by official necessities to his post.

It took a conspiracy among his career colleagues to give him this first chance for a foreign assignment. They became ashamed, finally, of what they had all done to Cookes. So they put over this assignment to help crown the emperor of Ethiopia.

And they all feel sure that the commission's report on its return will stress one thing, anyhow. That will be the invaluable services of Cooke its secretary, in re-ceremonials.

Heavy Clothes Should Not Be Worn In A Warm Room

By Thomas Wood, M. D., Minneapolis.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

An English physician recently complimented the modern dress of women because it allowed more of the body to be exposed to the beneficial effects of the air and of sunlight.

The new air hygiene teaches that the effects of fresh air come to the body through the surface of the skin. When the body is so warmly clad that the skin perspires there is a waste of nervous energy which leads to fatigue. Clothing should be suited to the temperature to which the body is to be exposed. It is a good thing to think of these things at this time of the year when we are facing various changes of the weather.

In olden times it was the custom to put on woolen underwear with the first snowfall and to wear it until the first robin sang in spring. Now, in some variable climates, the weight of the clothing is changed frequently to conform to the outdoor temperature, and heavy underwear has been discarded because of the warm houses in which we live.

Dressing acording to the thermometer is a good hygienic habit. The outside temperature can be observed by the thermometer which hangs outside the window or by the new indoor and outdoor thermometer, which registers outdoor temperature indoors, and one can dress accordingly. It is desirable to accustom the body to slight changes of temperature. But a sharp change is too great a strain for most people unless it is of short duration.

We feel best when there is a slight variability in the atmosphere which surrounds us, but a sudden change of several degrees in temperature causes discomfort and may cause digestive disturbances. When we are dressed to meet this sudden change the shock to the body and the task of adjustment is less.

Because so many indoor temperatures are too warm and because it is beyond the power of the average individual to correct them it is best to wear a light dress or suit and a fairly warm coat. The coat should always be removed when riding on a train or when sitting in a theatre or other warm indoor places. Rubbers and galoshes should always be removed indoors.

Children particularly are allowed to suffer from too much clothing worn indoors, and sometimes at play are wrapped in too much woolen clothing. Wool worn next to the skin is likely to weaken the body and to make the skin less capable of reacting healthfully to the cold.

Light, porous materials should be chosen for clothing. Windbreakers, rubber raincoats and all such materials, which cause the skin to perspire, should be worn only in wet and windy weather, for which they are intended, and should not be kept on indoors or worn when unnecessary.

Women have made great strides in hygienic dress, and one wonders how long men will be in securing greater comfort and health for themselves by discarding some of their excess clothing.

The Battle That Didn't End

In strength doth youth take boastful pride,
And scorns to run away or hide.
—Old Mother Nature.

Never had there been such a battle in the Green Forest as the battle between Lightfoot the Deer and the strange Deer who had suddenly appeared. For a time they would separate every once in a while for a moment's rest; then come together again, rising on their hind feet to strike with their fore feet; and then, head to head, pushing with all their might. The ground all about was trampled up. Now and then one would have a small advantage, but never for long. It strength they seemed to be about equal. Lightfoot was the older. He had the experience, but the stranger had the advantage of youth. So, after all, they were quite equally matched.

All the little people of the Green Forest who could get there were present looking on. Somehow, the news had spread. As you know, all the Squirrel cousins were present. They were all in the trees, even Striped Chipmunk and Impy the black Chipmunk. Sammy Jay and Blacky the Crow were present almost from the start. Other feathered folk came. Unc' Billy Possum, Bobby Coon, Billy Mink from the Laughing Brook, which was not far away; Reddy Fox, Mrs. Reddy, Old Man Coyote, Buster Bear, even Yowler the Bobcat, all were looking on. No one made a sound. The only sounds were the snorts of the two fighters and the clash of their antlers and the stamping of their feet.

It was shortly after jolly, round, red Mr. Sun began his daily climb up into the blue, blue sky that the battle started. When he was right overhead, looking down, they were still there, head to head, pushing and shoving. Never had a battle been known to last so long. It was Reddy Fox who first noticed something odd on the part of the two fighters.

"Do you notice that they don't back off any more?" said he to Mrs. Reddy. "When they stop to rest they keep head to head. I wonder if each is afraid that the other may run away. See, they've stopped to rest now!"

Sure enough, the two fighters were standing still head to head and nose to nose. They were panting for breath. It was plain to see that both were tired. They were very tired. Neither one seemed to be hurt much. There were a few marks of sharp horns, but neither was hurt badly. For a little while they stood there, heads down, forehead to forehead. Then Lightfoot once more began to push. The stranger backed a little way. Then he set his legs and strained and pushed, and Lightfoot went back a little way. Both slipped down to their knees and continued to push.

It as after noon. One by one the onlookers slipped away to get something to eat. One by one they returned to find the two fighters still at it. It was growing late. Jolly, round, red Mr. Sun was close to the Purple Hills, behind which he would go to bed. The Black Shadows crept out across the Green Meadows and into the Green Forest. They found the two fighters still standing head to head, now and then pushing a little, but for the most part standing there, tired out, yet neither seeming willing to quit. Pretty Mrs. Lightfoot was still looking on, but there was a queer expression on her face. It was as if there were something she did not understand.

The little people of the day departed for their homes; the little people of the night took their places. A great wonder took possession of all. Handsome Lightfoot and the equally handsome strange Deer had fought all day an it looked as if they intended to fight all night.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

Looby Brush Manufacturing Company, Centerbrook.

When dairies and creameries first started the use of milk bottles a number of years ago (about 1888) their big problem was the proper cleaning, after return from the customer to the milk house. Particularly was this true in the summer with the dust particles and solidifying of cream and milk at the bottom of the bottles. Brushes with metal cores were not satisfactory as they scratched or broke the bottles.

At that time, William H. Looby, who was just entering the brush business, put on the market a practical brush with spiral wood core and tuft end, permitting a thorough cleaning of the milk bottle without metal or wood touching the sides or bottom of the bottle. At that time bottles were washed one by one by hand.

The brushes proved instant sellers although there was yet a large amount of experimenting to be done to determine the best materials for a stiff, long wearing brush. After months of experiment the best possible materials were secured. Then the power or rotary washer came on to the market. Mr. Looby then adapted the brush handles to fit holders permitting a brush to revolve at speeds from one thousand to eighteen hundred revolutions per minute without running off center. If the brushes were off center they would break in the handle part and cause brushes to be returned for replacement. By a special lathe, Mr. Looby turned the handles so exact that there was no wabbling after the brush was put in the holder and a dairyman was enabled to wash several thousand bottles with a power washer where it was only possible to wash as many hundred by hand, previously.

The business increased as time went on and in addition to the dairy brush business there came orders for the same types of brushes to clean goblets and glasses in cafes and places now prohibited by the Volstead law. This class of trade developed into such proportions that it soon became 70 per cent of the total volume of sales.

Upon the death of the founder of the business in January 1917, the business was continued as an estate until July 1918, when it was incorporated under the present name. Since that time, through a vigorous sales program, our brushes have become accepted among the dairy and creamery trade as the best possible to secure. A large foreign business has been built up as well.

To replace the business lost through the enactment of the 18th amendment, a line of twisted-in-wire brushes was added. This line consists of household brushes, certain dairy and creamery equipment brushes as well as brushes for sporting goods houses for cleaning revolvers, rifles and shotguns.

The present officers are: George F. Looby, president; Emma L. Spencer, treasurer; Isabelle L. Tibbals, secretary.

Prospects for the balance of the year are particularly bright with a volume of orders on our books at the present time.

WEDDINGS

Gray—Durr

In the presence of about seventy relatives and friends, Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, at the home of the bride's father, Martin Durr, of Lathrop avenue, Norwich Town, his eldest daughter, Miss Esther Margaret Durr, was united in marriage with James Barton Gray, Jr., of Norwich. To the music of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin, played by Miss D. Louise Sterry, the bridal party descended the stairs and proceeded to the bay window in the living room, where the ceremony was performed by Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, the double ring service being used. The bride, who walked with her father, who gave her in marriage, had as her maid of honor her sister, Miss Rose Durr. The groom was attended by Robert Singleton Stott, Jr., as best man.

The bride was charming in a princess gown of white satin of the latest design and she wore a cap-shape lace veil, caught with orange blossoms, and carried a bridal bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor wore nile green chiffon, and carried pink roses and pink carnations. Little Miss Lucille Avis Counterman was ring bearer. She was daintily dressed in flowered georgette over pink.

While guests were assembling previous to the ceremony, Miss Sterry played The Spring Song, To a Wild Rose, and I Love You Truly.

The bay window where the ceremony took place was banked with palms and on either side were tall trumpet baskets filled with chrysanthemums, dahlias and other of the season's flowers, bearing on tints of light lavender and white. Autumn foliage was effectively arranged over the windows, the work done by Geduldig. Following the ceremony, the bridal party formed the receiving line during the reception, when a buffet lunch was served.

The bride received many beautiful wedding gifts of cut glass, silver, china, linen, electrical appliances, pyrex, also a liberal amount of money. Guests were present from Newark, N. J., Hartford, Mystic, Westerly and Norwich. Mr. and Mrs. Gray left by automobile for a wedding trip of two weeks through New York state, Canada, and as far west as Detroit, Mich. Upon their return they are to take up their residence in a newly furnished apartment at 399 Laurel Hill avenue, Norwich. The bride wore a traveling dress of brown, with coat and hat to match.

A member of the 1924 class graduated from Norwich Free Academy, the bride for the past four years has been stenographer in the Norwich office of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. She is a member of the Norwich Town Congregational church, also of the Christian Endeavor society, of which she has been a most active and popular member.

The groom, after his graduation from grammar school, took a commercial course. He is an engineer, being a member of the National Association of Power Engineers. He is employed by the Norwich gas and electric department, holding a position there for the past three years. He also attends the Congregational church and C. E. society.

Before her marriage the bride was given two miscellaneous showers by her friends in the church and those in the office where she was employed.

LePlace—Sands

Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, in the presence of relatives and intimate friends, Miss Hortense Ines Sands, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Sands, of No. 73 Boswell avenue, was united in marriage with William Eugene LePlace, formerly of Philadelphia, Pa. The wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents and the ceremony was performed by Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, pastor of the United Congregational church. The couple was unattended.

The ceremony was performed in front of a bay window attractively banked with palms and ferns. The Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin was played by the bride's aunt, Mrs. J. A. Parks, of New Haven. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

The bride was charmingly gowned in blue georgette, wore white moire slippers and carried an arm bouquet of rose buds and baby's breath. Following the ceremony, a buffet lunch was served and there was an informal reception with instrumental music, songs and duets. After a wedding trip through New York state, Mr. and Mrs. LePlace will take up their residence in this city. Mr. LePlace is an electrician and is employed at the Wauregan hotel. The many friends of the couple extend them hearty good wishes for a happy and prosperous future.

Holmberg—Crouch

One of the prettiest of autumn weddings took place in Ledyard Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Montgomery, when their granddaughter, Esther Crouch, became the bride of Henry Holmberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Holmberg, of Ledyard.

The ceremony, which took place on the lawn under an arch of autumn foliage, was performed by Rev. George H. Strouse, of Bozrah, an intimate friend of the family. The double ring service was used, the bridal chorus from Lohengrin was played by Miss Alice Bishop of Bozrah as the bridal party appeared. The Mendelssohn wedding march was used as the recessional.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was beautiful in a princess gown of flat crepe, with tulle veil arranged cap shape. She carried white carnations. Her only attendant, a sister, Anna Crouch, was attired in yellow crepe and carried yellow chrysanthemums. Harold Holmberg, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

Immediately after the ceremony, a reception was held for the many guests who came from Boston, New London, Norwich and the surrounding towns. Enoch Montgomery of Boston, an uncle of the bride, rendered a number of solos, among which were O Promise Me and Gypsy Love Song. A buffet lunch was served.

The bride received a large number of very beautiful gifts which included china, silver, linen and money.

Mrs. Holmberg is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Crouch and has made her home with them since graduation from public school. Mr. Holmberg is engaged in extensive market gardening with his father. After a wedding trip to Niagara Falls and points of interest in Canada and New England, Mr. and Mrs. Holmberg will be at home in the new cottage built for them at the Drawbridge.

CHRIST CHURCH PAYS THURBER HONOR IN IMPRESSIVE MEMORIAL SERVICE

An impressive memorial service for Christopher Carson Thurber, a native of Norwich whose death occurred last May in Greece while engaged in Near East Relief work as a managing director, was conducted at Christ Episcopal church Wednesday evening with an unusually large congregation of parishioners and their friends, supplemented by a large delegation of Greek people from Norwich and New London. The service at which the rector, Rev. Thomas Richey, presided, was of special importance and interest to Norwich in that Mr. Thurber was a native of this city and was a Christ church boy.

In a brief address of welcome to the members of the congregation, who joined in the memorial service, Rev. Mr. Richey alluded to Mr. Thurber, as "a true friend of our Lord, Jesus Christ, in that he bore much fruit and laid down his life for his friends."

In concluding his remarks the pastor read a poem entitled "To Christopher Thurber in Memoriam," written by William Tyler Olcott, of this city and first published in The Bulletin.

Following the reading of the poem, Rev. Mr. Richey introduced Rev. Harold C. Jaquith, of Darien, national director of the Near East Foundation and co-worker of Mr. Thurber, who, in his opening remarks, dwelt upon the fact that it was fitting that this service should be held in his own church, the first memorial service following the impressive service on the other side; also it was fitting that his Greek friends were joining in the service.

CHRISTOPHER C. THURBER.

Rev. Mr. Jaquith went on to say that today there is being dedicated, in the city of Athens, a tubercular pavilion, the gift of America to the handicapped children of Greece. The building is being presented by Hon. Robert Skinner, our minister, to the Greek leader and prime minister, Eleutherios Venizelos, as a memorial to Christopher Thurber, late director of the near east relief, who died in Athens, May 31st of this year. Mr. Thurber was honored, as few Americans have been distinguished abroad, by the Greek government bestowing upon him the honors of a retired general.

In speaking of his friendship with Mr. Thurber, the speaker declared it was his friend's ambition to give his life in service. Continuing he said that Mr. Thurber was an example of true character, personifying the ideals of America to the people overseas. He was a representative of religion, pure and undefiled, that cared for the widows and the fatherless.

After enumerating Mr. Thurber's early endeavors in social work, the speaker said that at the outbreak of the World war he became assistant director in charge of hospital service for the south and after the war he became assistant director in charge of U. S. Better Health Hospitalization, under the Red Cross, in charge of over 700 tubercular soldiers. In 1921 he was asked to join the Near East Relief. He arrived in Constantinople at a time when the struggle between the rising nationalist movement at Angora was in sharp conflict with the allies and the Greeks, who were occupying Smyrna. The interior of Turkey was cut off from communication from the outside world. One of the most experienced directors of the relief work had died in the interior in Silvas. Mr. Thurber volunteered to meet the emergency. During the winter months that followed in this isolated post in the heart of Turkey, the refugees poured into the city in vast numbers and the children in the orphanages were increased from 1,700 to 5,200 children.

In an effort to meet the terrific emergency, Mr. Thurber, working personally with the refugees, contracted typhus and suffered for months from the dread disease. After two years of isolated service he was on his way out of the interior of Turkey, on leave, expecting to return to America. He arrived in Constantinople and found a situation which has not been duplicated for tragedy in all of the annals of relief work overseas.

Nine thousand Greek refugees had been forced into Selimieh military barracks in Constantinople, Rev. Mr. Jaquith continued. An epidemic of typhus broke out, taking its death toll at the rate of one per cent. per day. Mr. Thurber insisted upon going into the barracks and organizing the relief measures. He lived for weeks in the midst of this maelstrom of death in which ten Greek doctors died in the effort to stem the ravages of the epidemic. An American newspaper reporter, visiting the scenes of the tragedy, during the latter days, was being shown through the barracks, the hospital and the soup kitchen, and finally found an additional 1,000 refugees huddled in some dilapidated horsesheds, on muddy floors, but at the sight of Mr. Thurber they rose and smiled. In reply to the interrogation put to him by the newspaper reporter as to how people could live under such conditions such as this, Mr. Thurber turned to him and said: "But the Christ was born also in a manger."

After Mr. Thurber returned to America for his much needed leave, he had many persuasive openings for a comfortable and leisurely life in the states, but he was not content until he had returned again to his chosen field of service in the Near East and for the last years he had been acting director of the Athens area, in charge of the night schools and homes for working boys and of the distribution of relief in the refugee camps for the old and helpless. It was to this task that he gave all of his energy and his efforts and from which he was taken by death on May 31st of this year.

No American has been accorded a greater recognition by the Greek government than was given to Mr. Thurber, the speaker continued, when the state insisted on providing a public funeral and giving him all of the honors possible from the Greek government. The words of the secretary of the state at the time of the funeral expressed the attitude of the whole Greek nation toward his life and memory:

"I am charged by the president of the Hellenic government to thank thee, Christopher Thurber, for the high service thou hast rendered to Hellas, and to assure thee that thy name shall be uttered with the greatest reverence by many generations to come; I present thee with this wreath of flowers from the violet-crowned city of Athens; may its earth receive thee with the same love and affection as its citizens have accorded thee when thou wast among them. Christopher Thurber, farewell."

Mr. Thurber's work will continue, Rev. Mr. Jaquith added, his work will be perpetuated in Athens through a memorial fund which is being raised this year. The care of his friendless refugees will be maintained, the guiding hand over the boys and the girls who are making their place in life will be sustained and the name of Christopher Thurber will be cherished forever in the annals of Greece.

Tribute From Greek Residents.

On behalf of the Greek speaking people in the congregation Rev. Dr. G. Polizoides, pastor of St. Demetros church of Astoria, L. I., paid a glowing tribute to the memory of Mr. Thurber. Rev. Mr. Polizoides said that this was not only a memorial service, it was more than that, it was an expression of the gratitude of my people for the work completed by the Near East directors. It is my conviction that the foremost things of Mr. Thurber were his love and sympathy for the foreign people. He was a true friend and benefactor to them. After pointing out other striking qualities of Mr. Thurber, Dr. Polizoides emphasized that Mr. Thurber is dead, but his work is not dead. At the conclusion of his brief address Dr. Polizoides offered a prayer for the late Mr. Thurber.

A memorial prayer also was given in Greek by Rev. Nathan Theodores, pastor of Holy Trinity Greek Orthodox church of Norwich, previous to which, as a special feature of the program, a group of children from that church, sang the Greek National anthem, after the congregation had rendered the American national anthem. The congregation also sang the hymn, "St. Stephen," a favorite of Mr. Thurber.

The service concluded with an offering, the entire sum of which will be applied to the Thurber Memorial hospital in Soteria, Greece, which was named in honor of Mr. Thurber and which was dedicated by the Greek government on Wednesday, with many of the high officials of Greece and America attending.

SPEAKS ON CO-OPERATION TO ROTARY MEETING

At the weekly luncheon of the Norwich Rotary club on Wednesday at the Wauregan hotel the members of the club had the pleasure of hearing Miss Mary E. Bundy, the new secretary of the Norwich chamber of commerce deliver her initial address in that capacity. Miss Bundy made a very favorable impression, talking with sincerity and impressing all with her earnestness of purpose in bringing Norwich to the forefront in the state.

In speaking of Norwich and the attitude of the business men toward the present business conditions Miss Bundy urged that they take a more optimistic view and instead of saying to a customer in a blunt way that busines was "rotten" to convey the impression that it was good. She said that she was a firm believer in this psychology. She illustrated her point by citing an incident where she herself was going to purchase a dress and when she asked the merchant how business was he replied that it was rotten. By doing this he conveyed the impression that he carried old stock and that she was really afraid to make a purchase and went elsewhere to a place where the proprietor thought business was good.

Miss Bundy who was introduced by Christopher Gallup said in part:

When Mr. Gallup asked me yesterday afternoon if I would talk to the Rotary club, I was both embarrassed and pleased; embarrassed because I was to give my initial talk as secretary of the chamber of commerce so soon, and pleased because for obvious reasons I could never be a Rotarian and I always thought that if I ever had to make a speech it would be to such an organization as this whose principals are so tolerant and so charitable.

First of all I want to say that the Rotary club is to be congratulated on having as a member Mr. Gallup. He has done much for Norwich, taking into consideration that he is not a resident. I refer you to his time and work put in on the deepening of the Thames project. Mr. Gallup has given me a lot of encouragement and help since my new undertaking, and it is on this topic alone I am going to talk: Cooperation, Teamwork, Support.

My first thought of making application for the secretaryship of the Norwich chamber of commerce was prompted when I had occasion to talk to some of the secretaries in the large cities of New England at the New England secretaries meeting held at our Norwich Inn last month. Talking about the vacancy in our local chamber, they asked me why I did not make application for it myself, taking into consideration the experience I already had in chamber of commerce work. I asked them point-blank what they really thought of a woman secretary and they only referred me to the splendid work of Mary Curtin, secretary of the Waterbury chamber of commerce until the time of her death. Also to Miss Dugan, secretary of the Middletown chamber, and who was a candidate for the position in Norwich. Miss Dugan is acclaimed by the New England secretaries to be one of the finest in the field.

But these same men also reminded me that a secretary could not carry on successfully alone, no matter what his or her experience, no matter how capable. It was of vital importance to have the help and assistance of the president, and the moral as well as financial support of the board of directors and the entire membership.

A chamber of commerce is of vital importance to a city. Imagine an industry or any business trying to locate in a city without a chamber of commerce. It just couldn't be. Like every other worthwhile organization it has a background on which to work. Our background is our officers, our board of directors and our committees. This year we have picked men with years of experience, men who know and have the best interests of Norwich at heart, and with a knowledge of the necessities of civic life. These men are going to help in every way to put Norwich at the top of the list, but they have to have the help and cooperation of every member. I realize that I am talking to the representative business men who have it within their power to make Norwich a thriving city but without your support and backing and cooperation the chamber of commerce cannot function.

I ask you now for your hearty cooperation in the coming administration of the chamber of commerce of Norwich and I pledge you in return that you can depend upon the officers, the directors, and the secretary to place service above self, in making Norwich one of the outstanding cities in New England.

At the business session of the meeting President Harold D. Larrabee presided with C. A. Gager and L. G. Briggs as songleaders. The club voted to participate in the Armistice day parade after Charles Gilbert had outlined the program for the observance of the day.

One of the pleasing musical features of the meeting was the airing of John McLean of Jewett City who rendered two bass solos.

The meeting closed with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

SCOUTLEADERS HEAR TALK BY BOY SCOUT CHIEF HILL

Fred Hill, Boy Scout chief of Hartford council, gave an interesting talk to Norwich scout men Wednesday night on "The Nature of the Boy." The meeting was held in Room 215, Thayer building, and was characterized by enthusiasm for the programme of scouting for the coming months. Mr. Hill recalled to the men many of their experiences as boys. He told of the primary urges of boys and how, in the regular troop meetings, these urges must be taken into consideration, directed and moulded into something conducive of character and citizenship.

Following Mr. Hill's address to the men, a round table discussion ensued which proved so interesting that the men prolonged it for over an hour. Many of the problems of troop organization and council objectives in relationship to the troop were ably treated by Mr. Hill and at the close of the meeting the scouters stood and applauded him most heartily.

Refreshments were served, consisting of doughnuts, cider and apples, the cider being a gift of Erroll C. Lillibridge and his brother Alfred.

Those in attendance at the course were: Charles Gilbert, chairman of training; William Wyman, Jean Kieffer, Walter Weidman, John Boldrighini, Lloyd Rathbun, H. Downer Johnson, Jr., Art Collins, Ernest Plassman of Plainfield, Mr. Leffingwell, John L. Sellman and Scout Executive Hill.

The next session of the training course will be held Oct. 22. The speaker will be O. H. Benson, director of rural scouting of the United States, and founder of the 4-H club work. A special committee has been appointed to prepare a meeting which will pay proper appreciation of Mr. Benson's visit to Norwich.

Among the activities for the near future discussed were: The meeting of the board of review, which will be held next Monday night, Oct. 13, at 7 o'clock at scout headquarters, and which all candidates for tenderfoot, second class, and first class, expecting to receive badges at the court, must attend the court of honor, which will be held Oct. 15, at 8 p. m., with the Girl Scouts invited to attend and Troop 7 to put on a comic stunt.

It is hoped that by the next meeting of the course 24 men will have enrolled.

COMBINED CHOIR FOR SALEM CHURCH INSTALLATION

A combined choir from the Salem Lutheran church of Norwich and the Ebenezer Lutheran church of Willimantic will sing at the services in Salem Lutheran church, on Hickory street next Sunday evening. At this service the pastor of the church, Rev. E. Elner Kron, who arrived here recently, will be installed by the Rev. Dr. S. G. Higglund of Boston. In addition to the installation address by Dr. Higglund, greetings will be brought from the other churches in the district by the president of the district, Rev. Karl Johansson, of Providence, and by Rev. F. G. Cranquist of Pontiac, R. I., who served as a vice pastor during the vacancy. It is expected that a large delegation from Willimantic will be present, as the pastorate consists of both churches. This service will begin at 7.30, and will be conducted in the English language.

ATHLETICS WIN WORLD'S TITLE; EARNSHAW PITCHING TEAM TO VICTORY IN THE SIXTH GAME

Brilliant Mound Work of Earnshaw Stamps Him As the Outstanding Hero of the Series—His Work Only Surpassed By Christy Mathewson and Two Other World's Series Pitchers—Extra Base Hitting By Simmons and Dykes Completely Puts Cards to Rout—Cards Use Four Pitchers Ineffectively to Stop Barrage

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

SHIBE PARK, PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The great right arm of George Livingston Earnshaw and the dynamite in the bats of his team mates, exploding with devastating effect all over the premises, today swept the Philadelphia Athletics to their second successive world's championship and their fifth of all time under the leadership of Connie Mack.

While the 67-year-old patriarch of baseball sat serene and quiet on the bench, in solitary dignity among a flock of wildly excited ball players, the Athletics put on a power-plus exhibition of baseball to rout the St. Louis Cardinals 7 to 1 in the sixth game of the world's series.

The victory gave the Athletics the series by a margin of four games to two as they forced their previous conqueror, Wild Bill Hallahan, from the box after two innings and hammered three of the four Cardinal pitchers for seven smashing hits, all for extra bases, as they surpassed the extraordinary batting record of the opening game.

Seven Hits—Seven Runs

On the same field where they made five extra-base drives account for as many runs in the opening game rout of Burleigh Grimes, the Athletics today collected five doubles and two home runs, one by Al Simmons and the other by Jimmy Dykes, to roll up a total of 18 bases—and seven runs.

Staggering back from the terrific force of this high explosive bombardment, the Cardinals were subdued for the second straight game by the fast ball pitching of Earnshaw, who blanked them for eight successive innings as he completed one of the greatest pitching exhibitions in world's series history.

With only a day's travel from St. Louis to Philadelphia for rest, Earnshaw returned to the mound and mastered the National league champions with the same skill and effectiveness he showed in whipping them in the second game here and in holding them scoreless for seven straight innings of the crucial fifth game at St. Louis Monday afternoon.

Sacrifices Record for Pinch Hitter

Only the fact that he was withdrawn for a pinch hitter in that fifth game, which Robert Moses Grove finished and received official credit for winning, prevented Earnshaw from scoring three victories and placing his name in the Hall of Fame that already lists Christy Mathewson, Jack Coombs, Babe Adams and Stanley Coveleskie.

In twirling the better part of three of the six games, 25 innings altogether, Earnshaw held the clouting Cardinals to the meagre total of 13 safe hits and two runs. From the third inning of the second game until the ninth inning this afternoon, Earnshaw pitched shutout ball over a stretch of 22 consecutive innings.

Not since Christy Mathewson blanked the Athletics three times in the world's series of 1905 has any pitcher shown such complete mastery over his opposition, nor given a more brilliant and courageous exhibition.

Handicapped by Injury

Throughout the series, the giant right hander and former Swarthmore college star pitched with a right foot that still was sore from the effects of a stone bruise. He aggravated the injury in the second game here and today he went through the whole game in some pain, taking off his shoe frequently between innings on the bench to let the trainer massage his foot.

Until he tired toward the end of the game, Earnshaw was invincible, overpowering the Cardinals with his tremendous speed and baffling curves, mixed with a change of pace. He allowed only three hits in the first eight innings, meanwhile striking out six men, and he yielded the only Cardinal run in the ninth on hits by Andy High and Chick Hafey, the latter banging out his second double of the game

Grove-Earnshaw Co.

Thus the famous two-man staff of the A's, Earnshaw and Grove, with Earnshaw enacting the role of senior partner, completed the conquest in a fashion more brilliantly convincing than even their warmest admirers expected them to do. Grove, the fireball left hander, won the first game, lost the fourth in a close duel with Jesse Haines, but received credit for winning the fifth, checking the Cardinals in the last two innings as Earnshaw's successor, while Jimmy Foxx's home run settled the issue.

Grove spent most of this afternoon out in the bull pen, warming up for any emergency that might arise. He was ready for the rescue act at any time but as the A's bats beat a happy tune and Earnshaw's arm continued to perform pitching magic, the famous southpaw found no opportunity to step in.

Earnshaw after surviving the brief Cardinal outbreak in the ninth, waited for Bing Miller to bring in the last ball for him and then raced to the dugout to escape the wild rush of fans, scrambling to the field. The crowd of 32,295 spectators arose at the finish to give the big right hander one of the most vociferous ovations any world's series hero has been accorded since the great Walter Johnson strode victoriously off the mound in 1924 in Washington.

Earnshaw's pitching masterpiece, in hurling 16 of the last 18 innings for the A's was the climax of a triumph that forced even the conservative leader, Mack, to admit for the first time that this was a "great team," comparable to the machine with which he won three world's championships in four years, 1910, 1911 and 1913, before it was beaten by the Braves in 1914 and subsequently broken up.

Mack's Fifth Title

This was Mack's fifth world's championship triumph in seven battles with the forces of the National league and the most sensational of them all, for the A's were compelled to make a spectacular fight to overcome the Cardinals after the Red Birds had tied the series at two games each in a great comeback of their own.

It was also the fourth consecutive victory for the American league, due to the performances of two super teams, first the Yankees in 1927-28 and now the Athletics of 1929-30. These eastern clubs have now won 16 of the last 19 world's series contests. Also, for the third time, the American league has registered its four world's championship conquests in a row over the older rival.

Connie Mack already had held the all-time record with four world's series triumphs and his fifth put him "two up" on his only living managerial rival, John McGraw, as well as the record of the late Miller Huggins of the Yankees.

No Doubt as to Outcome

Any lingering suspense and doubt about the outcome today was quickly removed as the Athletics went on their wildest hitting rampage of the series and scored their most one-sided victory. Bats of such players as Jimmy Dykes and Bing Miller, silent for days; war clubs of such consistent sluggers as Al Simmons, Mickey Cochrane and Jimmy Foxx kept up a steady drum fire of extra-base hits for the first six innings. It was all over but the shouting then.

Six Homers by Athletics

In three previous games, the only solid and substantial smash off Athletic bats was Foxx's sensational home run in the ninth inning of the fifth game. Today all the heavy hitters took a turn at the long range stuff. Dykes, hitherto a "goat" because of his fielding lapses, had a perfect day at bat with a double, home run and two passes. Simmons hit his second homer of the series. Foxx and Cochrane contributed doubles and Bing Miller a brace of them. Hallahan, who blanked the A's in the third game, was wild today as he lasted only two innings, during which he yielded two hits, three bases or balls and hit one batsman.

With one out in the opening frame, Dykes walked and scored on Cochrane's two base smash that caromed off Bottomley's glove and eluded Watkins, rolling to the right field wall. Mickey galloped to third on the error and scored on Miller's double.

Hallahan got past the second without further damage, despite hitting Bishop and again passing Dykes, but Simmons greeted Sylvester Johnson, a right hander, with a home run into the left field bleachers in the third inning. Miller followed with his second double and the only hit that the Athletics wasted.

Johnson passed Bishop in the fourth and Dykes then hit a line drive into the lower left field stands for a homer and two more runs. Foxx's double, in the fifth, followed by sacrifice hits by Miller and Haas put over the sixth Philadelphia run

Johnson gave way to a pinch hitter and big Jim Lindsey was on the mound in the sixth when Bishop walked, raced to third on Dykes' booming double and scored on Cochrane's sacrifice fly with the last Athletic tally.

Lindsey, in the eighth, and Herman Bell, pitching in the ninth as the fourth Cardinal moundsman, retired the A's in order.

Meanwhile, off Earnshaw, only two Cardinals got as far as second base in the first eight innings. George Fisher, pinch hitting for Hallahan, doubled in the third, and Hafey doubled in the seventh, after which Bottomley walked but these were the only Cardinal scoring threats until they averted a shutout in the ninth, when hits by High and Hafey, interspersed with two walks, produced only one run.

Bottomley Misses Record

Bottomley, when he took three swings in the second inning, fanned for the ninth time in the series but escaped the ignominy of striking out further and for the tenth time to equal the 1921 record of George Kelly of the Giants. Sunny Jim was moved down the Cardinal batting order, from fourth to sixth, in a last minute shake-up by Manager Gabby Street but it did no good. The score:

Series Notes

Today's game was remarkable in that not one Cardinal pitcher came to bat. Fisher batted for Hallahan in the third, Blades for Johnson in the sixth and Orsatti for Lindsey in the eighth.

In effect, it carried out the idea of President Heydler made two years ago that a tenth man should be in the line-up to bat for the pitcher.

The series was remarkable in that only once did either team hit for double figures in any games. The Cardinals collected ten hits in the third game off the pitching of Walberg, Shores and Quinn. The hurling was above the average all the way.

The two-time world's champions got one or more men on the bags in every inning except the seventh and eighth when they went out in order.

Connie Mack said that Earnshaw did not tire in the ninth when he allowed two hits and two bases on balls. He was just a "little careless" said Mack.

Jimmy Foxx, who won Monday's game at St. Louis with a homer, was given a big cheer when he came to bat the first time.

The crowd held nothing against Jimmy Dykes for his misplays in St. Louis for he also was given a loud cheer when he stepped to the plate. He responded with a perfect day at bat.

The great ovation given to George Earnshaw when he came to bat in the eighth was enough to warm the heart of any ball player. He doffed his cap and biffed a high fly to deep center.

"Darn good," said Connie Mack when asked how it feels to win a fifth world's championship.

Connie was the master tactician to the very end. Asked after the game when and why he pitched Earnshaw, he said "that is a club house secret."

The fielding play of the game was Frisch's stop and throw on Cochrane in the fourth inning. The great second baseman made a wonderful stop of Cochrane's torrid grounder and got the ball to first, a whisker ahead of the peppery A's catcher.

Connie Mack said it was a clean series. The "riding" of the players he said was just an incident of the game and left no hard feelings.

GOVERNOR FLIES TO THE DANBURY FAIR

DANBURY, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Governor's day brought a crowd of 30,000 persons, including Governor Trumbull, Mrs. Trumbull, the governor's staff, and many prominent state officials, to the Danbury fair today.

Governor Trumbull flew here from his home in Plainville with Captain Harry W. Generous as a passenger. He made the flight in 20 minutes.

Three harness races were on today's program, but because of the large number of entries, two events were each divided into two divisions. One of the races was unfinished and will be completed tomorrow.

Not that I wish to exult or croon that old "I Told You So" ditty but I can't help mentioning that the Athletics won the world's series four games to two.

When, on Oct. 1, there appeared in this column a little paragraph that said, "The Athletics look good to us. They ought to take the series four games to two," a great laugh went up.

In fact that laugh was so raucous that it bordered very closely on the well known American raspberry. Some were extremely frank and said that I was all wet.

One local person went so far as to say that if Susie picked the Athletics he'd take the Cardinals for Susie was always wrong. I agree with him, but this time I got a break.

Considering the bum guess last year and the good one this year the books show net profit of 75 cents with all bills paid. So what's the use, nobody ever got rich that way, you got to pick 'em right, right along.

But listen to the boys that pinned their faith as well as their money on the Cardinals. One fan said last night that the Athletics weren't so much because they only had two pitchers, Earnshaw and Grove.

Well, what's the use of carting around a whole flock of flingers when two will bring home the old flag. That's all they needed.

Then you hear somebody say that there are only three hitters on the Athletics, Simmons, Cochrane and Foxx. Gracious me, what if they'd had more?

Then there's the age-old wail of "the series was in the bag." Don't that give you a pain? Could anybody see where the series was thrown? There were so few errors that it couldn't have been there. The way young Charlie Gelbert played looked as though he was trying to toss away the series, didn't it?

Those boys were playing their heads off and don't forget it. The only thing was that the Athletics dealt in two-base hits, triples and home runs to a greater extent than the Cardinals.

In that last inning in yesterday's game it looked as though Connie Mack might put in his second team so that they could get their letters. Gabby Street gave about all his squad a chance.

And now comes the football.

MRS. PATTERSON LEADS FIELD IN U. S. SENIOR TOURNAMENT

RYE, N. Y., Oct. 8.—(AP)—Mrs. Myra Patterson of Greenwich, Conn., led the field at the end of the first half of the 36-hole medal play of the U. S. senior women's golf championship today, turning in an 18-hole card of 87 over the Westchester Country club course.

The veteran Metropolitan golfer was out in 43 and came home in 44 to card her 87, which is five over women's par for the course. The score was good enough to lead Mrs. D. S. Laird, Jr., of Rye, N. Y., by one stroke, while Mrs. Charles J. Downey of Springfield, Mass., was in third place with an 89.

Mrs. D. E. Bentley of Boston and Miss Georgianna M. Bishop of Bridgeport, R. I., a former titleholder, were tied for fourth with 92. Mrs. G. W. Roode of Boston, the defending champion, finished ten strokes back of the leader.

CADETS TO PARADE IN NEW HAVEN BEFORE GAME

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Arrangements for entertaining 1,200 cadets from the U. S. Military academy at West Point at the Yale-Army game on Oct. 25, were discussed today at a conference between Army, Yale, and city officials. Major T. A. Terry and Lieutenant J. A. Cranston represented the Army.

The plans as decided at the conference, call for a parade of the cadets through the city and at the Yale bowl, an annual feature of the Yale-Army game. The parade will be held about noon.

Army's football squad will arrive in Connecticut on the night of Oct 23, making its headquarters at the Choate school in Wallingford. It will hold a final workout the following day.

ST. LOUIS FANS NOT SURPRISED AT OUTCOME

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 8.—(AP)—St. Louis baseball fans took what happened in Philadelphia today with such calm as to give the impression that the element of surprise was entirely lacking.

Happenings of the last few days had convinced even the most rabid of the Red Birds' backers that George Earnshaw and Robert Moses Grove know considerable about fooling hostile batters And with Earnshaw and Grove ready for today and tomorrow —had there been a tomorrow—those who entertained an idea that the Cardinals would win the needed two in a row were decidedly in the minority Until the last man was out, however, radio listeners-in consoled each other with "but you can't tell, the Cardinals have come from behind all year."

ACADEMY HARRIERS RUN AGAINST BULKELEY TODAY

The Academy's cross-country season will open this afternoon at the campus with a second team meeting with Bulkeley of New London, ancient rival As this will be the first athletic meeting of the two schools this season, both the Wildcat and the Tiger, of course, will make special efforts to start off on the right side. The first team meet between the two schools will be held next month.

The Academy's first team has a meet pending with Connecticut Aggies freshman here next Tuesday afternoon it was announced by Coach Matthew J. Sheridan, which would start off the campaign for them.

DUGAS ALL STARS TO PLAY SHYMAS SATURDAY

What will probably be the last game of the baseball season will be played at the Providence street grounds on Saturday afternoon when Lefty Dugas' All Stars clash with the Shyma club team. Lefty is expected to put a strong club in the field and will probably do the pitching himself. The Shymas are to strengthen considerably for this game by the addition of a number of local ball players who have been performing well in the eastern part of the state.

'YOU ARE A GREAT TEAM," CONNIE MACK TELLS HIS BOYS AFTER THE GAME

(By Edward J. Neil, Associated Press Sports Writer)

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8—(AP)—An old gentleman with a new toy—his second world series championship in succession—played with the bauble tonight and trembled with happiness in possessing it.

Once more Connie Mack, the tall, stately patriarch of the Philadelphia Athletics, has maneuvered his men into the throne room of baseball. In fifty long years playing the game, managing the A's, he has won five of these titles, and while the dew should be off the rose, the thrill of conquest, keeness for the fight, never seems to fade in him.

Today the hulking powerful young athletes who might be his own sons in the affection he feels for them, battered the St. Louis Cardinals into the final defeat needed to bring another world championship pennant to Shibe park. They fought for the honor and prizes of winning. They fought for the "Old Man" though they'd never dare call him that to his face. They fought, too, for Connie's recognition as a truly great ball team, an honor he denied them after their first series triumph over the Chicago Cubs last year.

So, when the battle was over and a mob of howling fans were fighting to invade the sancity of the Athletics' dressing room, Connie slipped in among them. He could hardly speak from excitement. The warriors were shouting defiance and satisfaction over a radio microphone set up in their quarters and an announcer was pleading for Mr. Mack's presence on the air.

"You Are a Great Team"

The players let out a roar that rumbled through the walls and out into the stands when they spied Connie's long lean frame. He walked happily down a lane through them reaching out to pat his aces, big George Earnshaw, the pitcher, Al Simmons, Jimmy Foxx, Mickey Cochrane, Jimmy Dykes, as he went by. Then half way to the microphone he stopped and said:

"You did what I asked you to. You are a really great ball team."

The athletes seemed to have been waiting for that. They yelled and jumped around the room in their various stages of dress and undress, cheered and shouted for Connie and themselves. Then they followed him to the microphone and all tried to speak at once.

Earnshaw, with his team mates howling "Iron Man" in his ears, modestly announced that he was happy and everyone else in the room echoed his sentiments.

Just as the A's themselves, giving the Cardinals plenty of credit for gameness and fight, looked upon the outcome of the series as something that could not have been otherwise, so did Connie Mack accept the victory with complacency when he finally got a chance to sit down and talk it over. The tremendous nervous exhaustion that followed last year's victory was missing today. He did not need to lie on his couch and rest while his heart struggled back to normal. The depth of feeling was gone but there was great satisfaction in its place and happiness that made him tremble.

"This was the easiest game of the series," he said as he lolled back in an easy chair at his desk in the tiny office set up in the tower back of the big grandstand in Shibe park. "The Cardinals played all their cards and went down fighting. I am proud to say that they made us play to the limit. They were worthy foes. But I must give my boys credit. They are a truly great ball team.

"They gave me my fifth world's championship today and all the honors should go to them. I told them this spring that they must win another American league pennant and another world championship before I would recognize them as a really great team. Now they have done that. They are a great team.

"They beat the Cardinals a fighting team that came from behind in the National league and won 20 of its last 25 games. They showed themselves to be a better club.

Gives Credit to Earnshaw

"Lefty Grove and George Earnshaw must be given a world of credit. They are great pitchers. Earnshaw, on his performance today and through the series, must be classed as one of the greatest pitchers of all time, an iron man of the same caliber of Jack Coombs who won three games for me in the world series with the Chicago Cubs in 1910.

"Hallahan, Haines and Grimes of the Cardinals are all great pitchers. Gabby Street did everything possible and made no mistakes in handling his club. The breaks were even. He just didn't have quite the ball club I did."

Cardinals Have Little to Say

Down under another section of the stands the Cardinals, beaten but contented with the best showing a National league champion has made in a world series in four years, quietly stripped away their baseball togs for another season and headed home. There were no crowds pushing them. They had little to say because there was little to say. They had given all there was and it was not enough.

"It was just a case of too much Earnshaw," said Gabby and there was genuine admiration for the big right hander in his voice. "I've got a good club and we might have won with the breaks. We didn't get them so the best club won this series."

YALE SQUAD HAS FORWARD PASSING DRILL

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 8.—(AP)— Coach Mal Stevens called off a scheduled scrimmage today to give Yale's varsity squad a light workout in fundamentals and forward passing. A short supervised scrimmage during which a defense was stressed for plays expected to be used Saturday by Georgia rounded out the day's session.

The backfield which Stevens reorganized yesterday with McLennan as quarterback remained unchanged today and is expected to start against Georgia. Sullivan, Dunn, and Crowley are the other members of this quartet. The make-up of Albie Booth's backfield, however, remained problematical. Booth and Taylor retained their posts, but Beane and Muhlfeld shared their positions with Ned Austen part of the time today.

ATHLETICS GET $600 LESS THAN LAST YEAR'S SPLIT

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Victory of the Athletics today gave them the winner's end of the money, approximately $5,000 per man, figured on a basis of their total of $136,027.69 being split into 27 shares.

Last year, each Mackman collected $5,620.57 for whipping the Chicago Cubs, the players' pool being much larger than this time.

The Cardinals will have their feelings soothed to the approximate extent of $3,350 each figuring their purse of $90,635.34 on the same split-up basis as the A's.

The total gate receipts for the series exceeded $950,000 and were the nearest to the million dollar mark since 1926.

LEAGUE OF TEN TEAMS TO BE FORMED

(Special to The Bulletin).

PLAINFIELD, Oct. 8.—A meeting of the Southern New England basketball league was held tonight at the Community house with President Lester Sallsbury presiding. There were 16 in attendance, representing many teams, of which eight to ten will be finally selected to compose the circuit. The games will be played on Tuesday evenings at the Community house, starting Nov. 4.

The league will be composed of clubs from the following places: Willimantic, Woodstock, Putnam, Danielson, Moosup, Jewett City, Taftville, Westerly, South Manchester and Plainfield. Amateur rules will prevail.

QUAKERTOWN CELEBRATES WINNING OF TITLE

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.— (AP) — Philadelphia whooped it up for the world's champion Athletics today.

As soon as word of the 7-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals reached the central city section, confetti and ticker tape began to fall in great showers.

A number of impromptu parades were formed and at every street corner groups of fans gathered, slapping each other on the shoulders and singing the praises of big George Earnshaw and Connie Mack.

It was the greatest evidence of "baseball-mindedness" and enthusiasm that this city has shown for years. No such demonstrations marked the winning of the championship last year when the A's ran rough-shod over the Chicago Cubs.

Two Advisory Committees

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The Yale A. A. tonight announced the appointment of two graduate advisory committees.

The Ideal of a Craftsman

In every age men have striven with untiring patience for the achievement of an ideal. The name "STRADIVARIUS" on a violin immortalizes a master craftsman who lived true to his ideals.

Making a cigar of the finest quality was the ideal upon which in 1874, at Manchester, N. H., Roger G. Sullivan—starting with one cigar maker—founded 7-20-4. Today because of its ideal quality, 7-20-4 has grown to the largest hand-made cigar industry in the World.

Quality workmanship and the finest tobaccos are traditional with 7-20-4. The unswerving tenet of its founder—to keep faith with the public—has remained unchanged for over half a century. It is this firm principle which today refuses to alter that method of manufacture which has made 7-20-4 Cigar—FAMOUS FOR ITS CHOICE QUALITY.

We cordially invite you to visit our factory

THIEVES GET $100 IN STOCK FROM A. N. NASH'S NEWSTAND AT WESTERLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Oct. 8—When the newstand of Col. Arthur N. Nash in the Park block on High street was opened about 5 a. m. Wednesday, it was found that a thief had visited the store and some nearly $100 worth of stock and change had been stolen. Discovery of the break was made when Col. Nash and Head Clerk Walter H. Snyder arrived to open the morning newspapers. Patrolman Leroy H. Norman arrived shortly after the shop was opened and immediately began his investigation.

It was found that a person of diminutive statue, in all probability, had entered the building from an areaway cellar window at the rear of an adjoining store, then had climbed a partition wall to crawl through a coal hole into the basement of the Nash store. Here the entrance to the store on the street level was effected by the raising of a large floor trap-door over the basement stairway but this process met with an obstacle. The door to a wall cupboard or closet at the side of the floor trap had been left open and effectively prevented a direct raising of the floor-trap. A two by four wooden block was used to place under the hinge end as pressure was applied below and the outer edge forced up sufficiently high to permit the thief to squirm out onto the store floor.

Among the articles missing were valuable purses and billfolds of $4 to $8 valuation and pipe stems and cigar lighters which were easily traced by the show cases being left open and the empty boxes scattered about. Quantities of cigarettes and cigars were also taken, the exact amount from the large stock carried being difficult to tell. It was thought by police authorities that the small boy who did the "inside" job had the co-operation of an older person outside. About midnight Police Officer Robert Kessel on the High street beat examined store doors and found everything apparently all right in the stores, so that the burglars had only a matter of but few hours in which to work. It was only several weeks ago that the Pucci barber shop in the same building was entered and a custodian in charge, Special Officer Michael J. Burke, seized a young man intruder, whom he recognized, although he later made a getaway from the officer on the outside, but was apprehended and later taken to the police station and in Washington county superior court later pleaded nolo to the complaint and was given sentence. There have been a series of High street store and shop breaks recently and among the other places visited were the I. B. Crandall where over $100 worth of clothing was stolen and several attempts have been made to enter the dental shop of Dr. R. C. Dove both in the Potter-Langworthy block on High street. These breaks are thought to be the work of local parties with co-operative help from adjoining cities.

SPECIAL LEGION TRAINS PASS THROUGH WESTERLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Oct. 8—Homeward bound American Legion national convention attendants at Boston, continued to pass through Westerly on Wednesday and Wednesday night. They occupied special cars and public coaches and sleepers on all southbound express trains of the New Haven road, which made the Westerly station stop. The convention goers, many in uniform, also occupied through buses and many hundred private automobiles which bore registration plates of many distant states. Many of the motorists stopped in Westerly to obtain meals at the various restaurants before proceeding to their destinations and there were also a very noticeable number who made a stop at the Westerly post office to mail cards and letters.

Even the air lanes were not omitted in use by returning convention attendants for on Wednesday morning no less than 18 or 20 planes, some in squadron formations of threes, fours and sixes passed on the Westerly northern skyline westward bound.

Washington county superior court in its Westerly adjournment of the September term will come to Wetserly on next Tuesday morning and sessions will be held in the Union street county courthouse with a possibility of Associate Justice Carpenter on the bench. The cases set down for Westerly trial at the opening of the court term at the West Kingston county court house on the third Monday in September will be called on the docket.

Through every step of their cure and manufacture the delicate, sun-ripe fragrance of these tobaccos is scientifically preserved. POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

The Forest Fiend

There's a red moon hangs in the sky tonight;
Know you what that red moon means?
There are wild things trapped in a frenzied flight:
There are monstrous harrowing scenes.
There are timorous birds, and their downy wings
Are scorched with the breath of hell:
Lo! dazed is the soft-eyed doe that clings
To the side of her loved gazelle.

There's a red moon hangs in the western sky,
There's terror abroad, alas!
There's the doom of the damned as the flames leap high,
And the woods are a seething mass.
No refuge this, for the stricken deer
Whose home is the forest glade:
Beleaguered by smoke and beset with fear,
He flees from his wonted shade.

There's a red moon hangs o'er the mountain steep,
There's a gray ghost, gaunt and grim:
There are starvelings now from the forest deep,
That are lurking beyond the rim:
O friends, take heed, lest a holocaust
More grievous than aught before,
Bring woe in its wake, needless pain enforced,
And death to your own loved door!
—Mary Harriett Rathom.

For a French Poodle

He has gone, the Laughing Heart, the Clown—
Laid all his tricks and gallant mummeries down,
And not a child along the block but grieves
For the emptiness he leaves.

He was "nothing but a dog," and yet the chair
He loved best, is mostly lonely-looking there,
And all the house seems listening with the street
For his home-coming feet.

They say the car which struck him swerved aside
With full intent to kill. Some cruel pride
In power and speed, with young hard-hearted mirth
Struck him to earth.

Where now is all that gallantry and grace,
That trusting love which looked into my face?
Lord, it may be that he has fair renown
In Heaven's town!
—Eleanor Halbrook Zimmerman.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

The pine warbler is very fittingly named for he is seldom found other than where the pine tree is. He feeds among the pines and when in any other woods is away from home and in strange surroundings. His breeding range covers broadly the pine domains from the Gulf of Mexico northward into southern Canada. He winters in the sun-touched pineries of the states of the south. He is the only member of the vast warbler family that winters in the interior of the United States. Some four or five of the more than forty species which breed in the United States and Canada leave a few, a very few, of their fellows in Florida or along the Gulf Coast. The Antilles, Central America, South America claim the vast warbler multitudes. Not so the pine warbler. It seems well agreed that he sends no individual of his beyond the blue seas. The pines of the southern United States supply his every winter want. From the Atlantic to east-central Texas; from southern Illinois to the Gulf; then, with April the spreading northward until his song trills in the pine woods from the Gulf to beyond the Great Lakes. Aside from the fact that his nesting range laps over into Canada, he remains at all times within our borders.

He begins housekeeping early in the pine-scented Ouachita hills; is busy with nest and nestlings before the northward movement of most migratory birds is fairly under way. It is not easy to find his compact nest. High up in the pine, sometimes more than forty feet above ground, the cup-shaped structure is tucked away in a knot of clustering pine needles; hidden, the observer is apt to think, all too well. But the reward of finding the nest is worth even an extended search.

As winter nears the pine warbler may overcome his strictly arboreal instincts and condescend to put his feet on the ground. He has abided, spring and summer, amid the live pine needles, he now would know the feel of dead pine needles—that coffee-brown covering that forever carpets the floor of his forest. Berries of the neighborly dogwood, seed of the flaming sumac he adds to his bill of fare. These and other berries contiguous to the conifers, together with insect larvae and the ever-present pine seeds comprise his winter's menu.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES

A Scare

Dear Uncle Jed: I am sending you a story hoping you and the Wide Awake circle enjoy it. One day this summer my friend and I went biking. We were picking wild flowers when suddenly we heard a crash in the bushes behind us.

We hid behind a tree and were scared. All of a sudden my friend began laughing. I was nearly crying and told her to keep still. She pointed to the animal and I clearly saw that it was only a dog. I was glad that it wasn't any wild animal. I brought the dog home and gave him a bone. Every other day that same dog came to see me. I think that he loved me very much because I know I loved him.

The First Soap

Dear Wide Awakes: Soap is said to have been invented by the ancient Britons, and a couple of thousand years ago the Romans carried the invention to Italy. In Savona they manufactured soap, hence the French term "savon." There are natural soaps—the soap-root of Spain, the soap-berry of Chili, and the bark of the Peruvian soap-tree. At Quaretaro in Mexico soap takes the place of copper coinage. The Tierra del Fuegans eat soap, finding the fat therein really nourishing. They say they like the taste, too. Soap is made from garbage in the newest incinerating plants.

JOE STANTIWIECZ, age 10.

Language of The Koran

Uncle Jed: Though the Arabs number less than the population of London, their language is one of the most widely spoken and influential in the world, for it is the language of the Koran. Seventy millions of people in Asia and north Africa speak some form of Arabic as their vernacular, and quite as many more know something of the language from the Koran, which, in the original, is a textbook in the day schools of the Mohammedans from Turkey to Afghanistan and New Guinea. Nor is Arabic unworthy of this extensive use. Renan, after expressing his surprise that such a language should spring from the desert regions of Arabia and reach perfecttion in nomadic camps, declares that it surpasses all its sister Semitic languages in richness of vocabulary, delicacy of expression and the logic of its grammatical construction.

EDWARD J. MONDE, age 14.
Danielson.

Back At School

Dear Uncle Jed: Back at school and thinking of many stories. Here's one. "My First Day at High School." At 8.20, the bell rang and we marched into our home room. We, the freshmen, had a class of 65. We looked like a frightened herd of cattle. We were given seats and cards telling us which rooms to go in.

English was our first subject. This wasn't so bad, because we were used to it. The second class was Latin. Here was my dreaded subject. It sounded like Greek to me, and what peculiar words. My third class was algebra. Then we had lunch.

Our next period proved to be very interesting. At 1.45, the bell rang and we were free. After many weeks of school I always remember my first day of high school.

Animals In Christmas Customs

Dear Uncle Jed: The Christmas customs in Norway and Sweden are the most interesting of any country. It is a time of great rejoicing. To show that there are amicable feelings between every one in the household the shoes are placed in a row at night in the hall when retiring on Christmas eve, and, like the German custom, candles are left burning in the village windows all night to light the way for "Kristine," who brings the gifts. The Christmas tree is largely decorated with candies and pretty cakes arranged in bright colored baskets — all usually home-made.

The richer households send good things to the poor, and everywhere among both rich and poor are the animals and birds remembered. The boys and girls save up their pennies during the year for this purpose. Sheaves of grain are fastened to the window ledges in town, and in the country the sheaves are fastened to long poles and renewed every day for a week, and many are the birds that spy this feast. On the barn floors of the peasants bowls of hot porridge are set for poor "Robin Goodfellow" to comfort him because he has no "soul." The cows and the horses share in the general happiness by having a double share of food given them.

It is a big skip from the Northland to the Southland or tropical countries where Christmas is celebrated without the evergreen tree to decorate and hang gifts on. In Brazil and other Spanish countries the holiday may be spent outdoors in the sunny flower-scented air.

They have quaint superstitions in these summer lands relative to "Yule tide." On the coffee plantations the old folk say that on Christmas night the animals have the gift of speech and that if only a child has sufficient courage to go out alone after dark it will hear, on the stroke of twelve, the cock crow in a loud clear voice from his highest perch:—

"Christo nasceu"—Christ is born.

The bull in a deep sonorous bass inquires from a distant field, "Onde"—where?

The sheep then answer in chorus, "Em Belem de Juda"—in Bethlehem of Judea.

In turn all the domestic animals give to the world the glad tidings of the nativity. Many a child wishes it had the courage necessary to enable him to hear this wonderful conversation of the brute creation.

EVA MOHERTIN, age 13.
New London.

In New York

Dear Uncle Jed: During the summer I went to New York city for a week's vacation. While there, I saw many places of interest, such as the Statue of Liberty, Madison Square Garden, Coney Island and many other places. First I will tell you about the Statue of Liberty. We took a small boat out to the little island where the statue is placed. After we landed we walked up the steps to the door of the statue. Then we walked along a hall until we came to the elevators, which we took up to the main floor. After that we climbed a long narrow stairway through the body and head of the statue until we came to the crown. Here there was a small platform and windows where we could stand and look all over the city of New York. After we had seen enough we went down the stairs until we came to a place where on a table was placed a book and pencil to sign your name and what state you came from. I enjoyed my visit to the Statue of Liberty very much.

Weather Signs

Dear Wide Awakes: If you want fine weather, look for fine weather signs.

When the sun sets in a sea of glory, that is, when the sunset sky is red, you may expect clear weather on the following day.

At night, when the moon is clear and shows clean edges, with no halo or ring of mist surrounding it, there is little danger of rain.

When the wind blows steadily from the west, the weather will continue fair; it very rarely rains in our eastern states with the wind in the west.

Watch the smoke from a chimney or from your campfire—it is a good barometer. If the smoke rises high, it means clear weather. The smoke will also show you from which direction the wind is blowing; so will a flag on an upright flagstaff.

A gray early morning, not a heavy, cloudy one, promises a fair day.

A heavy dew at night is seldom followed by rain the next day. Think of it this way and you will remember: wet feet, dry head.

FREDERICK J. LYNCH.
Hartford.

Egyptian Customs

Uncle Jed: There was a custom among the ancient Egyptians that forbade praises being bestowed upon the dead on funeral occasions, without observing the following conditions: Judges were to be appointed, whose duty it was to examine into the past life of the deceased; if any one had aught against him, he could appear and state his grievances. If the deceased had led a wicked life, the judges condemned his name to perpetual infamy; nor could his relatives erect any monument to his memory. If nothing was brought against the deceased, permission was granted the relatives to proceed with the funeral discourse, which consisted of a recital of the worthy deeds of the dead.

We are told that in heaven there is a record out of which every man is to be judged, according to the deeds done in the body.

TOWN IS ENTITLED TO TWO REPRESENTATIVES

With the republican caucus this (Thursday) evening and the democratic Monday next, and with neither party prepared to nominate more than one representative, like a pinch-hitter in the ninth inning, the letter came to Town Clerk John Welsch this evening from State Secretary William L. Higgins that Griswold is to have two representatives. The facts and figures received from Washington, D. C., declare that by virtue of the last official census returns Griswold's population is 6010. It is expected that Thursday, on the very eve of the caucus, the republican town committee will have the required two names to present for nomination, instead of one.

Democratic political leaders said this evening that in all probability the two democratic nominees to be selected at the caucus Monday night would be Maxcy Seymour and John Sullivan. It appears today that the committees of both parties are making strenuous endeavors to have every eligible voter made by election day, as is evidenced by the largest "To Be Made" list, which has been handed to the selectmen for ten years.

The list which follows contains 140 names as against less than a dozen last fall.

90 LEADING STOCKS ESTABLISHED NEW LOWS FOR THE YEAR YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, Oct. 8—(AP)—The financial markets drifted lower today, impelled by another attack of the blues which had its origin in some disappointing statistics on business.

Ninety leading stocks established a new low average for the year. Wheat and corn were heavy and the bond market continued highly irregular.

Losses in stocks were not large, except in a few instances, nor was the selling active, but the market lacked impressive support and many important shares, including U. S. Steel, General Electric, Westinghouse Electric and Western Union touched new minimums. There was a mild recovery toward the close on scattered short covering. Sales totalled 2,066,960 shares, about 1,500,000 less than yesterday.

A 3 per cent reduction in steel operations during the past week, another decline in car loadings and a 7 per cent drop in department store sales last month were hardly stimulating to the cause of price recovery. The steel group was especially soft, but utilities and office equipment stocks fared little better.

The steel reviews called attention to the September declines in pig iron and ingot production and found that the demand was flattening out. September's improvement, said "Iron Age," "was apparently too small to absorb the surplus stocks of raw steel accumulated in August." Contracting, it added, has been checked by the realiaztion that the gain in bookings last month was over-estimated. Renewal of price pressure was also noted. Production was placed at 58 per cent of theoretical capacity against 61 per cent a week ago.

The drop in car loadings for the week ended September 27, was 21 per cent, the largest of the year in comparison with 1929, although the loss from the previous week was only 2131 cars.

On the basis of the averages, the market sagged 1.8 points to 146.1 which compares with the last year's low of 140.3. U. S. Steel dipped to 150 1-2, only half a point above its November 1929 minimum, rallying to close at 151 1-8 for a net loss of 2 5-8. Bethlehem Steel dropped to 75 1-4 against its year's minimum of 75. Youngstown Sheet and Tube slumped six points to 99 on small sales. McKeesport Tin Plate, Vanadium and Republic Steel preferred were also heavy.

American Telephone at its lowest level was 5-8 above yesterday's 198, although it closed at 200 3-4, off a point net. General Electric slid just under the Tuesday low and then rallied a point, also for a one point loss. American Can and General Motors were somewhat steadier, finishing with fractional declines. Westinghouse, selling down to the new low of 119 1-2, yielded 4 points net, the largest recession among the active stocks.

Selling of the rails were less aggressive, but Atchison, New York Central, Rock Island, Missouri Pacific and Chicago Northwestern lost a point or more.

Gillette tumbled 8 points under liquidation stimulated by prospective bond financing in connection with the Autostrop merger. International Business Machines and Ingersoll Rand yielded 7 and 4, respectively. Allied Chemical 5, Case and Auburn 3 and American Water Works, Consolidated Gas, International Telephone, Electric Power and Light, Western Union, Woolworth and Warner Brothers, 1 to 2. North American, Satndard Oil of New Jersey, and Montgomery Ward, made small gains.

International Paper A, reacted to a new low in anticipation of the dividend omission, announced after the close.

Wheat was off more than a cent in sympathy with the stock market and weakness in Liverpool. Corn closed 1-4 to 3-4 lower, reflecting bearish government weather reports and disappointing consumers' demand. The government cotton estimate prompted covering in that staple, which was up 7 to 8 points net.

Foreign exchanges were again featured by the weakness in South Americans. The Brazilian milreis was quoted nominally at slightly under 10 cents.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 8—(AP)—Latin American bonds slid down to unprecedented prices for the year today with losses ranging from 1 to 11 points. Foreign bonds were generally lower and domestic issues lost ground in an irregular movement.

Some of the forces of the selling movement appeared to have spent itself in the violent break of the previous session. The decline of Latin Americans was less severe, but there was no let-up in the liquidation of Brazilian bonds, a reaction to the reports of gains by the rebel army in the South American republic.

Brazil 6 1-2s of '26-'57 tumbled 3 points, and the 6 1-2s of '27-'57, were down 11 after drops of 8 points, each in the previous session. Brazil 8s were only 1-2 net lower. The coffee security sinking fund 7 1-2s were firm, and Sao Paulo state 7s rallied 3-4. They were the only Brazilian issues to move against the trend.

Losses among Brazilians also included Rio De Janeiro 6 1-2s and 8s, down 8 and 9 points, respectively; Rio Grande Do Sul 6s and 7s, off more than 7; Sao Paulo State 7s, down 3; Minias Gerares 6 1-2s of 1958, 9.

Sharp declines were registered by Chilean and Bolivian bonds. Chile 6s of February 1961, and Bolivian 8s slumped 8 points each. Bolivian 7s found good buying support to rally 4 1-4 above the previous close, and Uruguay 6s of 1960 and 1964 gained 1 point. Uruguay 8s, however, were off nearly 3. Argentine issues were 1 to 3 lower. Costa Rica 7s slid 6 points to 75.

Nearly all German bonds moved lower and were the most reactionary in the European list. The 5 1-2s touched 75 1-2, off 16 from its year's high and German Agricultural Bank issues sagged 2 to 4. Rumanian 7s reacted 3, and Polish 4s and 6s set new lows for the year. French, and British governments were virtually unchanged.

The reversed trend of the domestic list generally ascribed to the adverse effect of the weak foreign market was mirrored in the averages. They were off 3-10ths of a point from the previous day and 1.3 from the 1930 high reached several weeks ago. Price movements followed a narrow groove compared with recent sessions but a majority of changes were on the downside.

Railroad bonds were irregularly lower. St. Paul 5s of 1975 slumped 2 3-4 points on a large turnover. The adjustment 5s recovered 3-4, from the year's minimum, Chicago and Northwestern 4 1-2s, were steady. Convertible railroad issues were the most active and generally lower. Utilities were steady.

U. S. governments were moderately active and slightly lower.

Offerings tomorrow will include $2,940,000 City of Passaic, N. J., 4 1-4s and $1,000,000 Dallas County 4 3-4s.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 8—(AP)—Curb market shares were still under pressure in today's market, and closed lower for the fourth successive session.

Selling was not particularly heavy, the day's sales aggregating 515,100 shares, but it was persistent, and half hearted efforts to rally the list were quickly abandoned. Most net declines were moderate, although several ranged from 1 to 3 points.

Electric Bond and Share, held above its recent minimum, and closed at 60 3-8, a net loss of only 1 5-8. This issue was traded in large volume. American and Foreign Power warrants, still adversely influenced by the Brazilian situation, touched new low ground at 26, but closed at 27 1-2, off only 3-4. Consolidated Gas of Baltimore lost 3, and Eastern Utility Associates dropped nearly 4 to a new low at 35 5-8. Niagara Hudson, however, held steady, and American Gas and Electric gained a point.

Ford of Canada A, dropped nearly 4 points to a new low at 18 1-2, then rallied a point. General Aviation, formerly Fokker, touched 10, off 1 1-2 and new low ground. Dow Chemical dropped 2 points, touching 60 for the first time this year. In the mines, Consolidated Mining, an infrequently traded issue, sold at 164, off 22 points from the previous sale, and Noranda sagged a point to a new low at 17. Oils were also heavy. Cities Service closed at 26, off only 1-4, but Gulf dropped 3 points. Goldman Sachs trading was a soft spot in the investment trusts, declining a point to 12 1-2, again a new low.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Oct. 8—(AP)—Grain prices succumbed today to the influence of breaks in the stock market, and finished flat at virtually the day's lowest level. Contributing to the downward course of wheat values were reports that rains had improved southern hemisphere crop prospects, and also that Russia was now shipping wheat out of her northern ports as well as by way of the Black sea. Wheat price rallies that accompanied news of threshing delays and damage to crops in Canada failed to last.

Buying quotations of wheat, were lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed unchanged to 1 1-4c down, oats 1-8 at 3-4c off, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 15c.

Provisions owed their upturns more or less to an upward tilt of hog values.

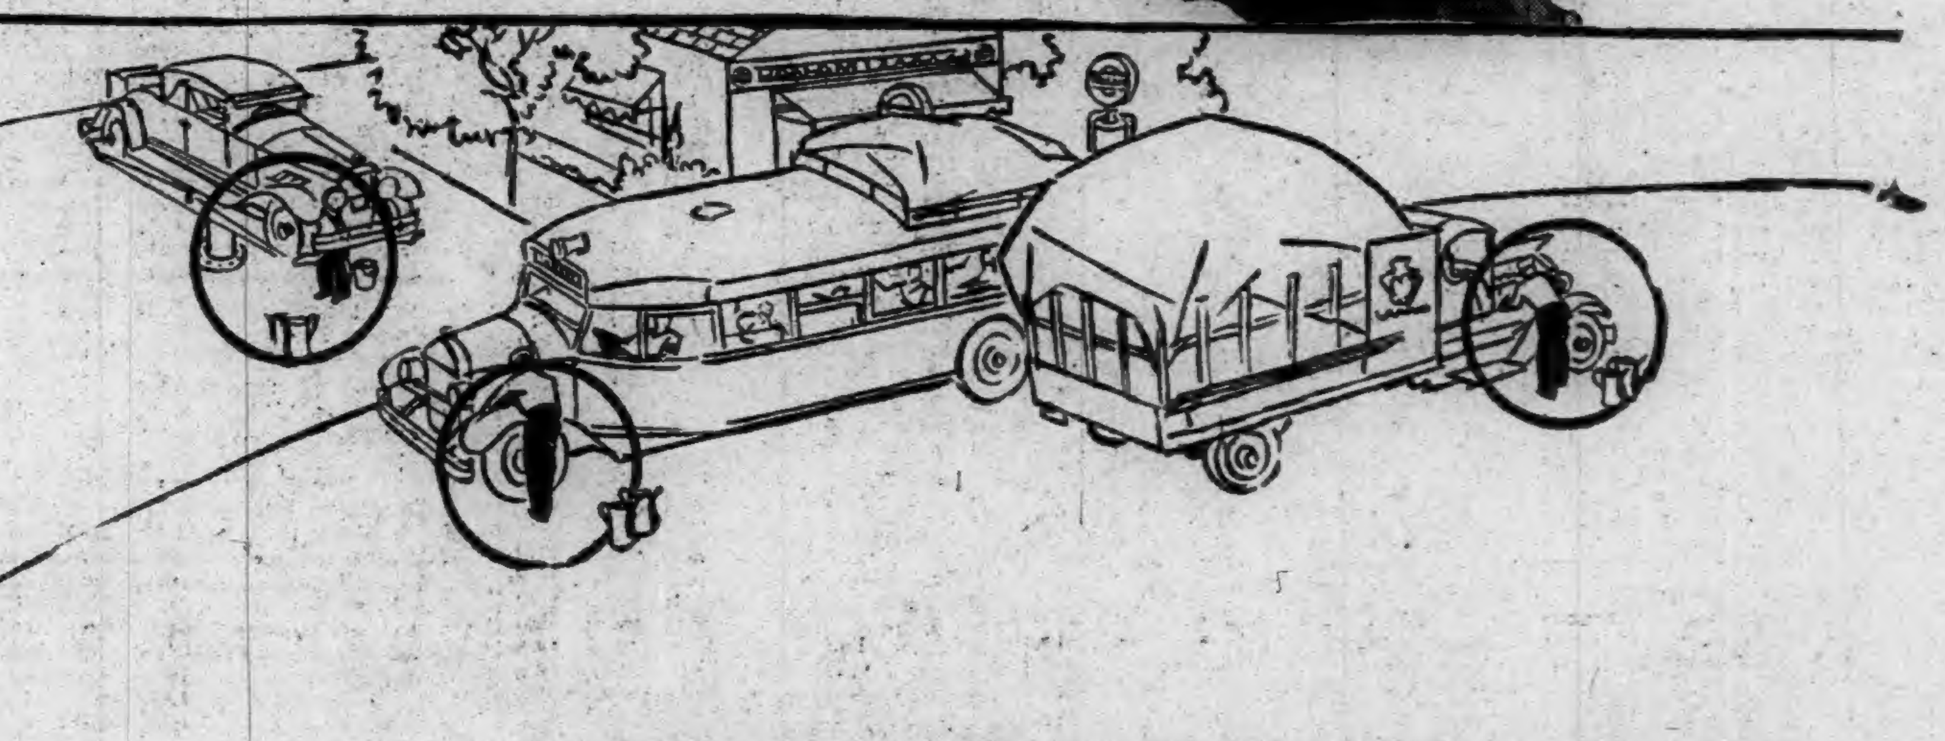
TESTED BY MOTORS
for Your Car~



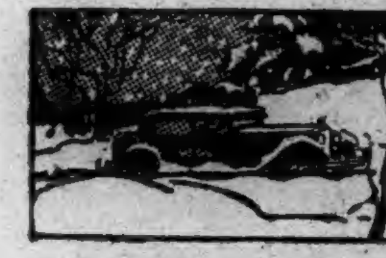
Whether you operate a bus, truck or tractor, your personal car or motorcycle, you know that PAN-AM engineers have tested the new PAN-AM Motor Oil under the same operating conditions, for over a million miles.

Greater speeds and hotter motors demand these tougher motor oils. Triple-refining has removed wax-like substances that thin out at high temperatures. PAN-AM "Motor Tested" Motor Oils cut carbon in half and give you better all-around performance.

Ask the PAN-AM man. He knows the right grade of "Motor Tested" Motor Oil for your car. Get this extra motor oil protection.

MOTOR PAN-AM OILS

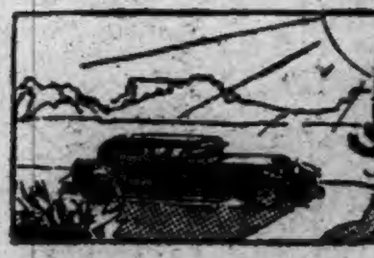
A MILLION MILES OF ROAD TESTS



Through Cold

Down to zero and below. PAN-AM gave instant, smooth lubrication.

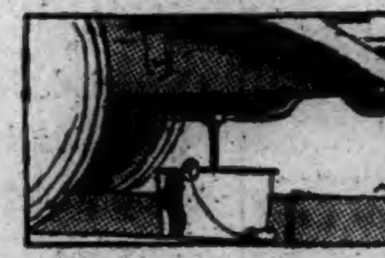
Many motor oils thicken at freezing temperatures. PAN-AM's triple-refining process removes wax-like particles. No matter how cold, PAN-AM motor oil answers, "Ready!"



Through Heat

Test cars driven over scorching roads.

Down in the motor . . . greater heat. Up go the revolutions per minute. Up goes the temperature of every moving part. PAN-AM "stands up under fire" at temperatures far above ordinary motor-heat.



Stands Up

The long grind is over . . . long past the life of ordinary motor oil. Rigid examination showed that PAN-AM kept its full body and color.

PAN-AM motor-tested motor oil stands up like a soldier full of fight . . . and ready to "keep going."

Less Carbon

PAN-AM oils proved, in the motors, that they deposit 50% less carbon, by actual weight, than other high-class motor oils.

PAN-AM means cleaner motors. Less grinding of valves. Smaller repair bills. Longer life for your motor.

September Sounds in Vermont

It's almost time to listen in
  To Autumn's native noises,
Those sounds that up inside the air
  The pleasant season poises;
Right there they hang the bright day through
  To charm the happy hearer,
Without his turning any knob
  Or nut to make 'em clearer.

There are no discs to counterset,
  There's no distracting "static."
The program isn't too high-hat,
  Nor yet too democratic;
Stop anywhere you chance to be,
  Say, near the old corner,
And hear the concert—there it goes—
  As sure as you're a learner

Those meller ax-blows, country-clear,
  Betray a stroke commu[illegible]ng;
It's Joe La Tulip chopping wood
  Two miles from where you're standing;
That thump-thud sound the other way
  Is neighbor Root regaling
The timothy he's saved for seed
  To a melodious flailing.

The red-skin squirrels on the ledge
  Jest tear the air to tatters.
But wouldn't if they knew how much
  Their advertising matters,
Hear that! a hunter's barrel booms,
  One "red" becomes quiescent
Announcing squirrel broth, we hope,
  For some poor convalescent.

'Way off upon the common land
  You hear a stray hawse whinner,
And jest this side a horn that calls
  The faithful unto dinner;
To tell the noises in the woods
  Would make a wizard cipher,
And every insect wants to be Elected dooryard fifer.

'Way up the highest hills the boys
  And gals each other foller,
And when they're on the tip-top rocks
  They jest cut loose and holler;
Their voices float above the woods
  And clear the Frenchman's clearing—
It's time of year when folks are glad
  They have their health and hearing.

—Daniel L. Cady, in Vermont Tribune.

VOTING LIST OF 9150 NAMES 1025 LESS THAN NEW LONDON HAD IN 1928

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 8.—Interest in the coming state election is evidenced by the fact that already 500 men and women have applied to be made voters. The first session of the board of selectmen for the qualification of the applicants will be held at the municipal building Saturday next. At present there are 9150 names on the voting list, 1025 less than on the lists at the last state election two years ago, showing that many voters at that time have either moved from the city or have died. If all of the 500 applicants to be made voters qualify, the list will total 9650 voters this year.

LOUIS WEIBEL CHARGED WITH SERIOUS OFFENSE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 8.—A warrant for the arrest of Louis Weibel, 19, a sailor stationed at the submarine base, charging him with adultery, was issued today by Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer. As a result, Weibel was made a prisoner at the base. He will be delivered to the civil authorities tomorrow or Friday, or as soon as advices to that effect have been received from Washington. Weibel's arrest is the result of his intimacy with Mrs. Wilda Ryan, 24, wife of a sailor on U. S. S. Oglala. Ryan and his wife have been estranged a short time, and recently Weibel and the woman started living together in an apartment at 34 Brewer street, residing as man and wife. Weibel defrayed the expense attached to furnishing the two-room apartment and permitted the woman to use his name. Last Monday night, when a dispute between Weibel and the woman took place because of the former criticising Mrs. Ryan for her expenditure of money greater than what Weibel thought was necessary, Mrs. Ryan swallowed several tablets of potassium of permanganate. She is now a patient at Lawrence Memorial hospital, where it was stated this afternoon that she would recover. In all probability when Mrs. Ryan is released from the hospital she will be arrested on the same charge as that preferred against Weibel. When Mrs. Ryan swallowed the poison a girl of 16, residing in New York, was in the house and she was taken in charge by the police for it was believed that she was in danger of falling into ways of vice. Today, the father of the girl came to New London and took her back home. The father said that he and his daughter had known Mrs. Ryan several months and she was supposed to bear an excellent character, so that when the girl was invited to come to New London and visit Mrs. Ryan no objection was made. Bruce Flowers, another sailor, who was present when Mrs. Ryan attempted suicide, has been questioned by the police, but he will not be arrested for no act of criminality was revealed by the investigation of members of the detective bureau.

DISCOVERER OF AMERICA IS TO BE HONORED THE 12TH

The Italian societies of New London will observe Columbus day and plans are rapidly being formulated for the celebration, Sunday, Oct. 12. The celebration will start with a mammoth street parade at 2:30 o'clock, which will terminate at Tyler square and where the monument of Christopher Columbus, dedicated a year ago, is located. Several prominent speakers will deliver addresses and in the evening a band concert will be held there.

LEGIONNAIRES STARTING ON THE RETURN TRIP

The advance contingent of members of the American Legion who have been in Boston attending the annual convention has started on its homeward journey and already the trains of the New Haven railroad are carrying many of the legionnaires. Practically every west-bound train to arrive in New London this afternoon and tonight carried the war veterans and during the night several special trains were operated to accommodate them. Tomorrow the travel, it is expected, will be much heavier and to take care of the big crowd trains have conveyed coaches to Boston. All of the 16 trains that passed through this city with the legionnaires to carry them to Boston will not return over the Air and Shore Line divisions for it has been decided to send some of the trains out of Boston and over the Boston and Maine railroad.

Snapper blues are biting and as a result the pier of the New England Steamship company and the state pier, as well as the abutments of the Thames river highway bridge are infested with fishermen. Although the fish are plentiful they are not biting as fast as usual.

A Danger Spot

It is probable that within a few days a request will be made of City Manager William A. Holt that either a traffic officer be assigned to duty at the corner of Broad and Williams street, or a traffic signal be erected there, in an endeavor to provide safety for the large number of school children that pass that busy intersection during the day. Automobile traffic is unusually heavy at that point and the children from four schools pass over the crossing several times daily.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the suspension of the driver's license of James Haley, of the crew of the U. S. Eagle boat, No. 35.

LONG ARM OF THE LAW SEEKS FREDERICK VINAL

A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Frederick Vinal, 264 Court street, Middletown, on a charge of reckless driving and if he can be found he will be presented in the police court tomorrow. Vinal was arrested Sept. 28 by Patrolman John Clifford on Main street. When his case was called in court the next day a continuance until Monday was ordered. Vinal failed to appear in court on the continued date, with the result that the warrant was issued. The Middletown police have been requested to arrest Vinal.

Several machines used in the manufacture of silk at the Corticelli Silk company plant, corner of Church and Union streets, were loaded on trucks this afternoon and taken to the freight yard of the New Haven railroad where they were loaded into cars for shipment to Florence, Mass. The company, a fortnight ago, decided to remove its silk manufacturing industry to the Florence branch of the company and as soon as possible the other machines, about 50, will be sent to the Massachusetts city.

Five babies were born at Lawrence Memorial hospital today. Three of the new arrivals were boys and one of them, together with a girl, was born to Mr. and Mrs. George Strickland, 15 Clover court.

As a part of the Navy day celebration here, the 27th inst., two submarines will be moored at the municipal pier the entire day. Rear Admiral T. C. Hart today requested permission of City Manager Holt to moor the craft and the request will be granted.

A feature of the observance of Navy day, Oct. 27th, will be the exhibition of the towering tank at the submarine base. The tank is the latest device which will permit sailors imprisoned on a submarine that has become disabled while submerged, to emerge from the craft while it is under water. Members of the navy will describe to visitors the performance followed in the use of the tank.

Frank Aironi, of Mystic, was arrested in Groton last night by State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh, charged with reckless driving and will be in Groton town court Monday next.

State Police Officer James Dygert yesterday arrested Alonzo S. Wilkinson, of Stonington, in that town, charged with the illegal use of markers. The driver will be tried in Stonington town court next Tuesday.

Keefe And Mahan Nominated

At the democratic city convention held last evening in the council chamber of the municipal building, Joseph C. Keefe, chairman of the democratic town committee and Gordon Mahan, son of the late Bryan F. Mahan, mayor, congressman, postmaster, who for many years was a political leader in New London, were nominated for state representative. Fifteen justices of the peace were nominated: William T. Connor, Jerome J. Collins, Leo B. Reagan, Richard A. Corkey, William C. Fox, Frank L. McGuire, Harry M. May, George C. Morgan, Thomas R. Murray, John F. Sullivan, L. Lester Watrous and William L. White.

NEW DETECTOR CAR RUNNING OVER RAILS

A detector car is being operated over the entire system of the New Haven railroad for the purpose of locating any defects in the tracks, whether uneveness of the rails, loosened joints or faulty surfaces. The car is equipped with a tank of white paint, which operates automatically, spreading the paint whenever a defect is revealed as the car passes over the rails. The depositing of the paint makes it easy for track workers to find the defect and make repairs. The car is owned by a Chicago corporation and is similar in construction to a trolley car. It is hauled by another car propelled by gasoline power.

Kenneth Kenyon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Perry B. Kenyon, 304 Huntington street, was operated upon Monday at Home Memorial hospital for appendicitis. The condition of the patient is reported as being favorable. Mr. Kenyon was employed last summer as clerk at the Hotel Griswold.

CHARGES WERE NOLLED AGAINST MONTVILLE MEN

In the police court here today, Fred Fuller and Edward Harcraft, both residents of Montville, were charged with breach of the peace and intoxication. The charges were nolled. Fuller and Harcraft were in New London last Saturday night and had been drinking. When they met on Bank street they engaged in a quarrel which precipitated a fight. During the battle the fighters were forced through a window of the Economy store. They were arrested by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh.

Patrick O'Malley and Joseph Kelly, both of Boston, charged with train riding, were given suspension of judgment. The men were arrested at the union station last night by Special Agent Leslie Peabody of the New Haven road, when O'Malley and Kelly were detected stealing a ride on a freight train.

A man who was charged with intoxication, having been arrested on Howard street, was fined $10, but execution of the sentence was suspended.

The Grocer Knows the GOOD COOK
The grocer does not dine with all his customers. • But he knows who the GOOD COOKS are by what they ask for at his counter. Grocers recognize this unfailing sign: The GOOD COOK uses Heckers' Flour.
• The GOOD COOK is quick to sense its difference. She delights in its yielding, helpful workableness. She likes the assurance of its delicate texture . . . its full-blown flavor.
• • •
The GOOD COOK likes Heckers' because it is the all purpose flour . . . a perfect blend of all that's best in spring and winter wheats which makes it adaptable for every use to which flour can be put. • GOOD COOKS have preferred Heckers' for more than ninety years . . . could any recommendation be higher?

NORWICH TOWN

ROSE FAMILY ARRIVES BACK IN PHILIPPINES

Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Rose, of Wauwecus Hill, received word this week from their son, Rev. Francis H. Rose. He, with Mrs. Rose and their daughter, Eleanor Virginia Rose, sailed from Honolulu several weeks ago for their home on the Philippine Islands, and arrived safe and were all well, Sept. 1, after a calm and very delightful voyage. Rev. Mr. Rose, who is professor at Central Philippine college, Iloilo, where Mrs. Rose also is a member of the faculty, stated in his message that they were happy to get back and take up their work again. The Rose family returned to the Philippines, after a leave of absence of five years in the United States, during which Rev. Mr. Rose pursued a special course of study at Chicago university.

Motored to Pownal, Vt.

Mrs. William H. Whiteman, of Norwich Town, and Miss Maria Briggs, of Norwich, returned recently from an enjoyable motor trip of two days, over a distance of exactly 300 miles, through the Berkshires, over the Mohawk Trail and Taconic Trail, eight miles beyond. The route was by way of Willimantic to Springfield, Chicopee, Holyoke, Northampton, West Hatfield, North Hatfield, South Deerfield, Greenfield, Shelburne and Shelburne Falls to Charimont, North Adams and Williamstown. It was interesting passing through the historic covered bridge, located between Chicopee and Holyoke, also when crossing Shelburne Falls bridge, adorned on either side with beautiful flowers. From Williamstown, after passing through Petersburg, the next point of interest was Pownal, Vt., the summit of Taconic Trail. From this location three states, New York, Massachusetts and Vermont, are visible. Returning from here, after having traveled 160 miles, a stop overnight was made at Williamstown, the seat of Williams college, which was incorporated in 1793. No other college in America has a more beautiful campus, with splendid specimens of Colonial architecture, also the interesting reproductions of the Gothic and Georgian eras. Of particular interest to the Connecticut tourists was the fact that it was on this campus the worldwide missionary movement controlled by the American Board originated. Here is located the famous Haystack monument, marking the spot where the movement was started, on what is known as Mission park.

While en route the first day, when at a location between Shelburne Falls and North Adams, a stop was made at Whitcomb Summit, 2,240 feet high, the highest point on the Mohawk Trail, commanding views in all directions. This is the headquarters for tourists traveling over this trail. The trail proper is considered by some to extend only from Greenfield to North Adams, but to others the route is all so delightful it seems of much greater distance.

The second day's trip covered 140 miles. Leaving Williamstown on the homeward journey, the tourists passed through South Williamstown, Lanesboro, Pittsfield, Lenox, Lee, over Jacob's Ladder, an elevation of 2,300 feet, to Chester, Huntington, West Springfield, Springfield, East Longmeadows, Somers, then on to Stafford Springs, through Willimantic to Norwich, reaching home at 3 o'clock in the afternoon of the second day.

The marvelous scenery when passing over Jacob's Ladder to Springfield, could be surpassed by none. Mrs. Whiteman and Miss Briggs, in less than two weeks, have motored about 1,000 miles, having returned several days ago from a trip to Cape Cod.

BAPTIST CHURCHES TO HEAR MISSIONARY WORKER

Eleven Baptist churches from the neighboring towns have been invited to hear Rev. J. M. Baker of Ongole, South India, when he speaks here Friday evening at the meeting of the Woman's League of the Central Baptist church.

Rev. Mr. Baker returned to America in August, 1929, since which time he has been in constant demand as a speaker at various Baptist conventions and associational meetings in the United States. He is coming to Norwich from Rutland, Vt., especially for this meeting and is to return immediately afterwards to Vermont. His 35 years service in the Baptist work in the Ongole district assures a thorough knowledge of the country and the field, which was the scene of one of the most remarkable revivals in history and has become the center of one of the largest and most productive mission undertakings in the world. The average population every square mile of this district is 331, making a good sized parish of 331,000 souls.

SEPTEMBER RAINFALL HERE MADE NEW LOW RECORD

There was a rainfall in Norwich in September of less than an inch, according to the measurements taken at the Norwich water department office. The actual figure was .84 of an inch, which it is probable will be the smallest rainfall ever recorded for a month in the history of the water department.

In spite of this very scant precipitation, however, the water in the Norwich reservoirs is standing at about a foot higher now than it did on the same date a year ago. In September a year ago the rainfall was 1.69 inches and the average of September for the 59 years in which records have been kept is 3.25 inches.

At the present time, Stony Brook reservoir is down 14 feet, 6 1-2 inches from full pond, Fairview reservoir is down 37 inches from full pond, and Deep River reservoir, the newest water supply for Norwich, is down 3.3 inches.

FULL RESTITUTION BY "BAD BILL" COLLECTORS

The "bad bill" collectors made another of their periodical appearances in the city court Wednesday morning, and final disposition of their cases was again continued, this time until the 15th of the month. Fred Dulenschneider, 23, and Richard Brownell, 25, are the "bad bill" collectors and the charges against them are embezzlement. Both reside in South Manchester.

They are charged with collecting in the neighborhood of $1,500 for local merchants, the money representing alleged "bad bills," and then failing to turn in the money. Since their arrest they have been paying over, from time to time, the money they collected, and the court was informed Wednesday that full restitution has been made.

WARDEN LATHROP GIVES WARNING OF PRESENT FOREST FIRE DANGER

With the menace of forest fires steadily increasing, the situation in Connecticut will assume dangerous proportions by Sunday unless rain falls, is the warning given by C. Huntington Lathrop, of Lebanon, assistant state forest fire warden in this county.

One fire, off the state highway near the Fred Stone ranch in East Lyme, which was first reported Sept. 27, is still smouldering, despite the efforts of volunteers to extinguish the flames, and several minor fires have been reported in the same vicinity.

A fire which for a time threatened to assume dangerous proportions was reported in New Hartford between the east and west branches of the Farmington river, but Tuesday afternoon was reported under control, after a two-day fight.

The state park and forest commission has prohibited the use of all fireplaces in state parks until the dry spell is broken, and Mr. Lathrop on Tuesday appealed to all those entering or riding through forests or wooded land to exercise the greatest care to prevent fires. Unless rain, which was forecast by the U. S. weather bureau in its weekly weather report to forest fire officials, falls as promised before the week-end, Mr. Lathrop requested all persons who can to remain out of the woods.

The fire in East Lyme is one of the most unusual the fire fighters have had to combat this year. Starting on Sept. 27, the fire gave the volunteers and state department considerable trouble until last Friday, when, after two days of "mopping up" it was reported that the fire was out. The crews were withdrawn, but on Sunday the fire started up again, eating its way into the ground in a bog near the Old Lyme, Lyme and East Lyme town lines, a mile and a half from the state highway. Here it has resisted all efforts of the crews of the department to extinguish the flames. The ground is dry for a depth of about four feet and the fire is eating away at the roots and rotted vegetable matter beneath the surface of the ground.

The state forest fire crew used dynamite in the bog Tuesday in an effort to arrest the course of the fire before it eats through the bog and breaks out in the woodland on the far side.

Fires have been reported within the past week in Woodstock, Preston, Middlefield, Bozrah, Guilford, Simsbury and New Milford, Mr. Lathrop said Tuesday. Unless wet weather intervenes in the near future, hunters will have to exercise extreme caution to prevent starting fires, or it will be necessary to close the woods until heavy rains fall, it was said Tuesday.

Mrs. William G. Slate, better known as Tillie Baldwin, famous horsewoman and now manager of the Fred Stone ranch, has become a self-appointed fire warden as the result of several minor blazes on this property. Sunday an aviator who landed on the property and carelessly tossed a burning match into the brush was given a verbal spanking by Mrs. Slate and with his woman passenger was initiated into the task of fighting brush fires as the three attempted to control the resulting blaze until aid arrived.

This brush fire business is getting past the joke stage for Mrs. Slate, for no sooner did the volunteers and impressed fire fighters succeed in quenching this blaze, when another started further to the east near a section in which 20 horses were grazing. Mrs. Slate's first thought was for the horses and after some lively work she succeeded in rounding them up and transferring the lot to the stable near the Boston Post road. She then again transferred her attention to fire-fighting.

Monday morning while "doing her dishes" she discovered still another brush fire in the woods a short distance from the house. This time she summoned the fire brigade and about 40 hands from the Flanders mills. The fire was extinguished after an hour and a half of hard labor on the part of the fire fighters.

STOECKEL DENIES RETURN OF MOTOR OPERATOR'S LICENSE

By a decision made by Motor Vehicle Commissioner Robbins B. Stoecke, he has refused to reinstate or return the operator's license of Miss M. Evelyn Whitehead of this city upon whose application for return of the license a hearing was held here last week before Inspector Philip Dennew. The motor vehicle commissioner makes the following comment in the case:

"After reviewing the testimony taken in the case of Miss M. Evelyn Whitehead, 8 Rogers avenue, Norwich, Conn., we do not care to return her license as we feel the accident was caused by her carelessness."

Miss Whitehead was the driver of a machine which figured in a fatal accident on Aug. 11 at the corner of Park and Main streets. In the finding by Coroner E. G. McKay she was exonerated of criminal negligence and when she was presented in the city court on a reckless driving charge, the case was dismissed there. At the hearing before the automobile inspector City Attorney Charles W. Cassidy opposed the return of the license on the ground that the fatal accident was due to carelessness on the part of the driver.

RE-APPOINTS JACKEL FOR NORWICH HARBOR MASTER

Governor John H. Trumbull has reappointed Herman Jackel of 38 Hobart avenue, as harbor master of the port of Norwich for three years beginning August 2nd. Mr. Jackel has filled this office with faithful performance since 1912.

He is well known in Norwich, being a member of the B. P. O. E., No. 430 and Foresters of America No. 63. He is deeply interested in steamboating and has helped bring different boat lines to Norwich and hopes that the new 18 foot channel will be a great benefit to the people of Norwich.

The deputy harbor master of Norwich is Lucius Wilcox.

In the city court Wednesday morning Charles Gables, 25, of Waterford, was presented on a charge of driving a car equipped with improper markers. The case was continued until this (Thursday) morning. He is charged with driving a machine which carried numbers issued for another make of machine.

Auto-Gyro Plane Over City

An airplane, believed to be the auto-gyro plane which was at Hartford Tuesday, was reported passing over this city about 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, flying low and noticeable for its short wings and the great amount of noise coming from its engine. It is designed to land or take off almost vertically.

JAPANESE BEETLES WERE THICK IN WILLIMANTIC

The Japanese beetle advanced further over Connecticut this summer and was found in five widely-scattered towns where it was not known before, it is revealed in the report of J. Peter Johnson, deputy of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment station in charge of the Japanese beetle inspection and quarantine. Danbury, Enfield, Meriden, Terryville and Groton were found infested and traps were placed to catch the pest. Branford, lying just across the line from the generally infested territory of the state, was also found to be infested this summer for the first time.

In Hartford, New London and Willimantic, which were comparatively recently attacked, the pest was thicker than in any previous year, the report shows. Hartford has the heaviest infestation outside the generally infested area on Long Island sound; more than 3,000 beetles were caught in and near traps placed in Bushnell park and other locations, whereas last year only 863 were found.

BRIDGE CLUB OBSERVES ANNIVERSARY WITH DINNER

Lerou, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Cary, Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Sudlow, Mr and Mrs. E. H. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Church, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Thompson, Dr. and Mrs. C. A. Spear, Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Ingalls, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Comstock.

"Church Night" Programme

There will be a "Church Night" programme at the First Baptist church Friday night. It is in charge of the officers and teachers of the Sunday school this month and will take the form of a rally for the school. The boys who went this past summer to camps will give three minute reports and a report on Ocean Park school of methods will be given by Miss Ruth Hopkins. Pictures of Camp Rainbow and the Storrs summer school will be shown on the screen. Refreshments will be served by Mrs. Willey's class. The boys and girls are invited to come to the church at 6:30 and the programme proper will begin at 7:30. This gathering will take the place this week of the regular Thursday night service of the church.

MRS. A. P. MITCHELL IN N. Y. HOSTESS AT QUILT EXHIBIT

Mrs. Alice Palmer Mitchell of Palmertown, is hostess at the quilting bee beginning in New York Tuesday as the feature of the exposition of the Women's Arts and Crafts Industries, which will be in progress until Oct. 11.

An old fashioned quilting frame has been set up, complete with quilt cover and stamped design. The entrants in the quilting contest are to demonstrate their skill by working an hour, at the end of which time the quilter's name will be placed on the work for judging Oct. 11, the last day of the quilting bee.

Mrs. Ruth E. Finley, noted authority on quilts and author of the standard work on the subject in America, Patchwork Quilts and the Women Who Made Them, will judge the work of the quilters.

Mrs. Mitchell is a skilled quilter. When she was 25 years of age she prepared the first quilt to be successfully manufactured by machinery, the process having been worked out by her brother.

She is now 85. She takes great interest in modern quilt making naturally since her nephew is president of Palmer Bros., manufacturers of quilts and comfortables. She does, however, feel that efficient as machines are they can never entirely supplant hand work.

Mrs. Mitchell is accompanied to New York by Miss Katherine Fraser, an expert on velvet comfortables at the Washington street plant, New London, of Palmer Bros. They will be in New York during the entire quilting bee.

NOT PLANNING BAN ON TWO-WHEEL BRAKES

A report that the state department of motor vehicles is contemplating barring cars with two-wheel brakes from the highways has been denied by Robbins B. Stoeckel, commissioner of motor vehicles. "The news that we are planning to ban two wheel brakes comes as a distinct surprise to me," said Mr. Stoeckel. "I am at a loss to discover where such a rumor started, but we have had several letters now from persons who have heard this story, which is apparently receiving considerable circulation.

"The department is not planning to depart from its present policy of insisting that adequate breaks be installed on every car, but we have no plan whatever to ban two wheel brakes."

LEWIS LEADS OFF IN WEST SIDE PINOCHLE

Lewis started off in the lead Wednesday night when the West Side Pinochle club opened its season of weekly play. He had a lead of 385 over McNaught who was second high for the evening on the following scores:

Lewis, 7370; McNaught, 6985; Shuler, 6975; J. Parker, 6915; J. Jordan 6675; Bailey, 6620; Pettis, 6555; Ellsworth, 6410; A. Jordan, 6310; Boynton, 6245; Peckham, 6175; Underwood, 6105.

EXPECTING DROP NOW IN INFANTILE PARALYSIS

Research by the state department of health indicates that the peak of infantile paralysis, or "poliomyelitis" as the department prefers to call it, is reached during August and September, and drawing its conclusions from the records of past outbreaks, the department believes that fewer cases may be expected from now on. The weekly health bulletin of the department this week is devoted to a study of this disease.

A study of the records of the department since 1915 discloses that, based on the number of cases reported in previous years, there is no undue prevalence of infantile paralysis in the state at this time. The bulletin explains that special attention has been drawn to the situation at this time owing to the fact that of the 40 cases reported this year, 12 have been in Middletown.

"The term 'infantile paralysis' is not accurately descriptive of the disease," says the bulletin. "It is better to use the term poliomyelitis. Of the 40 cases reported this year, seven are of persons more than 20 years of age and ten between ten and 20 years old. The term "infantile paralysis" does not seem appropriate to describe a disease that is not confined to infancy but also effects people in the older age groups.

"The early symptoms of poliomyelitis are not much different from symptoms of other diseases common among children. The best thing to do in case of suspicious symptoms is to put the child to bed and call a physician. Occasionally the symptoms that usually occur early may not be observed so that the first sign of illness that is noticed may be paralysis.

"The disease is spread from person to person by the discharges from the nose and mouth just as in diphtheria. However, as the large majority of the population are naturally immune most persons do not become sick. It is the occasional susceptible person that becomes ill when he is sneezed at and sprayed by someone who is carrying the virus of the disease.

"When the disease is present in a community the best preventive is to avoid all crowds and groups of people."

A leaflet on infantile paralysis can be obtained from all health officers or will be sent to anyone who writes to the state department of health here.

COLLEGE LECTURER TELLS OF CHILDREN QUADRUPEDING

Children Running on All Fours is the title of an important study soon to be published by Ales Hrdlicka, the noted anthropologist, who was the convocation speaker at Connecticut college at New London Tuesday afternoon.

Dr. Hrdlicka's lecture was the first public presentation of the outline of his findings based on the examination of a large number of cases of children who behave a good deal more like animals than the normal child is supposed to do. Running on all fours, habitually and with animal-like speed; seizing objects with the teeth rather than with the hands; and remarkable habits of climbing monkey-fashion; all these and many other infant acts reminiscent of our evolutionary development from lower animal origins were described by the lecturer, largely by quotation from letters he had received from the mothers of the children investigated.

Dr. Hrdlicka, who may be addressed as the curator of the division of physical anthropology, Smithsonian institution, Washington, D. C., is eager to receive further data related to his investigations, and he asked especially that mothers who observe any such animal-like manifestations in their babies send him an accurate and circumstantial account thereof.

Face Affected With Pimples and Blackheads. Cuticura Healed.

"My skin trouble started five years ago. It was caused by oil at my work. My face was affected with pimples and blackheads. The pimples were red and hard, and some were large and some were small. The irritation caused me to scratch them and when I did they left marks on my face. It was hard for me to rest or sleep.

"I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. I purchased more and in one month my face was healed." (Signed) James Bosco, 131 Julian St., Providence, R. I., Feb. 25, 1930.

BRAZILIAN INSURGENTS SWEEPING NORTHWARD TO COMBAT FEDERAL FORCES

In the Southern States Thousands of Volunteers Continue to Join the Rebel Colors—Chieftains of the Revolt Assert That 100,000 Men Already Have Been Mobilized—Battle Between the Conflicting Forces Is Imminent in the Vicinity of Castro—In the North the Rebels Hold the City of Pernambuco and Are Reported Marching Through the State of Alagcas

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Oct. 9.—(AP)—Soldiers of the Brazilian revolution were reported sweeping northward tonight toward the port of Sao Paulo, with the prospect that they were near a battle with the federal troops of President Washington Luis.

Dispatches from revolutionary sources indicated that the conflict would be in the vicinity of Castro, a town in the state of Parana about 75 miles from Sao Paulo.

While rebel forces, which marched up from Rio Grande Do Sul and Santa Catharina, already are near Castro, under command of General Miguel Costa, reinforcements left Santa Ana Do Livramento to join them. The new unit comprises the fifth artillery and seventh cavalry, a force of reserves, and a detachment of 800 volunteers.

Meanwhile, in the southern states which gave birth to the revolt, thousands of volunteers continued to join the rebel colors—some of them civilians, some state police and some soldiers of the regular army. Many of the latter are commanded by their officers, although in some cases the commissioned ranks refused to fall in with the movement and were permitted to go to neutral territory.

Chieftains of the revolt assert that 100,000 men already have been mobilized, with 30,000 marching toward the Uruguay river for a union with the main body and onward toward the capital district in the north.

La Nacion's correspondent here received a report today which, if verified, would mean a severe blow to the federal government. This said that revolutionaries had seized the railway junction at Lorena, a city in Sao Paulo midway between the city of the latter name and Rio De Janeiro. Its capture would cut contact between the capital and city which is the first goal of the rebels, destroying one hope of the federal government to effect joint action between the republic's two largest cities.

In the north, Captain Juarez Tabora commands a rebel army which faces an attack by federal forces, under General Santa Cruz, which will operate out of Bahia. Tabora's Army, composed of Pernambuco insurgents and recruits from Parahyba, is reported marching through the small state of Alagoas, which was taken over, to meet Santa Cruz's troops.

BRAZILIAN FEDERAL TROOPS CONCENTRATING FOR BATTLE

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 9.—(AP)—The Brazilian federal government, faced by revolt in practically all directions from the neighboring cities of Rio De Janeiro and Sao Paulo, marshaled its forces today for a conflict with the oncoming rebels in the state of Parana, which borders on Sao Paulo.

General Costa, of the loyal troops, is preparing for an engagement with a revolutionary force commanded by a rebel chieftain of the same name, General Miguel Costa. The federal General Costa is basing his operations from Florianopolis, state of Santa Catharina, and extending his lines into Parana from there. His chief offensive arm is five regiments of cavalry, containing 500 men each.

His use of Florianopolis constitutes an important strategic move, for that city lies between Rio Grande Do Sul, where the revolt began last week, and the revolutionary contingents now on the march in Santa Catharina and Parana. Thus two important rebel strongholds are divided along the coastline.

Meanwhile the government reports some success in regions other than southward. Federal airplanes were reported to have bombed Bello Horizonte again today, with the rebels there said to be about to surrender. Bello Horizonte is the capital of Minas Geraes.

In the north the rebels hold the city of Pernambuco and are reported marching through the state of Alagoas, but General Santa Cruz has been ordered to establish a federal base of operations at Bahia and operate against the insurrectionists in the upper states. The government also hopes to recapture the states of Rio Grande Do Norte and Parahyba, which are north of Pernambuco.

Another northern state, Amazonas, was reported on the side of the government, with the legislative assembly voting fealty to President Luis. Amazonas occupies a large area divided by the Amazon river in the extreme northwest of the country.

Far to the northeast, the city of Para (or Belem) was reported to have been the scene of a battle, with warships and loyal police firing upon soldiers who had revolted.

The government hopes to fight part of this civil war in the air and already has made inquiries in the United States regarding the purchase of the latest type bombing planes

In both Rio De Janeiro and Sao Paulo price scales have been set for food, to prevent profiteering, but there is said to be no danger of a shortage.

PARENTS ARE BORROWING FROM CHILDREN'S BANKS

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—(AP)—The old American custom of "borrowing" from the children's banks has returned to vogue, the savings bank division of the American Bankers' association says in its annual report.

"There can be scarcely any doubt," says the report, made public today, "of the necessity on the part of parents of dipping into the savings of children. Many banks, in forwarding their statement of results, have said deposits were unsatisfactory because of the extent of unemployment."

The report showed that although the total amount deposited by children in school banks, in the year ended last June, was almost half a million dollars greater than last year, the net savings from the year's deposits were $2,849,400 less than the net savings at the close of school in 1929.

Last year 4,597,731 pupils made total deposits of $29,113,060 and saved a net of $7,690,530.

REBELS IN NORTHERN CHINA IN FULL RETREAT

NANKING, Oct. 9.—(AP)—President Chiang Kai-Shek arrived today from Honan province battlefields and said his troops had hurled northern alliance rebels in full retreat from Chengchow toward the Yellow river. Their only refuge, he said, was the mountains of southern Shansi.

The bitter winter season, the famous generalissimo asserted, would "seal their doom as a military force," and peace was near.

He gave a hint of the "silver bullet" policy of Chinese warfare, whereby opposing forces are brought or absorbed into ranks of their adversaries. The offer the nationalist government made Aug. 25 to incorporate rebels into its armies still held good, he said, but rebellion leaders, Feng Yu-Hsiang and Yen Hsi-Shan, would be held responsible for their "arch crimes."

BRUSSELS, Oct. 9.—(AP)—A breach 150 feet wide in one of the dykes along the River Nethe caused a dangerous flood and inundated houses in several townships around Lierre, near Antwerp, today.

Local authorities have appealed to the government for help. The highest tide of the year is due late in the night.

Recent persistent rains, following a gale yesterday, have joined with high tides to swell the waters of the river.

SUBPOENA TO BE ISSUED FOR JUDGE AMEDEO A. BERTINI

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—(AP)—Special Prosecutor Todd announced today that in view of the refusal of General Sessions Judge Amedeo A. Bertini to appear voluntarily before an extraordinary grand jury investigating the judiciary, a subpoena had been issued requiring his attendance tomorrow.

Judge Bertini refused to see newspapermen all day, but the Evening World printed a story that he was preparing to resign under threat of a possible special session of the senate to consider removing him.

It was because he was informed that Judge Bertini "has declined to testify" before the grand jury that Governor Roosevelt yesterday requested Attorney General Ward to send him the records of the grand jury concerning Judge Bertini for possible consideration by the state senate.

Judge Bertini abruptly adjourned his court about 1 p. m., today, instead of sitting until 4 o'clock, as usual. The Evening World said he wished to consult his attorney on the question of resigning.

Fed. Govt. Is Pushing Work On Buildings

Plans For the Calender Year Call For 147 Public Buildings

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—(AP)—The treasury announced today that 147 public buildings would be finished, put under process of construction or contracted for during this calendar year.

Answering an unnamed congressional critic, Assistant Secretary Heath said 21 buildings had been completed since Jan. 1st, 77 more were under construction, and 49 additional ones would be contracted for or on the market for bids by the end of December. Those now under construction will cost $100,000,000, he said.

The congressional critic had expressed belief that the government was not pushing the expanded building program to the extent of its ability.

The treasury explained that last January it had $40,000,000 worth of public buildings under contract and after congress approved an enlarged program and provided funds for pushing the work it had let 66 additional contracts.

The original public building program called for $350,000,000 of construction but congress increased this to $568,000,000, to be spent in ten years. At the same time, congress increased the yearly expenditure from $35,000,000 to $50,000,000 and made the provision retroactive, enabling the treasury to spend $45,000,000 this year. The building program started in 1928 was expected to be spread over a ten-year period.

Treasury officials expressed the opinion that about $40,000,000 of the total contracted for this year would be paid to labor for constructing the buildings and fabricating the materials which go into the structures.

The cost of the buildings for which the 66 contracts have been let this year was placed at $43,000,000 and the additional contracts will add $30,000,000 before the end of the year, and with those contracted for before last Jan. 1 will total well above $100,000,000.

TO DRIVE RACKETEERS FROM THE A. F. OF L.

BOSTON, Oct. 9—(AP)—President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, in a speech before the federation's annual convention today pledged himself to do all in his power to drive labor racketeers from his organization.

"If there is brought to my attention the racketeer moving under the garb of trades unionism, and I can place my hands upon him with convicting evidence, I will drive him from this movement if I can," President Green said. "And I know the brave men and women associated with me who try to place this movement upon a plane of honesty will join with me in that noble effort."

Green's declaration came after Rev. Fr. J. W. McGuire, president of St. Viator college, Illinois, had warned the convention that the work of "dishonest and grafting" labor leaders was being used to discredit organized labor.

Instances in which he had taken steps against racketeers in Chicago and New York were cited by President Green, who said, "I have been conscious of these invasions of our sacred precincts. I know that men and women have exploited us, as they have others, but so far as we are able, x x x we will drive from our midst every racketeer that we know of."

Cannon added that he was strongly inclined to issue a "clear, full sweeping statement" at the present time in denial of the complaints but that the case was not one to be "tried in the newspapers."

The charges have not been made public but are understood to include the bishop's political and stock market activities as well as other accusations. Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, with whom the charges were filed, is expected to appoint a committee of 12 ministers to investigate the complaints.

He referred to an illustration which purports to show the effects of alcohol on leather and asking the question, "If alcohol does this to leather what will it do to the human system?" Another illustration shows the alleged stunting effect on growth.

OFFICERS ELECTED BY THE AMERICAN LEGION

BOSTON, Oct. 9—(AP)—The 1930 national convention of the American Legion came to a close here today. A seven-hour session during which national officers were elected, important resolutions adopted, and committee reports accepted closed one of the most successful conventions in the history of the Legion.

Ralph T. (Dike) O'Neil of Topeka, Kan., was elected the next national commander over Colonel J. Munroe Johnson of Marion, S. C. National vice commanders chosen were Harry B. Henderson, Jr., Cheyenne, Wyo., Best S. Hyland, Rutland, Vt., Neal Williams, Excelsior Springs Mo. Roland B. Howell, Thibodeaux, La., James A. Duff, Martinsburg, W. Va. Rev. Joseph Barnett of Oshkosh, Wis., was named chaplain.

The Legion again defeated what many delegates charged was an attempt to drag it into politics by rejecting a proposal for the immediate payment of 80 per cent of the face value of adjusted compensation certificates. Proponents of the measure claimed it would be a great aid in relieving the hardships of veterans who are unemployed but the opponents saw in it a slap at the republican administration which sponsored the present program of compensation.

A move to bring the prohibition question before the assembly also met with defeat when Commander O. L. Bodenhamer ruled it was out of order.

AMERICAN FISHING SCHOONER WINS RACE

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Oct. 9—(AP)—The schooner Gertrude L. Thebaud, pride of the Gloucester fishing fleet today defeated the famous Lunenburg, N. S., schooner, Blue Nose on the opening contest of a series of three races which will be sailed off this old fishing port. Thebaud now needs only one more victory to win the Sir Thomas Lipton international fishermen's challenge trophy and the purse which goes with it.

Captain Ben Pine, Thebaud's veteran skipper, drove his charge across the finish line 15 and 1-2 minutes ahead of Captain Angus Walters and the big Lunenburg schooner. Thebaud'stime for the 37 5-8 mile course, twice around an eighteen mile triangle and a mile and a five-eighths up the harbor, was five hours, 19 minutes and 40 seconds. It was not remarkably good time, but entirely satisfactory for the conditions prevailing, a 15-18 mile wind and a long ground swell rolled in by the strong easterly of the past few days.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9—(AP)—President Hoover's law enforcement commission got down to business today in secret session on the task of formulating its prohibition report, but Chairman Wickersham carefully guarded the nature of the first discussions on this controversial subject.

STOCKS AT LEVEL REACHED IN SELLING PANIC LAST NOV.

Failure of Prince & Whitely Was a Great Shock to the Market—U. S. Steel Common and American Telephone Touched Lower Levels Than Last Year—Huge Wave of Selling Was Conducted Without Any Sign of Demoralization On the Floor of the Exchange—Prince & Whitely's Attorneys Say That Customers and Creditors May Receive Every Dollar

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—(AP)—Insolvency of a Wall street brokerage firm that had been meeting its obligations since the days of Commodore Vanderbilt and Jay Gould was a severe shock to an invalid stock market today.

Share prices, already sinking rapidly when the suspension of Prince & Whitely was announced from the rostrum of the stock exchange at 12:30 p. m., plunged under a huge wave of selling, and such issues as U. S. Steel common and American Telephone touched lower levels than were reached in the selling panic of last November. Wall street kept its nerve, however, and there was no sign of demoralization on the floor of the exchange, even though the financial community had been under the strain of shrinking share prices for a month. Brokers stated that conditions obviously had been greatly stabilized since last autumn, and that a huge volume of stock had passed to strong hands controlled by cool heads.

Although such a prominent firm as Prince & Whitely has not failed in years, and announcement of its insolvency was highly unsettling to speculative sentiment, the firm's attorneys stated that its customers and creditors may receive every dollar. In the absence of J. Mitchell Hoyt, senior partner of the firm, other partners declined to comment, but the attorneys said the firm's difficulties appeared to be temporary.

Share prices recorded the sharpest declines since the break of Aug. 8, which was in response to news of the seriousness of the drought in the farm states. The day's losses in many important stocks ranged from $4 to $8 a share, with a few lightly traded high-priced issues tumbling $10 to $43 a share. The total turnover of 5,050,800 shares was the largest since June 18. The market rallied substantially for a time in the last hour, but again turned downward, and closing quotations were close to the day's lowest.

Eugene L. Garey, of Garey, Crowley & Beatty, counsel for Prince & Whitely, said its difficulties appeared to have grown out of efforts to support certain stocks to protect its customers. Several stocks with which the firm has been identified have shrunk rapidly in market values. Although the brokerage firm is entirely independent from companies represented by these stocks, its suspension caused further heavy selling of them.

Prince & Whitely Trading, a $25,000,000 investment trust organized about a year ago, dropped from $7.50 a share on the curb market, to 50 cents, then rallied to close at $4. The preferred tumbled to $14 a share, and closed at $20, a net loss of nearly $15. The latest statement by this trust, however, indicated that it was one of the few to show increased market value of assets between last September and last June.

Mr. Hoyt was a director and member of the executive committee of National Dairy Products Corp., holding company for the Sheffield Farms Co., and others, and National Dairy stock tumbled $4.62 to $40.12, about $22 below the year's high. Mr. Hoyt holds the same positions with Kelvinator Corp., stock of which dropped $1.87 to $7.62, contrasted to the year's high of $26.62. Both these corporations have reported increased earnings this year. Prince & Whitely was also identified with Atlas Stores, Hahn Department Stores, and Brockway Motor. These shares lost about $3 to $5.

While not among the largest of Wall street's investment banking houses, Prince & Whitely was one of the largest commission houses, maintaining offices in Chicago, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Washington, Boston, Akron, and Reading, Pa., and having correspondents in leading cities throughout the United States and Europe. Its foreign correspondents alone number 61. It maintained private telegraph and telephone wires over a large portion of the country, as well as special high-speed cable service with London.

Prince & Whitely was formed in 1878, but traces its history back to the formation of Gray, Prince & Co., in 1868. Early partners were William R. Travers and Addison Cammack, prominent figures in wild stock market battles of those days. In 1878, however, the company did a total business for the year of only 183,000 shares, indicating the small scale of operations of those days.

Its failure came only ten days after that of J. A. Sisto & Co., which had been identified with several issues traded largely on the curb market. It was the fifth failure of a stock exchange member since the crash of last autumn. The first three were regarded as of minor importance. In the past five years, there have been only eight casualties among the members of the exchange.

SEC'Y MELLON EXPLAINS TREASURY TRANSACTIONS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—(AP)—Secretary Mellon said today the criticism of treasury financing voiced last night by Representative Byrns, democrat, Tennessee, was due to a "complete misunderstanding of the situation."

Byrns, ranking democrat on the house appropriations committee, charged that the administration was "attempting to create a fictitious surplus" in the treasury "by withdrawing from the sinking fund sums legally required for the reduction of public debt."

Mellon said the accusation was "rather surprising in so experienced and intelligent a member of the house of representatives who would hardly at any time other than the month preceding elections display such a convenient ignorance of treasury financing."

Explaining the charge apparently was based on the fact that only $65,000,000 was applied to debt retirement from the sinking fund during the first quarter of the present fiscal year as compared with $286,846,000 for the same period last year, Mellon explained that during the first quarter last year, government bonds and treasury notes were selling at a discount and it was "good business" to retire them.

"During the first three months of the present fiscal year," he added, "United States government bonds and treasury notes have sold consistently at a premium. By applying the sinking fund appropriation to the retirement of the treasury notes which have been called on March 15 next and which will be retired at par, the treasury avoids the payment of a premium. Accordingly, the sinking fund purchases during the first quarter of this fiscal year has been limited to the minimum amount made advisable by the established program of financing."

DR. GUILD NAMED HEAD OF SCHOOL COMMITTEE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 9.—The organization of the Windham town school committee for the ensuing fiscal year, following the elections last Monday, has been completed with Dr. Frank E. Guild and Superintendent of Schools Egbert A. Case was re-elected chairman and secretary, respectively. The two new committeemen on the board are Leslie F. Hartson, republican, and James F. Twomey, democrat. Raymond A. Parker, r., and William B. Sweeney, d., and Dr. Guild were re-elected last Monday for four year terms and Stanley J. Sumner, r., was re-elected for the two year term.

The school committee, as a body, expressed the opinion that the school budget of $204,000 to be asked for at the town meeting Friday night, is absolutely necessary to conduct the school affairs during the year. It is indicated that the budget for the following year will be larger as at present there are 716 students enrolled at the high school, 331 of them tuition pupils and 385 local pupils. This registration shows a gain of 78 over last year and brings into use the full capacity of the school.

J. B. Fullerton Heads Drive

The selection of Captain James B. Fullerton to head the hospital campaign for a $500,000 new hospital fund was announced today. The campaign will be carried on in Windham and some 20 surrounding towns included in this city's normal hospitilization area. Chairman Fullerton is to supervise the organization of committees and teams of men and women in these various towns. It is planned to raise the money through a dignified campaign, lifting it above the category of "glorified" begging and without the house-to-house canvass. In planning to secure the funds for the new hospital by direct appeal to the human side of the project at hand, card parties, dances and other benefit affairs will not be included in the process. The list of prospective subscribers is now being prepared at the campaign headquarters in the chamber of commerce building and when the work is completed the workers will have an opportunity to select their prospects, none of whom will be rated to give any definite sum.

TOWN BUDGET TO BE ADOPTED THIS EVENING

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 9.—At the adjourned annual town meeting to be held in the town hall Friday evening, attention will be focused on the adoption of the budget for the year. The 1930-'31 budget, as drawn up by the old board of selectmen amounts to $404,860, an increase of $1,360 over last year. Of the total, $204,000 is represented in the appropriation asked for the schools, that amount being a slight increase over last year.

The electors will also receive the reports of the various town officers and will act on the annual appropriations as follows: Willimantic welfare bureau, $960; St. Joseph's hospital, $950, and Windham Center library, $100.

Owing to the fact that the final report of the auditors now working on the town books will not be available until the completion of the audit after November 15, there was a movement on foot here today to postpone action on the annual town budget until the exact condition of the town's finances is known. Friends of the new republican administration indicated that a budget adopted prior to the auditors report may prove to be far from an accurate estimate of the expenses for the ensuing year and that the administration cannot begin operation on the "right foot" unless true conditions are known to it. The annual town meeting may not be adjourned over one week at a time and advocates of the postponement suggest a series of such adjournments until the proper time.

The students of the Willimantic state trade school have been given the use of a fine athletic field on the banks of the Willimantic river at The Ridges, through the courtesy of Director O. R. The meet will be staged from 3 to 6 o'clock during which time the school will be closed.

The work of Principal George P. Phenix, second principal of the Willimantic State Normal school, who died in Hampton, Va., recently, was reviewed by Principal George H. Shafer at a special assembly of the students Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Phenix left here in 1904 and at the time of his death was president of Hampton institute. At three o'clock, the hour of the funeral services for Dr. Phenix, the school closed for the remainder of the day out of respect to the deceased.

Smith Sawmill Fire

All are sympathizing with Frank Smith on the loss of his sawmill at Slab City, which mill was entirely destroyed by fire Tuesday night. The fire was the result of a hot box which was found smoking during the afternoon, and it was supposed the fire was put out, but evidently a little fire was left and kept smouldering until it burst forth at a time when no one was there to detect it. The fire department from Baltic, with a large number of helpers, reached the place as soon as they could be notified, but it was too late to save the building or any of the valuable machinery therein. However, splendid work was done, in that the pumper was connected with the pond at once, thus saving the adjoining buildings and keeping the fire from spreading to the woods adjacent. Unless Mr. Smith sees fit to rebuild and replace the machinery destroyed, it will mean a decided loss to the community.

The fire smouldered and burned until Sunday when it was necessary to turn on a stream of water from the hydrant put in that section of Bozrah by the Congdon, Briggs, Kilroy and Bentley families for such protection. Eleven hundred feet of hose was laid and John Lamphere was on duty all day putting out all the smouldering and burning embers.

IRRIGATE WITHERING CORN FROM BROKEN WATER MAIN

ITHACA, N. Y. (AP)—Taking advantage of a literal "break" nine Cornell university graduate agricultural students saved a valuable experimental corn field during the drought.

The corn was fast withering under a pitiless sun, when a 14-inch water main nearby was accidentally broken. The escaping water formed a small lake and seeped toward the corn field.

The students discovered it, and all of them including two women, hastily constructed a dam. From there they led the water to the field and ran lateral ditches through the rows, as is done in regular irrigation projects. The corn field was saved.

Mrs. C. E. Cook, of Southwest Harbor, Me., recently had an old barn taken down at the rear of her house. The work was done by Jasper Hutchings. In the World war Hutchins was on the first navy ship that was torpedoed and with a few companions drifted in a small boat for some time before being rescued. During the work of demolishing the barn he came upon a newspaper of 1917, in which was printed the story of the disaster, with Hutchins's name in the list of rescued.

PUTMAN REPUBLICANS FAIL TO FILL TICKET AT PARTY CAUCUS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 9—In the minds of outspoken members of the local G. O. P. organization "republican politics are in a sad state of affairs at present." This was expressed tonight at the republican legislative caucus by Archibald Macdonald, Jr., former chairman of the town committee, and Irving H. Miron, present head of the committee.

Shortly after the opening of the caucus Leon T. Wilson was named as one candidate for representative by acclamation. For some unexplained reason, there was no nomination forthcoming for second representative. Judge M. H. Geissler, moderator, called for names of prospective candidates and, after a period of silence, chairman Miron addressed the chair and moved that the town committee be empowered to fill the vacancy. Attorney Macdonald, upon being recognized, said that he has never seen such a situation in any of his past experiences and moved that the committee make an effort to fill the ticket at the meeting. Mr. Miron promptly withdrew his motion and made a canvass of the voters present in an attempt to prevail upon someone to accept the nomination.

After a ten-minute recess Representative William Pechie consented to run and his name was immediately offered, his nomination being by acclamation. Judge Henry N. Benoit was unanimously nominated to succeed himself as judge of probate.

Before the adjournment of the caucus, Judge Geissler informed the voters that he had never seen a situation quite like the existing one. He said that of more than 1,000 names on the republican list it is a sad thing when the party is unable to draw canddates for office without hesitation. The sensational democratic victory of Monday, Judge Geissler said, does not mean, in any sense, that the democrats are always to remain in power but it does mean that if further republican successes are to be achieved, the morale of the party and its spirit of aggressiveness must be kept on a high plane.

58-YEAR-OLD HONEY STILL GOOD TO EAT

WASHINGTON (AP)—The department of agriculture has had a hive of white clover honey for 58 years, and it is still good to eat.

Once almost colorless, it now resembles black-strap molasses, and its original taste has changed until it is hard to distinguish from buckwheat honey.

The department plans to age it indefinitely, or until it is no longer fit for consumption, to note chemical changes.

DANIELSON

G. O. P. NAMES WILLIAMS AND HUNTER AS REPRESENTATIVES

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 9.—A sparsely attended republican caucus in the town hall this evening renominated, without opposition, Arthur W. Williams of Danielson and William S. Hunter of Goodyear as their candidates for representatives in the coming state election. Both nominees have served two terms as members of the legislature. Judge Sabin S. Russell was nominated to succeed himself in the probate court here. Charles S. Francis was chairman of the caucus and Mrs. Ida Armington clerk.

JUNIOR FARMERS START TOUR OF INSPECTION

DANIELSON, Oct. 9.—There was an exodus this morning from this section of the Young Farmers' club of Brooklyn, bound on a tour of farms in Middlesex county. Today's trip was the annual one of the sort and largely intended to co-relate much of the farm management work that has been discussed and considered in meetings of the organization and tried out in actual practice in the field.

County Agent Raymond E. Wing of Putnam and Paul L. Putnam, assistant farm management demonstrator of the extension service at the Connecticut Agricultural college, were in charge of the trip.

Those planning to make the trip assembled at Grange hall in Brooklyn at 9:30 this morning.

Their schedule called for them to visit four fine farms at various places in Middlesex county. These farms are owned by C. M. Bacon of Middletown, who has a fine herd of Holsteins, acres of sweet corn for seed, hens, acres of alfalfa and various crops on fields largely worked by modern farm machinery. Another of the farms visited was that of Harold Strickland of Middlefield, where a specialty is made of dairy work. A splendid herd of Guernseys is kept on this farm, where vegetables are raised and poultry is kept in quantity as sidelines.

Another farm visited at Middlefield was that of Julian Thayer's, a dairy place, and then the big poultry plant of Gastler Brothers at Durham came in for attention.

Health Supervisor Economical

In his annual report as health officer of the town, Dr. W. H. Judson points out that Killingly is getting off pretty soft, as to compensation for health officer service, for a town of this size. Killingly is next in population to Windham, largest town in the county, Dr. Judson points out. A town of this size, he writes, usually pays a health officer compensation in the amount of about $1,200 annually. The physician's report goes on to set forth: "Here, however, we pay a small sum to a community nurse to look in at the schools, and on the health officer devolves the question as to the general health of the pupils. For instance if a teacher thinks any pupil is sick they are sent to me to look over, especially if there has been a communicable disease in the home. In this way our town expenses are reduced from $1,800 or more to $600. A health officer's bill, part of which is paid by the borough of Danielson, would be, just for communicable diseases, about $400 per year."

In the town and borough last year there were numerated, Dr. Judson says, 47 cases of German measles, 23 cases of measles, 40 cases of chicken-pox, 8 cases of diphtheria, 14 cases of septic sore throat, 10 of mumps, 12 of pneumonia, 4 (reported) of tuberculosis, 2 of meningitis and a miscellaneous list of cases, including one of cow bite. In all, there were 138 such cases.

Police Search for Silver

Danielson state officers working in conjunction with police of Rhode Island continued their efforts today to locate the remainder of the silver stolen from a ByRolly truck at South Killingly early Monday morning, and to establish if possible the number and identity of the men that took part in the bold holdup.

What progress, if any, the officers were making was not made known. It does appear, though, that the police are well satisfied that there were from five to six men in the holdup party.

The three men arrested as suspects and awaiting a hearing in the town court here next Tuesday have conservatively kept their mouths shut since placed under arrest at Shawomet Beach, R. I., at a cottage, closed for the season, from which $6,500 worth of the stolen silver was recovered. Getting them and part of the silver looted from the truck at the same time and same place is something important, police declare, but it has led to no further developments.

Fall opening Friday and Saturday; all the newest, chic and favorite hats of the season. We invite you. The George Hat Shoppe, Danielson Inn building.—adv.

The annual reports of officers and committees of the town of Killingly, covering the fiscal year ending July 31 last and placed in the hands of citizens of the town during the present week, is a careful, orderly arrangement of facts and figures having to do with the administration of the town for the period mentioned.

Study of these reports will afford the interested citizen much information pertaining to many things having to do with the management of the town's business. Within the pages of the little volume containing the various reports are the answers to various queries that come up from time to time as to what this and that is all about. The printed information will correct various misinterpretations as to what one thing or another cost, who got the money and what they received it for.

The reports have been most carefully prepared, all those reporting evidently seeking to give the citizens as complete as possible a review of the work done and expenditures made.

An intriguing incense now arises over Danielson each evening as the time-honored custom of burning the falling leaves is taken up by persons who like to keep their properties in orderly manner and are bothered over seeing litter about. As to the leaves that are constantly fluttering down about the borough at this time, it may be mentioned that the countryside hereabouts is a flaming vista of beauty just now, a sight worth motoring many miles to see.

Mrs. James Kelley, a former resident of Danielson, was reported today as being dangerously ill at a hospital in Providence, where she underwent a major surgical operation about a week ago.

Though the attendance was disappointing last Tuesday evening, Promoter Louis Peloquin said this afternoon that he will stage another amateur boxing contest at the town hall here on the evening of Oct. 21.

Dipper ducks, which are not so common hereabouts, are reported to be in this territory in considerable numbers this fall. Killing this member of the grebe family is prohibited. There is no open season on them.

No one has stepped forward as yet in behalf of any one of the three men being held in connection with the holdup of a silver-laden truck at South Killingly last Monday morning. Each of the prisoners was held in default of $10,000 bail for a hearing in the town court next Tuesday

A pair of skunks inhabiting the outlet of a surface drain underneath Main street, Davis park, are not too welcome to newcomers to that section. How the animals happened to get into the drain is something of a puzzle, and one that the average person is not going to be so curious about as to intimately investigate.

It now apperas that this and surrounding towns are going to be up against plenty of difficulty in shooing away men who want jail terms as the cold weather season approaches. General unemployment is one reason for this. A case already has developed here in which a man deliberately sought arrest after a vain hunt for work.

Manager George DeForest of the Danielson soccer team of the Eastern Connecticut league said this morning that this game, new to Danielson followers of sports, appears to be catching the public imagination. Under present plans the game will be continued right through the winter season, excepting in unusually bad weather.

Another thing for the taxpayers to think about is getting their tax lists filed by Nov. 1. Assessors are now receiving the first of them, assessments being based on taxable property owned Oct. 1.

Mrs. Ashley P. Mills of the West Side is to leave on Friday to spend several weeks visiting with relatives in Boston and at Concord, N. H.

Danielson has been experiencing for the past two days what old-time weather observers describe as a "dry storm"; that is, it has been threatening rain constantly without a drop of it coming down.

There will be no general observance of Columbus day in Danielson next Monday, but it will be a bank holiday here. The actual anniversary falls on Sunday this year.

Frank M. Bedard, West Side, in his capacity of exalted ruler of Putnam lodge of Elks, and W. W. Wheatley of Broad street, tyler of Putnam lodge, were with a delegation from Putnam that attended the funeral of Ralph Thurston of Putnam at Fall River this afternoon.

Rigging that will be used by painters in doing over the high-reaching spire of the Westfield Congregational church was being put in position today. The church is to be entirely repainted this fall.

Nearly 200 more applications were received yesterday by the registrars from people who wish to be made voters in time for the state election in November. These applicants will have their qualifications for admission as electors examined at stated times between now and election day, their first opportunity being Saturday of this week.

COURT AWARDS LINCOLN $500 IN DAMAGES AGAINST PROVIDENCE MAN

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 9—A plaintiff's verdict to recover damages of $500 was awarded Charles Lincoln of Moosup by a jury in superior court today. Patrick J. Cahir of Providence was defendant in the action which was brought by Lincoln who sought to recover $10,000 damages for injuries he received in an accident on the Moosup-Sterling road on Aug. 15, 1929. The jury was out an hour.

An important witness in the case was State Officer John T. Murphy of Danielson barracks who testified as to the relative positions of the Lincoln and Cahir automobiles as he viewed them when he arrived on the scene of the accident on the Moosup-Sterling road on the afternoon of August 15, 1929. Officer Murphy, a disinterested witness, testified that he was detailed with former State Officer Cyrus C. Chamberlain to investigate the collision, out of which the law suit grew. He told of the gruesome find and pictured with toy automobiles the manner in which the cars collided seriously injuring the plaintiff. Following Officer Murphy's testimony, the defense rested its case and Attorney Keefe of New London began his arguments. Attorney Harry E. Back, counsel for the plaintiff submitted a comprehensive review of the features of the case and pleaded for a decision in favor of his client, whose face has been permanently disfigured from the effects of a severe laceration received when he was gored by a piece of metal of the automobile in which he was a passenger when the accident in question occurred.

Here was found a most attractively decorated table, place cards and all, these little cards revealed another card on which Mrs. Tinsley announced her engagement to Donald B. House of Hartford, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. William House, of this place. Dainty refreshments were served during which the bride-to-be received the cordial good wishes of her friends.

The next meeting of the club will be with Mrs. E. M. M. Mailler, Oct. 20.

All eyes were skyward Tuesday afternoon as a navy dirigible sailed gracefully over Brooklyn.

Water Situation Serious

Brooklyn's water supply is getting to be quite a problem as the following from E. C. Babson, local health officer shows: The water of the town pump in Brooklyn has been tested and the reports that come back are not very encouraging to the people that depend upon this source of supply for their drinking water. The first test this year was made in June and the report showed an unusual quantity of chlorine as chloride, being as high as 59 for the first test, and the test that came back last week of water taken in September, showed 40. The normal chloride for this section is 2.1 and this excess of chloride shows that the well is being contaminated from some source. The figures for nitrates are also high and do not seem to be reduced in the second test of the water. The report from the laboratory is that the water is undesirable for use. The well has been posted by the health officer that the water should not be used for drinking unless boiled, to kill any germs of disease that may be in the water. The well was cleaned out and pumped out after a quantity of chloride lime had been placed in it and allowed to remain for several days, to try and destroy all germs that might be in the well. As the second test, taken six weeks after this cleaning had been done, still shows contamination, the water is still deemed unsafe to use unless boiled. A personal interview with the director of the laboratory brings out the fact that he thinks the tests for several years have shown contamination, now on the increase so that there must be a source of such contamination near the well. Unless this can be found and stopped, it appears as if this well, which is of great use to the townspeople, would have to be given up. It has been suggested by the health officer that a request be made to the state department of health to send one of their men from the engineering department here, have him look the ground over and give his advice in regard to this well, or the location of some other source of supply.

Pipe Smokers Decrease.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Pipe smokers in this country are becoming fewer, government statistics indicate. A preliminary census of manufactures statistics showed a decline of 25.1 per cent last year as compared with the production in 1927, the last preceding census year.

Traces of stone age inhabitants of the New England region are being sought by an exploration party near Lake Winnipesaukee.

PUTNAM

PUTNAM PAUSES TO PAY TRIBUTE TO CHIEF THURSTON

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 9—For the first time since its institution many years ago, the Putnam fire alarm system tolled out its first mournful message, at 2 o'clock this afternoon while the funeral service for Fire Chief Ralph E. Thurston was taking place at his late home on Highland avenue, in Fall River, Mass. Fifty-three strokes were struck at intervals of 10 seconds, each stroke signifying one year of the dead chief's life, which came to an abrupt end Monday evening when he fell a victim of an infection. The tolling of the fire bells throughout the city sent a feeling of sorrow over the community and in every section people on the street paused a moment to pay silent tribute and respect to the memory of a citizen whose passing has been truthfully termed, an irreconcilable one.

Supt. of Fire Alarms Charles T. Thayer prepared arrangements for the city's final respect paid the memory of Chief Thurston today. Standing at the switchboard in the control room at the Central station, Supt. Thayer moved the circuit key intermittently for 8 minutes and 40 seconds, which was the official time required to record the 53 blows. As each stroke rang out, Fireman Edmund Gilbert of the Pumper company assisting the superintendent, drew a line through the successive numbers which were marked on a specially prepared chart.

The funeral of Chief Thurston was attended by city and town officials, representatives of the various fraternal lodges with which he was affiliated and by a representative delegation from the Putnam fire department. The firemen who were in charge of Acting Chief Alphonse Dumas were dressed in full uniform. The bearers were W. E. Moss, Ray Sherman, George Lewis Jr., John H. Dean of Putnam, Mr. Anthony and Mr. Bill of Fall River. From 2 o'clock until 3, all stores and business houses and banks were closed.

The refusal of Alexander Gilman, Putnam business man and Rotary club president, to accept the nomination of the democrats of the 28th senatorial district, for the office of state senator has created another unusual political situation in the district. Mr. Gilman was named by the party at its senatorial convention held in Danielson last Friday. This week he announced that he would not run, thereby upsetting the slate and giving rise to considerable speculation as to who the committee, charged with selecting a candidate, will draft to run in his place. There is a feeling among the district party leaders that Frederick E. Bitgood, retired Danielson business man, who refused the nomination at the convention last week, might be prevailed upon to carry the democratic standard into the senatorial battle which will rage November 4. Other men, prominent in democratic political circles in this part of the county have been suggested as likely candidates to fill the vacancy created by Mr. Gilman's decision not to run. No action as yet has taken place although local democrats were hopeful tonight that steps to complete the ticket would be made at once in order that the campaign may be systematically under way as soon as possible.

It is noted that Charles T. Thayer an official of the S. N. E. Telephone company is operating a company automobile bearing a plate signifying that the operator of the vehicle during three years of continuous driving has not met with a single accident.

Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Woodis of Walnut street announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Helen Estelle Woodis to Valere C. Dumont, son of Mrs. Adelle Dumont of Dorchester, Mass. Miss Woodis is a graduate of Putnam high school and is a member of the clerical staff at the state trade school.

The first card of boxing matches to be staged in this city since the re-organization of the Putnam Boxing club will take place in Ste. Jeans hall on next Thursday evening. Promoter Dan Trudeau announced today.

The 12th annual re-union of the 82nd Division of A. E. F., a World war fighting unit which served overseas and took part in many of the major offensives on the western front, will be held Saturday at the Statler hotel in Boston. "The 82nd," as it is known was comprised of soldiers from New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, many of the states of the south and New England. Among the Putnam service men enrolled in its units were Charles A. Ryan, Selectman Francis X. Vadnais and Anthony Forcier. They plan to be present tomorrow night when their war time buddies gather in an environment decidedly different from that of the shell torn fields of muck and mud in France in 1918.

There were a number of Putnam people present yesterday when the waters of the Atlantic ocean once again split beneath the keel of the U. S. S. Constitution, as she set her sails to the wind in Boston harbor. The launching of the immortal frigate, one time pride of the American navy, was accompanied with fitting ceremony. The ship was refitted by the generosity of the school children of the country whose pennies provided for the overhauling and reconditioning of the wooden battleship which is known throughout the land for its glorious victories on the high seas.

Sergt. A. J. Spencey and Supernumerary Patrolman John Durand were on duty today in the absence of Capt. Dubreuil and Patrolman J. G. Page who were in Fall River, attending the funeral of Fire Chief Ralph E. Thurston.

LYON AND PAINE ARE NOMINATED IN WOODSTOCK

WEST WOODSTOCK, Oct. 9—Republicans of the town of Woodstock in caucus in Lyceum hall here today nominated Clarence Lyon and Irving A. Paine as candidates for representatives. Mr. Paine received the party nomination winning from Leonard H. Healey of South Woodstock by a vote of 95 to 11. The caucus attracted a large number of voters, after it was rumored throughout the various town parishes that plans were being formulated by a group representing the south parish for the undermining of the time honored custom of permitting each parish to send representatives to represent Woodstock in the legislature every eight years. A resolution to end this tradition was overwhelmingly defeated. It was proposed by a group hailing from the south parish or that part of the town known as South Woodstock. Both Mr. Lyon whose nomination was made by acclamation and Mr. Paine represented the town at the 1928 session of the legislature. Other than the appointing of justices of the peace the only other business done at the caucus was the nominating of Robert E. Harris to succeed himself as judge of probate. Charles H. Perrin of North Woodstock was moderator and Robert E. Harris was clerk of the caucus.

BOVINE TUBERCULOSIS WAR PROFITABLE TO MICHIGAN

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP)—Although its purse has been opened wide, Michigan has had a substantial margin of profit in its long fight to conquer bovine tuberculosis. The state and federal governments have spent $5,108,020 in the campaign. Most of it was spent after 1921. In the same period, the state sold more than $12,000,000 worth of disease-free animals to other states.

Farmers have been paid $3,518,020 as indemnity for slaughtering animals during the tuberculosis campaign. The federal government's share was $1,375,000.

Evidence of three distinct American cultures, dating back 3,000 years have been unearthed in southwestern Colorado by a Field museum expedition from Chicago.

SOUTH KILLINGLY'S HOLDUP

The holdup of a truck in South Killingly carrying a valuable load of silver to Providence did not reveal as much at stake as has been repeatedly shown in other highway robberies, but it serves to emphasize the hazard that is involved in such a method of transporting valuable cargoes.

It is quite apparent that those who were engaged in the holdup knew they could expect a sufficiently rich haul to make it worth while. In other words, it was known that this truck was in the habit of carrying valuable loads. Either through confederates or a study of the trucking company's business, those who were ready to rob were informed as to what might be expected and were posted as to where the job could best be done. They had had opportunity to arrange all the details so that everything worked perfectly. The driver was caught in a helpless situation. He had no means of defense. There was no real protection provided for the load of silver, and full advantage of it was taken by those in a desperate mood.

Sending out such valuable cargoes may be done much more often than is known. The position might be taken that it would arouse less suspicion if it was not accompanied by proper safeguards. It might be considered that it would be regarded as an ordinary truckload of freight, and it might to the casual observer, but there were those who knew different. There were those who recognized in it an opportunity to get away with a big haul easily and, as the report shows, the scheme worked perfectly.

Such cases point, not only to the activity of the criminal class and the chances the members of it are willing to take, but it reveals the fact that they put themselves in a position to keep well informed about much which the law-abiding citizen knows nothing about and really has no interest in. When the open transportation of valuables becomes known, it serves as a temptation. It is an inducement to those with criminal inclination. It encourages the criminal to go out and do his best, or worst. There isn't any doubt but what the crowd that held up the truck in South Killingly knew what the truck carried. The fact that the truck was not guarded does not justify the holdup, but it shows the mistake in handling such loads in that way.

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURES

Before the short session of congress, opening in December, there will come the question as to whether the reduction in the income tax which was authorized by the last session of congress at the suggestion of the president that there might be certain relief for the taxpayers at a time when the unemployment situation was developing, can be continued. It was voted only for one year, the conditions of the future to govern what would be done later. The hope was that it could be continued, but it was dependent upon whether the government could do it and avoid a deficit.

Thus there was interest in the report of the government for the first quarter of the fiscal year. By that it has been shown that it was completed with a surplus of about $52,000,000. This was reported by the treasury department, while a statement from the white house showed that, through the retrenchment policy which the president urged upon his official family a yearly saving in expenditures of $68,000,000 is seen.

This report is by no means discouraging, but along with it there should be considered the fact that the three months disclose a revenue decrease of $146,000,000, while the reductions through the sinking fund dropped from $237,000,000 in the corresponding period last year to $65,000,000 the last quarter.

It is to be remembered that there was a direct effect upon the quarter's revenue through the heavy importations which were made during the closing months of the last fiscal year in order to escape the tariff increases. Thus the first quarter may not indicate conclusively what may be expected in the remainder of the year.

On the other hand, the economies in the departments have not all been determined. Outlays have turned upward because of the feeling that the restrictions during the years immediately following the war could be relieved and matters which had been delayed could go ahead. Such increases have followed a natural course and in three years have shown a 15 per cent increase. They were authorized because of conditions but, with a different situation, it is not improbable that curtailments can still be effected.

But it is perfectly evident that there will be no disposition to restore the former income tax if it can be avoided and the administration has displayed its intention of retaining the cut if consistent and sane methods make it possible.

BUS TRANSPORTATION

With the wrecking of an interstate bus in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., causing injuries to 20 persons, there is seen the need of better regulations for such conveyances.

According to reports, the accident was caused when the bus went off the side of the road, broke off a hydrant and crashed into a tree. That is, perhaps, no more than might have been done by a private automobile, but one point which stands out prominently in connection with the accident is that the bus was traveling at the rate of 36 miles an hour, which is three times as fast as the speed limit allowed in that city along the highway where the accident happened. It is natural to infer that had the bus been moving in accord with restrictions the accident would not have happened, nor would it have resulted so seriously.

Busses are large vehicles. They are used on the public highways and they travel at a speed that approximates similar service rendered by railroads. It is a service that is being rendered in the highway and not on a private right of way or on rails. The bus is a powerful vehicle, in many cases equipped with air brakes, and it claims its full share of the road and often much more, when under the guidance of certain drivers.

Thirty-five miles an hour was good speed for accommodation trains on the railroads not so many years ago. Most of them have been put out of business now, but where such has happened the transportation service is being rendered in the highways where traffic is growing heavier every year, and where accidents and fatalities are piling up at a most alarming rate.

The bus is rendering a service that meets the requirements of the public. It is being brought into use more and more each year. It is convenient and flexible, but it is evident that the same distressing things can happen to it as happen to the private automobile where chances are taken, bad judgment is used and the rights of the others and rules of the road are disregarded. The inevitable outcome of such developments is a demand for stricter and better enforced regulations, such as the Elizabeth accident has prompted in New Jersey.

LET COMMISSION SPEAK

With the Wickersham commission in conference, receiving voluminous data regarding prohibition and discussing that subject for several hours, it was a significant statement which was made by the chairman when he declared that if the dry law is unenforceable it should be so stated.

This is not a new view by the chairman. He has expressed it before, and it is known that there are other members of the commission who feel the same way, regardless of their own personal views concerning the dry question. While the commission on law enforcement isn't engaged solely with the consideration of the 18th amendment, it is certain that there is nationwide interest in the conclusion the commission reaches regarding it and the problem of enforcing it.

Having been named for the purpose of giving an unbiased opinion as to what the conditions are and whether the law can be enforced, it is to be expected that the commission will see its way to carry out the view of the chairman. The country is looking for it. It is desired by the drys as well as the wets. Each side may be confident that it is right but, with the commission considering the problem from a position of advantage and serving much the same as a grand jury, the country has a right to expect that it will pass judgment on what it finds.

Enforcement of the type we have been getting isn't what was expected under prohibition. The handicaps, the difficulties and the lack of it, are all apparent. Liquor, or what is called liquor, is flowing in different channels. There is a widespread conviction that the amendment cannot be enforced. The commission, as the result of its study, ought to know, and it is to be hoped those on the commission who favor the attitude of the chairman will be sufficient in number to produce a verdict.

RICHARD H. EDMONDS

Probably there was no more enthusiastic supporter of southern development than Richard H. Edmonds, the founder of the Manufacturers Record, of which he was editor for 45 years. He was thoroughly devoted to his work, recognized the opportunities in the southern states, pointed them out, continued to dwell upon them and to him in a large degree was the persistent advancement due. Certainly he offered the inspiration and provided a leadership that was of inestimable value.

It was inevitable that one who had devoted his life to the advancement of the south should gain and hold a high position in the estimation of the people of those states and, likewise, among those elsewhere, who had an opportunity to note the effectiveness of his endeavors. He was not only instrumental in building up a magnificent publication, but he also surrounded it with an organization which gave assurance to him a long time before his death that the work he had so ably started would be successfully continued. Thus his ambition and aims are not to be restricted to his lifetime. They will go on for the benefit of southern progress and whatever the contribution in that direction, it will will operate to the general good of the nation.

In other ways than through the Manufacturers Record did he labor in behalf of the south. He edited, for a number of years, a yearly volume known as the Bluebook of Southern Progress, which contained a wealth of information concerning activities of all kinds in southern states. His was a different manner than that of some southern champions, a manner that carried conviction and confidence, one that won friends for the south.

BILLY COMES BACK

Things were not going well in the kitchen of the Mattox household. The chief trouble was the peas; they were tough. It was twenty-nine minutes past 6; dinner was due at 6.30, and dinner could not be served until the peas were done.

Marjorie tried them nervously with a fork, then glanced at the clock. It was exactly 6.30. She heard the rustle of a newspaper in the living room and the sound of approaching steps. Her husband poked his head into the kitchen, where no husband's head belongs, and grinned at her inquiringly.

"Dinner will be a couple of minutes late, dear," said Marjorie a bit testily. "The peas are tough."

Jim nodded silently, turned away and started fussing around the dining room table. That did not help matters any, and Marjorie became still more nervous. Finally, flushed and harassed, she was ready to eat at 6.37. During the meal she was silent, brooding on certain thoughts that would not have pleased her husband if he had been aware of them.

What a strain it was to be compelled to have every meal exactly on the dot! Many months before, just after they were married, Jim had had trouble with his stomach. The doctor had impressed upon him the desirability of regular meals. From that unhappy day forward breakfast had to be exactly at 8 and dinner on the very stroke of 6.30. As for luncheon, Jim arrived at the house from the store at 12.26 and expected to be eating in just 240 seconds. His stomach was perfectly all right now, but the habit of eating regularly had persisted.

Marjorie was literally a marvel at getting all the dishes of her meal done at the precise moment when she wanted them, but every cook knows that this is not easy and that there are bound to be occasions when something goes a bit wrong and causes a slight delay. But a man doesn't understand such things. Finally she reached a decision and made an announcement.

"Jim," she said, "you know Martha King has been asking me to come over to Somerset and spend a couple of days with her. She has a new electric sewing machine and wants me to help her with some spring clothes. So if you can get along without me for a couple of days I think I'll go over for the week-end."

"Sure," said Jim agreeably. "Go right ahead. I'll get along all right."

Marjorie washed the dishes with a sort of grim satisfaction. Let Jim eat at restaurants for a couple of days, crowded as they would be at the rush hours, and wait for his meals! Perhaps that would teach him a lesson.

Martha King was glad to see her and she was glad to see Martha. They spent Friday afternoon in much talk and a little sewing. And then Marjorie helped Martha get dinner. Marjorie noted that meals were served at no particular time in the King household, and was frankly envious. Finally when dinner was almost ready Martha sent her to call Fred, Martha's husband.

Marjorie did call Fred, but it turned out that Fred had had a flat tire on the way home from the office and was taking this particular time to change it. They had to wait twenty minutes before they could eat and then things were pretty well ruined.

Fred King always came home for luncheon on Saturday. Marjorie had it ready for him at 1 o'clock the next day, having interrupted her morning's sewing to prepare it. But Fred had decided to pick out a new suit and when he finally reached home at 2.30 he announced that he had gone from the tailor shop to a restaurant and had already lunched.

Saturday night he was merely reading when dinner was ready. But when he was called he had to finish the news item and then wash his hands and comb his hair. As a result the mashed potatoes were beginning to get soggy when they ate. On Sunday he was not to be found at all when dinner time arrived, but after a prolonged search he was located in the attic, going over his fishing tackle. The lamb chops were quite tallowy.

Jim was there to meet Marjorie when she got off the train on Sunday evening. She ran down the station platform and threw her arms about his neck.

"Oh, Jimmy, I'm glad to see you!" she cried.

"Well, you don't look so bad to me, either," he grinned her arm tightly under his. They climbed into the car and Marjorie nestled close to his side.

"I'm glad I'm married to you and not to Fred King," she announced seriously. "You're a regular husband!"—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9—Out on stately Massachusetts avenue, where dashing Phil Sheridan gallops forever on his bronze charger to ornament the circle that bears his name, there is a curious building revival in progress.

It always has been a select neighborhood. Mansions of the rich and great loom imposingly even if rarely occupied by their owners.

Around the corner, up S street, is the house to which Woodrow Wilson retired and where he died. A few doors above is Herbert Hoover's home in the days before he was president. Warren Harding's home as senator also is in the vicinity.

The new German embassy will one day crown the S street hill. Fine new residences for Assistant Secretary Castle of the state department and Senator David Reed of Pennsylvania elbow each other up there is friendly fashion, symbolical of the relations between their owners.

All Slicked Up

So it's a nice residential neighborhood and always has been, yet that does not account for the feverish building activity about the circle just now. Between and around the mansions of the great are a lot of elderly smaller homes. The near-rich and near-great have lived in these.

But as the tide of fashion moved toward distant suburbs and the mansion dwellers came less often to keep the winter social season in their stately town houses these smaller places came to be something of a drug on the real estate market.

That is all changed now. Many of these ultra-respectable middle aged homes have been committed to architectural beauty doctors. They are having their faces lifted. Flapperish modern ideas in leaded-paned casement windows greet the view. There has been a great slicking up and doing over.

What Started It

And why? Well, the only discernible reason for this return of fashion to a section it seemed on the point of leaving is that 'is majesty, George Rex of England, etc., has built his fine new Queen Anne embassy nearby. And that will be a hub of Washington social doings this winter.

Not only have smaller diplomatic missions flocked to erect their own new homes in the shadow of that typically English pile, but the American fashionable world seems to be doing the same thing. It is truly remarkable what diplomatic and social prestige those Britishers have wherever they go.

The embassy itself looks like a glorified English country house, lacking only a timbered "park" acreage, velveteened game keepers and tenant farmers in smocks.

If Ambassador Sir Ronald Lindsay and his staff would now and then ride to hounds in pink hunting coats the illusion would be complete. But they won't, more's the pity.

Obstruction To The Air And Food Passages

By Waitman F. Zinn, M. D., Baltimore.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Obstruction to the air and food passages is not an uncommon condition and requires immediate treatment. In the early days, this condition was as prevalent as at present, but the physician had not the facilities with which to treat the patient. Through the efforts of some of the leading medical men of this country and abroad, the proper instruments have been devised and methods discovered which have, in turn, been given to the profession; so that, now, particularly in the larger cities, demands of all cases may be met.

Obstruction may be classified into two groups: First, obstruction due to some foreign body accidently lodging in either the air or food passages; second, obstruction due to a growth or disease. Let us first consider the foreign body, which may be found in people of all ages.

A child, as it is old enough to notice things, forms the bad habit of placing objects in its mouth and will naturally swallow some of them. Frequently this foreign body will pass directly into the stomach and will give no further trouble; on the other hand, the foreign body may not pass through to the stomach, but may cause the baby to choke, with coughing or vomiting until the obstruction is removed. Therefore, a mother cannot be too careful in caring for her child. Children are quick to form habits. When they see older members of the family placing pins, tacks, etc., in the mouth, they will, when alone, imitate their elders. It has been said that the early training of a child usually determines its future vocation and this same fact holds true in the forming of habits.

It is an excellent plan for a mother to close all safety-pins and keep small objects out of the reach of children. Here, let me warn you—never attempt to remove anything from a frightened child's mouth, as this is often the cause of an infant asperating the object into the air passages or swallowing it and having it become lodged in the food passages. It is imperative that no attempt be made to dislodge a foreign body by trying to push it down. By so doing, you may endanger the life of the child and render it more difficult for the physician to remove the object.

A child, or even an adult, may accidently swallow some object and through fear, fail to mention the incident until distressing symptoms have developed. The disappearance of a loose tooth, for instance, should never be dismissed, until it has been accounted for in some way. Cases have been x-rayed showing a tooth in one of the bronchi of long sojourn giving symtoms suggesting tuberculosis. This example, will show you the importance of immediately discovering the location of any type of foreign body. All foreign bodies enterin gthe air or food passages can be removed.

An object becoming lodged in the food passages may give no symptoms for sometime, depending upon the type of foreign body. Again, the patient may suffer immediate difficulty in swallowing, with pain near the point of lodgment. If the object is irregular in shape, it will possibly prevent the taking of any liquids—if sharp in outline, a preforation is often caused which endangers the life of the patient.

A foreign body entering the air passage will give symptoms depending upon the character of the object. Vegetable matter, such as nuts, corn and beans produce symptoms which, if not immediately cared for, become alarming; the first symptom will be coughing, followed by difficulty in breathing (accompanied by a sharp wheezing sound) fever and general weakness. If the object is of sufficient size to obstruct the greater part of the passage, the patient will become blue in color and limp. Foreign bodies such as pins, tacks, etc., produce symptoms which are less severe in character, unless allowed to remain for several weeks or months.

Sammy Jay Discovers the Truth

The stoutest heart doth yield to fear
When helplessness seems drawing near
—Old Mother Nature.

It was daybreak of the morning after the start of the great fight in the Green Forest. Sammy Jay hastily got a bite to eat and then flew straight over to where the night before he had left Lightfoot the Deer and the strange Deer fighting. He hoped he would find some one who could tell him who had won the battle. You can guess how surprised he was when he discovered the two fighters apparently fighting as hard as ever. Anyway, they were standing head to head and every now and then one would give the other a push. Could it be that they had fought all night? All about the ground was torn up and trodden. Not far away stood little Mrs. Lightfoot and on her face was a worried look—a look as if there were something she did not understand. During the night she had wandered about, but always after a little came back where she could watch the two who were fighting for her.

Blacky the Crow arived a few minutes after Sammy Jay. He, too, was surprised. "I never heard of such a thing!" he exclaimed. "It looks as if neither knows when to quit."

Just then both slipped to their knees. Sammy's sharp eyes discovered something. Yes, sir, they did so! Those eyes of his are very sharp and they are forever discovering something.

"Did you see that, Cousin Blacky?" he exclaimed.

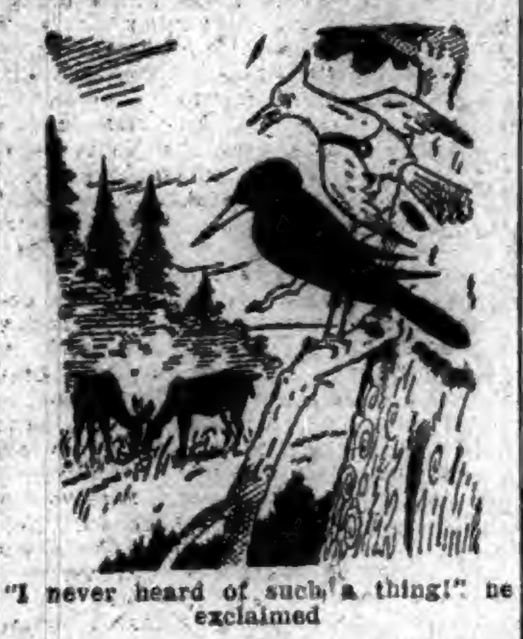
"Did I see what?" demanded Blacky.

"Those two were trying to pull apart, instead of trying to push each other," exclaimed Sammy, growing more and more excited. "Watch, and you'll see that I'm right."

Blacky leaned forward that he might see better. "It's as true as you're alive!" he exclaimed in his turn. "They are not fighting at all! They are trying to get apart and they can't. It's those antlers of theirs!"

"They are locked together!" cried Sammy Jay. "Those antlers are all tangled together. Now, what will they do? Why, this is dreadful! If they can't get themselves apart, no one else can part them. I never heard of such a thing; but there it is! See, Lightfoot isn't angry any longer, he is just frightened. It is the same way with the stranger."

It was all true. Lightfoot and the other Deer had locked antlers. They had come together in such a way that the antlers had been pushed apart and then sprung together; so that it was impossible for them to separate them. They were bound together head to head as surely as if iron bands had been locked around their antlers. They had not known just when it happened. In the fury of the fight they had pushed and pushed and when at last they had sought to separate for a moment's rest, and had been unable to, each had thought that the other was simply continuing to push. It was not until long after the thing had happened that either had realized that he could not get free. Then a dreadful fear had taken possession.



"I never heard of such a thing!" he exclaimed

Really, it was a dreadful situation. You see, it meant slow starvation. Locked together that way, neither would get food nor drink. They could not understand what it all meant. Each blamed the other; yet, after a while, each lost the anger that had filled him in the beginning.

Mysteries

Mr. Editor: In these days of general education, when all the kids are reading mystery and detective stories, it seems as if someone could solve some of these mysteries that appear in our "Town Reports," and I mean mysteries. For instance, on Page 81, current issue, it says, town deposit fund, amount paid treasurer, $372.30 for interest on $6,205.09. On Page 73 it says under receipts, To cash from interest on town deposit fund, $372.30. All right, but turn to Page 79, and we find under head of expenses paid, interest paid on town deposit fund, $372.30. Where does that go? And here's another cross word puzzle to try the faculties of these heroes. The Gallup fund, Page 81, says: Amount paid town treasurer for interest, $457.86. Page 73 says: To cash from interest on Gallup fund, $417.86; $40 less, you notice. And on Page 79, we find under head of expenses, Interest on Gallup fund paid, $457.86. That brings it up all right to the first statement. But how? If anyone can solve these mysteries, and others, they must be wonders, and there is a great field open for them in these days of unemployment and cash shortage. I, myself, will pay pretty well for some solution that explains these things, on any other basis than—oh, well! there's a lot of words to use, but they are too strong for your paper. They burn!

Just keep Castoria handy and give freely for any of the above conditions; relief will follow promptly.

All through babyhood, Castoria is a mother's standby, and wise mothers do not change to stronger medicines as the child grows older. Just increase the dose of Castoria and keep the youngster's stomach sweet and the bowels in good order.

I'm Fat No More—I'm 44

My Birthday Today—No Presents Please—I Lost My Fat With Speed and Ease

Why will people be fat—is it because they never heard of Kruschen Salts—and the Kruschen way of losing fat—and at the same time gain in activity—energy—ambition — and keenness of mind?

Let me tell you how I did it—I ate three meals a day—but moderate ones—I cut out candy, pastry and ice cream—very little potatoes—plenty of vegetables and fruit—

But most important of all—I took one half a teaspoon of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning—didn't miss a morning.

Nothing hard about that — is there? and best of all it's inexpensive—for a bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts 4 weeks cost but 85 cents at any drug store in the World. Not much to pay for freedom from fat slavery and to make yourself feel years younger.

These happy women from various States tell how many pounds they lost with Kruschen.

Montana—19 pounds in 4 weeks — North Carolina—47 pounds in 3 months; Kentucky 24 pounds in 31 days; Wisconsin 11 pounds in 6 weeks; Ohio 10 pounds, no time stated; New York 14 pounds with one bottle.

FOR REAR VIEW MIRRORS ON ALL AUTOMOBILES

Public service motor vehicles such as taxicabs should be equipped with rear view mirrors in the opinion of Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel. His views on this prepared for as read from WTIC, Thursday afternoon in the interests of highway safety.

"With the installation of mirrors in closed cars," said the article, "it has become possible for every driver to know exactly what is going on in the rear as well as what is going on in front and from a safety standpoint it appears that this is as it should be.

"A curious and somewhat inconsistent fact in connection with this is that there is no law in Connecticut which requires the installation of a mirror in a passenger car. As a result many cars which ought to have mirrors for safety purposes do not have them. An example of this is the prominent taxicab industry.

"Most Connecticut taxicabs will be found upon examination to lack mirrors. Obviously, this may be desirable from the standpoint of the industry, but it does not make for safety. While the reason why it is not desirable for the taxicab business will hardly be startling, mirrors are not installed so that operators may not know what is going on on the back seats of the taxicabs. At least that is the general belief.

"The question of whether or not mirrors should be installed in cabs should be considered carefully. It seems possible for every public service vehicle to have a mirror for the use of the operator which would not allow the operator to observe the back seat. From the standpoint of safety, it seems that mirrors ought to be installed, and also that all public service vehicles should be equipped with the best possible accessories required by law.

"It is more necessary for one who undertakes to safeguard the lives of others for pay to have such equipment than for anyone else. However, every car ought to have a mirror, because nowadays it is a charge on every operator to know what is going on behind him and he takes chances if he looks back."

HOG CHOLERA THREATENED BECAUSE OF THE DROUGHT

The U. S. department of agriculture warns farmers that conditions are favorable this fall for an extensive and destructive outbreak of hog cholera partly as a result of the drought and partly because comparatively few hogs have been immunized against this disease.

While there seems to be no cause at present for alarm, according to Dr. U. G. Houck, associate chief of the bureau of animal industry, he urges hog owners to watch their herds closely and to remember there is no cure for hog cholera, that immunization is the only known means of preventing the disease and that the treatment is effectual as a preventive when administered to thrifty, well hogs, but is not intended as a remedy for sick hogs.

The continued severe drought has lowered the vitality of hogs in drought areas where they have had inferior or insufficient food and water, Doctor Houck says. At the same time the drought has curtailed the resources of hog owners with the result that they have had fewer hogs immunized. The results of these two conditions may show serious effects within a month or two, Doctor Houck fears.

Increase of hog cholera may be expected with the coming of fall rains and cooler weather following the drought, Doctor Houck says. Animals of low vitality can not withstand the disease or the simultaneous immunization treatment so well as thrifty animals. While it is the common practice to administer both serum and virus simultaneously, Doctor Houck thinks it may be advisable to use the serum alone in unthrifty herds to protect the animals temporarily until they have regained normal strength and then to administer virus with serum to produce lasting immunity. Certainly immunization should be resorted to at the first sign of danger in the community.

ROCHESTER LAWYER, 81, HAD CONNECTICUT ANCESTORS

Of local interest is the recent observance of his 81st birthday by John R. Fanning, dean of the legal profession in Rochester, N. Y., who is an uncle of Dr. Maurice P. Moore of 7 Broad street, pathologist at the W. W. Backus hospital in this city and Lawrence hospital in New London.

Mr. Fanning has been in the legal profession in Rochester for 57 years and declares he has no notion of retiring yet. As dean of the legal profession in that city a Rochester newspaper says that perhaps his ideas on legal practice and laws of today should merit audience. The Baumes laws, he considers, are right in their general principle. "They should have some modification," he said "but the idea of putting a hardened criminal where he can do no harm is all right."

The prohibition law? Not so good, in his estimation. "I think the passage of the 18th amendment was a great misfortune We would have accomplished far more to spend the money to educate the people in temperance. It has had a very bad moral effect."

Mr. Fanning's early American ancestors had a Connecticut connection, in fact when they came here from Ireland in 1682 they landed in New London, but from there drifted to New York. Nathaniel Fanning, a great grandfather of the present Mr. Fanning, fought with Commodore John Paul Jones off the British coast 151 years ago.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Edward Sullivan

On Thursday morning, at 6:15 o'clock, Catherine Buckley, wife of Edward Sullivan, passed peacefully away at her home at No. 76 Mowry avenue, after an illness of three weeks.

Mrs. Sullivan resided in Norwich practically all of her life, and was united in marriage in old St. Mary's church in Greeneville, 17 years ago, to Edward Sullivan. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. John H. Fitzmaurice. Besides her husband she is survived by her sister, Miss Hannah Buckley of this city, and one brother, Cornelius Buckley of Branford.

Mrs. Sullivan was a devout member of St. Mary's parish, and for a great many years took a prominent part in the work of the women's organizations in the parish. REPUBLICANS NAME GREENSTEIN AND KNOWLES FOR REPRESENTATIVES

The republican party of Norwich at an enthusiastic caucus Thursday evening in the town hall, nominated Josiah Greenstein of No. 30 Warren street and Fred Knowles of No. 48 Norwich avenue, as candidates for representatives to the general assembly from this town. The caucus, which had a good sized attendance, was a harmonious one, there being no contests. Mr. Greenstein is a well known lawyer with offices in the Thayer building and is an active worker in republican circles. His running mate, Mr. Knowles, is a well known resident of the Taftville section of the town, is employed by the Ponemah Co., is prominently identified with the Taftville Mule Spinners union and is also an active worker in the republican ranks.

At 8 o'clock the caucus was called to order by George M. Charbonneau, chairman of the republican town committee. On motion of Edmund Hindle, Judge John H. Barnes was chosen as chairman of the caucus. Applause greeted Judge Barnes as he assumed the chair. Thanking the caucus for the honor bestowed on him, Judge Barnes called for the selection of a clerk. John R. Bowman Jr., named Theodore Richards for clerk and he was so chosen.

"We are here to place in nomination two representatives to the general assembly, and to select a certain number of justices of the peace," said Judge Barnes, in addressing the caucus. "I believe in the principles of the republican party," he continued. "I don't think it out of place to discuss three or four matters which our opponents, the democratic party, will undoubtedly bring up in the coming campaign. Henry Ford has made the prediction that by 1950 the laboring man will work five days a week and receive a minimum wage of $27 a day, $135 a week. I hope this comes true. But the laboring people are not so much interested in what they are going to get in 1950 as they are in what they are getting now.

"Our democratic opponents are going to tell you that the unemployment situation is due to the republican party. That is absolutely false. Corporations need vast sums of money. Very few people, except Judge Pettis and myself, carry around large sums. These corporations deposit their money in national banks which lend it out for industrial purposes.

"Someone was responsible for the unemployment situation. Who was it? Every sensible man and woman knows that billions of dollars were being lent at interest charges of 10 per cent to 15 per cent. Industries couldn't borrow at those interest rates. The money was lent to speculators who were stripped. Now the cry is 'buy, buy.' They can't buy because they were stripped.

"The speculators in wheat are to blame for the wheat prices. It wasn't the republican part. It wasn't the president of the United States. It was the stock speculator that has been the cause of the whole business. A raffle is called gambling. But they don't call stock speculation gambling."

Continuing to discuss the evils of stock speculation in foods, Judge Barnes said that France has a law which sends food speculators to jail. He went on to say that the democratic party is going to tell us that the tariff is to blame for the troubled times. He said that the tariff is not to blame. It protects our industries. Judge Barnes said that England's colonies insist on a tariff of their own to protect their industries against goods made in Great Britain.

The democrats will raise the point that the republican party ought not be returned to power in Connecticut, the chairman said. They will claim that if you put them back our candidates will be a rubber stamp for J. Henry Roraback. Governor Trumbull said that at no time has J. Henry Roraback ever dictated to him, Judge Barnes went on to say.

After the clerk had read the call for the caucus Judge Barnes called for nominations for representatives to the general assembly.

Josiah Greenstein was nominated for first representative by Judge Nelson J. Ayling. Judge Ayling said it gave him pleasure to nominate a young man, one who belongs to the profession of law, who is interested in Norwich and is able and capable. Mr. Greenstein's nomination was greeted with applause.

Fred Knowles was nominated by William Enos. "He is a man from Taftville," said Mr. Enos in making the nomination. He has a good reputation and is a man who will make a good representative, Mr. Enos continued. Mr. Knowles' nomination was also unanimous.

The nominations for justices of the peace were then taken up. Tyler D. Guy submitted the following names, moving that they be nominated: Telley E. Babcock, Albert J. Bailey, John H. Barnes, Charles W. Cassidy, J. Frank Corey, Desire J. Dufresne, Andrew B. Davies, Frank N. Gardner, Josiah Greenstein, Edwin W. Higgins, Arthur F. Libby, Edmund W. Perkins, Henry H. Pettis, Lee R. Robbins, Charles L. Stewart, Earle M. Wood, Harry Schwartz.

The nominations were made unanimous. On motion of Charles W. Cassidy the town committee was empowered to fill any vacancies that may occur on the ticket.

Judge Barnes, just previous to adjournment of the caucus, told of nominating Mr. Greenstein for representative, two years ago and of the splendid showing he made in the election. He also told of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, becoming so enthused over a recent address by President Hoover, that he read the president's address, word for word, over the radio. The caucus adjourned at 8:30 o'clock.

UNEMPLOYMENT FUND TO BE RAISED BY LIONS

At the Thursday noon luncheon of the Norwich Lions club, retiring President Charles W. Cassidy was presented with a beautiful brief case by Dr. K. K. Markoff, acting as chairman of a committee, representing the Lions, to see that a suitable gift be presented to the retiring president.

Retiring President Cassidy made an installation speech placing in office Louis M. Crandall as president of the Lions club. He promised the hearty support of all members of the Lions to the programme for 1930 and 1931.

It was voted by the club to raise an unemployment fund to assist needed cases that might be brought to the attention of their committee on unemployment cooperation.

The members of this committee are: J. B. Caron, Louis J. Fountain, Dr. K. K. Markoff and J. N. French.

The club also voted to take part in the international business confidence week. All the Lions club of the nation are asking other civic and fraternal clubs, such as chambers of commerce, Rotary, various lodges, churches, etc., to cooperate. Dr. K. K. Markoff is to be chairman of the speakers committee while L. M. Crandall is chairman of the executive committee with power to enlarge his committee.

The week of October 20 is to be known as business confidence week all over the United States under the leadership of International Lions.

It was also voted by the club to find ways and means of putting on an entertainment of some nature to raise the necessary funds for the support of the recommendations made by the Lions unemployment cooperative committee.

The meeting was unusually well attended and a great deal of interest was shown by all the members in all the projects submitted.

The meeting adjourned with the usual Lions' roar and the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

FANNING HALL DEDICATED AT CONNECTICUT COLLEGE

Fanning hall, built with the bequest fund left to Connecticut college at New London by the late David Hale Fanning, wealthy corset manufacturer of Worcester, Mass., was formally dedicated Thursday afternoon. Dr. Katharine Blunt, president of Connecticut college and President James Lukens McConaughy of Wesleyan college in Middletown, were the principal speakers.

The ceremonies began with the procession of trustees, members of the faculty, seniors and the cabinet of the student government association, in academic costume, marching from the old building, New London hall, to the new building, Fanning hall. George S. Palmer, president of the board of trustees, presided at the ceremony. The college was represented by Dr. Blunt and Miss Caroline A. Bradley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alva Bradley of Cleveland, and president of the student government association, represented the student body.

Indebted To Benefactor

Dr. Blunt, in her address, stressed the "superb part played by the individual and voluntary benefactor" in the growth of any college. She quoted from Sir Grant Robinson's British Universities, in which he says that the "British universities are essentially the creations of individual benefactors—the private citizen inspired by public spirit." Dr. Blunt said that this is also true of all of our American universities and colleges, "the widow's mite" being as important as the princely gifts.

A brief history of the life of David Hale Fanning was also given by Dr. Blunt. Mr. Fanning was born in Jewett City, Aug. 4, 1830 and died in January, 1926, in Worcester, Mass., where his wealth was accumulated in the Royal Worcester Corset Co., of which he was president and active manager until his death. He was one of nine children and at the age of seven his father died. He received a public school education but longed for better things, so in 1846 with $2.50 he left his home town forever and went to Massachusetts where he rapidly rose to wealth and distinction. He was one of the country's first national advertisers and after he had organized the Royal Worcester Corset Co., he used several thousand newspapers and many magazines to spread the word.

On Aug. 27, 1915, Mrs. Rienzi Robinson of Danielson, one of the college's best friends, went to Mr. Fanning, who was 86 years old at the time, to receive his first gift of $1,000 for Windham hall. She showed him pictures of Plant house, saying it was her "heart's desire to see a Fanning house." He evidently thought well of the suggestion for shortly thereafter, he made a codicil in will, giving $25,000 outright to the college. Later he added a clause in the same section, willing "Any fourth residue of estate remaining, I give and bequeath equally to Worcester Polytechnic college, Worcester, Mass., Connecticut College for Women at New London, Talladega college, Talladega, Ala., and the Worcester Hahneman hospital, Worcester, Mass." Connecticut college received originally close to $200,000, which has been increased by income and appreciation of securities sold, to approximately $275,000.

President Speaks

Greetings from Wesleyan were brought to Connecticut college by President McConaughy, who commented on the rapid growth of the local institution in the comparatively few years of its existence. He touched upon the program for expansion and compared the length of time it took for Yale, Wesleyan and Trinity to attain the same growth as Connecticut enjoys today. The college, being the only one of its kind in the state, bears a certain distinction which will make it an outstanding institution in the years to come.

Inspection By Public

Following the dedication services, the procession and the audience, including the student body, took possession of the building, all of the rooms being thrown open for inspection. The building, which was started Oct. 15, 1929, has an outer wall of split faced granite quarried at Flat Rock. The trim is of lime stone and the general architecture follows the lines of other buildings on the campus. There are four floors, the basement being level with the grade. The administrative offices are on the second floor with Windham hall in the north end. The building is fire proof throughout, with re-enforced concrete floors, interiors of gypsum block and hollow tile and roof of steel with concrete and slate covering.

ADVISES MOTOR DRIVERS TO THINK OF OTHERS

Looking Out for the Other Fellow was the title of an address broadcast over WTIC, at 1.25 Thursday afternoon by William C. Welling, B. A., director of the bureau of vital statistics, Connecticut state department of health. He said:

While the advice contained in the title under which I am privileged to address you this afternoon is applicable to many, if not all, of the activities of life, I propose to limit my remarks to the other fellow in an automobile.

I believe we will best approach this by considering a typical year, say 1929. In the bureau of vital statistics of the Connecticut state department of health are the death records of 441 victims of automobile accidents. These include collisions; skidding accidents and pedestrians, for in the ultimate death records the particular type of automobile accident is not analyzed. These records are individually personal and while such conditions as the weather, general traffic at the time, mechanical equipment, etc., of the car or cars involved would be interesting material for research, it is obvious that all these items cannot properly belong to a death certificate.

If we continue in our analysis of the 441 death records we will discover the illuminating fact that 342 were males and 99 were females. The great majority charged against the male sex is evident. In round numbers we can say that 350 males are killed to 100 females.

Expressed as a rate the 441 deaths mean that in each 100,000 of the population of Connecticut 27 will be killed in automobile accidents.

This rate is more than twice the rate for all the deaths due to typhoid fever, measles, scarlet fever, whooping cough and diphtheria combined. In fact, if for typhoid fever there were 441 deaths in any year in this state it would be considered a major catastrophe and attract not only national but world wide attention. There is a strange apathy about the automobile accident death. Yet it constitutes about one-third of all deaths due to accidents.

While there are naturally many contributing causes, speed certainly is one of them. So fast indeed are the cars of today that the speed limit is perhaps best expressed as the daring or recklessness of the driver.

It is quite true that by going a 30-mile trip at the rate of 60 miles an hour we will arrive a whole half-hour ahead of the man who makes only 30 miles an hour. If his risk is one, say, what will be ours? It certainly isn't two, for at doubled speed the risk goes up at a far greater multiple.

We do not fully appreciate just how much we are gambling until we take into consideration our expectation of life. This means that at certain ages we can expect to live a specified number of years. In one such table of ages you may find that at age 20 there are some 43 years of life to be expected. At age 40 there are 27 and so forth. Now, if our driver is 40, and by going 60 miles an hour he saves half an hour, he is betting his 27 years against the half hour that he will get there safely. In the 27 years (neglecting leap years) there are 473,040 half hours. So there are the odds, 473,000 to 1.

Life is a one-way street, with at best only a limited parking time allowed to each of us. To convert it into a speedway where the driver himself not only assumes tremendous odds but also forces others to gamble is not fairly looking out for the other fellow.

Soft, wavy hair!

The modern, sculptured bobs do wonders to bring out your personality. But like other present-day modes of arranging the hair, they call attention to it. That's why its so important nowadays to keep your hair soft, lustrous, abundant. The easiest and quickest way to give new lustre and color to hair, which has begun to look dull and lifeless, is with Danderine. And it makes the hair softer, easier to arrange; holds it in place.

Here's all you do Each time you use your brush just put a little Danderine on it. It removes the oily film from your hair; brings out its natural color; gives it more gloss than brilliantine. Waves "set" with it stay in longer.

Danderine dissolves the crust of dandruff; puts the scalp in the pink of condition. It stops falling hair. A small bottle is enough to show its merit. Start on it tonight.

CHILDREN CRY FOR IT—

CHILDREN hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. This pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and just as harmless as the recipe reads.

When Baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria have him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea. When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, you should use it to keep the system from clogging.

Castoria is sold in every drugstore; the genuine always bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature.

CONNIE MACK SAYS HE CONTEMPLATES NO CHANGE IN TEAM FOR 1931 CAMPAIGN

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 9.—(AP)—Connie Mack, five times winner of the world's baseball championship, said today that the Athletics next year would try for their ninth American league pennant and sixth world title with virtually the same team.

The famous baseball tactician, who had announced during the playing season that he would not regard his team as great until it had won its second successive world's championship, said that at present he did not contemplate any serious changes. The usual strengthening of the club, as is done by most managers, is to be expected, he added, but there will be nothing radical.

Connie Mack was at his office in Shibe park tower early today ready to tackle a pile of work, but he was constantly interrupted by visitors and telephone calls to congratulate him on the victory of the A's over the St. Louis Cardinals.

At his home and at the office there were large batches of telegrams and letters of congratulation which will take his office staff some time to acknowledge.

The tall tutor, accompanied by Thomas S. Shibe, president of the Athletics, left for Cleveland tonight to attend the minor league meeting tomorrow.

It was learned at the A's club house today that the beaten Cardinals in the depths of defeat showed themselves to be true sportsmen. Just before the game was over and the score 7 to 0 against them some of the Cardinals congratulated Athletic players and wished them well.

With the world's title safely tucked away, the triumphant players are scattering to the four winds not to meet again as a team until they reach Fort Myers, Florida, four months hence for the spring training period. Many of them were at Shibe park today gathering up personal belongings and stowing away baseball trappings for the winter.

George Earnshaw, hero of the A's world series conquest, was in the clubhouse early and closed up his locker for the next several months.

Jimmy Foxx appeared in golf attire ready for a round on the links. Foxx, Earnshaw and Al Simmons leave Philadelphia tomorrow night on a barnstorming trip. Their first stop will be Toledo, whence they will go to Milwaukee, Simmons' home town. Then they will swing southward to Texas.

Another barnstorming group in quest of exhibition-game money, which will play under the title of Cy Perkins' All-Stars, is going to oppose the strong Pottsville team at Cressona, Pa., Sunday. Perkins, Jack Quinn, Jack Boley, Howard Ehmke and Charley Gelbert and Sparky Adams of the Cardinals will be in the squad.

Mule Haas plans to spend Saturday and Sunday crashing base hits in and around his home town, Montclair, N. J.

Most of the players have mapped out hunting trips.

The Athletics have forwarded to Commissioner K. M. Landis a list suggesting their world series spoils be split up into 27 full shares and a few part shares.

DRAFT SQUABBLE AT JOINT MEETING TODAY

CLEVELAND, Oct. 9.—(AP)—The question of universal draft, which the two major baseball leagues wish to apply on players of the minors, will be threshed out in conference here tomorrow at an assemblage of officials of the organizations.

Officials of the International and Pacific Coast leagues, and the American association will hold a preliminary session to decide a policy regarding the draft and then lay it before big league officials. Officers of the American association met here today to decide upon a line of action which they will propose to the other minors tomorrow.

The American and National leagues wish to draft players from the minors when the players reach major league calibre. The minors have held to the limited draft under which they hold a player if they do not wish to sell him.

The minor league policy, the majors maintain, cuts off many good players from advancement.

The session tomorrow will be a reception for Connie Mack, manager of the world title holding Athletics, who arrived here tonight from Philadelphia. Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, czar of baseball, also will attend.

N. F. A. HARRIERS WIN FIRST RUN FROM BULKELEY

The cross-country season at the Academy opened Thursday afternoon when the Wildcat seconds trimmed their ancient rivals, the Bulkeley of New London seconds, by a 24 to 34 score. Bulkeley placed the first man in Brennan, who finished the 2 1-2 mile course in 13 minutes, 56 seconds and also third, in Bwonsky, but the Academy bunched all their men in the other leading positions. In winning, the local boys made an impressive showing.

The first fourteen to finish were in this order: Brennan, Bulkeley; Wlodarzyzck, N. F. A.; Bwonsky, Bulkeley; N. Mahoney, N. F. A.; Caulfield, N. F. A.; Tarrant, N. F. A.; O'Neil, N. F. A.; Carter, N. F. A.; Looby, Bulkeley; Rowley, Bulkeley; Wood, Bulkeley; Cuneen, Bulkeley; Alstadt, N. F. A.

The starter was Paul Bitgood and the judges, Leroy Walker and Frank Hamlin.

The Academy's first team campaign will open next Monday at the campus with Conn. Aggie freshman, it was announced Thursday evening by Coach Matthew J. Sheridan.

TALBOT INJURED IN SCRIMMAGE WITH FROSH

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 9—(AP)—George Talbot, Harvard's best running guard, was injured today when Coach Arnold Horween sent his varsity squad through an hour's scrimmage with the strong freshman team. Talbot will probably be out until the Army game.

The Crimson varsity was further depleted when Bob Faxon, reserve tackle, was declared unfit for action for at least three weeks. Faxon was hurt yesterday but delayed reporting it.

The varsity used considerable laterals against the freshmen and these overhead plays accounted for two touchdowns.

OUTBOARD CHAMPIONSHIPS AT MIDDLETOWN SATURDAY

American power boat racing will reach its climax this season with the 2nd annual national outboard championship regatta, to be staged Sunday and Monday on the Connecticut river at Middletown, Conn. Drivers from all quarters of the compass will compete in the national championships for a long list of trophies and the official titles of national champions in their classes.

Immediately prior to the national championship regatta, on Saturday, October 11, the American Power Boat association will stage the eastern divisional championship regatta at Middletown. Never before have two regattas of major importance been run off on the same course during the same week end and officials and contestants will watch the experiment with unusual interest.

Because of the heavy list of contestants—thought to be the biggest group that ever entered a power boat regatta—officials of the National Outboard association, the American Power Boat association and the Connecticut River Regatta association have decided to run elimination heats on Sunday for those events in which more than twenty outboard drivers are entered. In Class A—the smallest outboard motor class—and in Class E, not more than twenty drivers are expected to compete, and no elimination heats, it is thought, will be necessary for these two events. However, in Classes B, C, D and F, it will be necessary to weed out many drivers through elimination heats because of the fact that as many as fifty racers have entered for single events. Arrangements have been made to care for more than 200 contestants.

On Monday, October 13, the final heats will be run off starting at 9:40 a. m. and continuing all day. Two heats will be run for each of the six motor classes in the finals. As cash prize drivers in Division III are not allowed to compete against the amateurs in Divisions I and II, separate races will be staged for the Division III drivers and for the amateurs. The first amateur to finish each race will be awarded a solid silver trophy and a gold medal by the National Outboard association. Winners of second places will receive silver medals and the third place winners will get bronze medals. In addition, the first place winners will have the distinction of being called national champions of their classes. The Division III drivers will race for purses posted by the Connecticut River Regatta association and for medals.

A. T. Griffith, secretary of the Mississippi Valley Power Boat association, will be the official referee for the two regattas. Griffith will be assisted by Charles F. Chapman, chairman of the national outboard racing commission; George O. Hoehn, secretary of the commission and Ray Lechenger of Houston, Texas.

FAST AMATEUR CARD AT NEW LONDON TONIGHT

NEW LONDON, Oct. 9.—Much interest is being manifest by amateur boxing patrons in the simon pure show slated for the Thames arena Friday night when Dick Gray, veteran promoter, stages his third indoor show at the local enclosure. The main event, a return melee between Mack MacDuffie of the Coast Guard academy and Billy Johnson, New Haven Swedish middleweight, is creating a great deal of interest among the fans.

Two weeks ago MacDuffie and Johnson staged a torrid scrap, the decision going to the Elm City youth after three rounds. The verdict, however, did not meet with the approval of the spectators, and the matchmaker decided to bring them together again. Both boys have been training hard for the conflict and a knockout is likely to take place as both lads are hard hitters.

Bobby Mays' gymnasium will furnish several boxers under the direction of Hughie Devlin. Joe Magnvero, rugged little 120 pounder who hails from little Italy section of this city, will make his debut in the ring. Magnvero, although a newcomer, has been training for several weeks and hopes to make a successful invasion of the squared ring.

Boxers from Waterbury, Hartford and New Haven will also be on hand to make the program one of the best to be staged here this season. Heading the New Haven contingent will be Jack Renault, Italian welterweight, who scored two knockouts in as many appearances before local fans. Renault will probably go against a boxer from either Waterbury or Hartford.

The Brass City outfit will have such stars as Danny Martin, Jr., 135 pounds; Johnny Sims, 128 pounds; Joe Bolino, 126 pounds; Joe Vignali, 138 pounds, and Joe Arnold, 150 pounds. Sims, Vignali and Martin appeared here in action on the initial presentation and their work in the ring proved satisfactory.

BERG-PETROLLE BOUT IS TONIGHT'S HIGHLIGHT

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—(AP)—Jackie Kid Berg, British lightweight, will have a chance to remove the only real stain from his fighting record in a ten round bout with Billy Petrolle, the Fargo Express, in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night.

Years ago Petrolle battered him into a technical knockout in five rounds in Chicago. The pair also fought one draw but since then Berg has come on rapidly until now he ranks as the foremost challenger for Al Singer's 135 pound crown.

INTERVIEW WITH THE PEE WEE GOLF CHAMP

Reporter: "Well, Mr. Littlejohn, how does it feel to be a champion?"

Champion: "Why, it feels great, but I can honestly say Mr. Smalley gave me a fine battle and at one time I thought I was gone."

Reporter: "Don't you find the nervous tension a great strain?"

Champion: "I should say I do. You know once during that round I nearly fainted from nervous exhaustion!"

Reporter: "Tell us about it. The public is waiting to hear the inside of titantic struggles where a title is at stake. They just eat up the human interest element, you know."

Champion: "Well it was on that long par three hole, the 17th I believe. You know my opponent had evened the match with a very spectacular hole-in-one on the sixteenth. Of course I do not want to take anything away from my worthy opponent but I believe that hole-in-one was more or less luck. But that is a break of the game. Well, as I was saying, we came to the 17th with the match all even. The 17th is one of the hardest holes on any of the courses I ever played. It is a hole that requires great courage and extraordinary accuracy, it's a real heart breaker and only those with iron nerve can get down in par. As I was saying we were all even at the 17th and it was Mr. Smalley's honor. I could see that he was extremely upset and that the strain was telling on him as he took his stance on the tee. However, he seemed to pull himself together just as he drove and the ball rolled straight and true for the hollow log. It seemed to hesitate on the edge and then trickled in, rolling out onto the fairway but stymied by an automobile tire hazard. It was a beautiful shot and I admit I was somewhat perturbed. But only for a moment for I realized that a par three was the best he could get without playing a tricky bank shot.

Well, I took my stance and drove. It was a beautiful shot, if I do say so myself. The ball went away straight as a die and disappeared in the hollow log. But alas, there was a great cry of consternation from the gallery as it waited for the ball to appear from the other end of the log. They waited but no ball appeared, it had stuck in the log. It was here that I nearly fainted. What was I to do? I got down on my knees and looked into the log. Yes, there was my ball resting against a cigarette butt some spectator had carelessly tossed into the log. It was at this point that I executed one of the greatest shots known to miniature golf. I do not say this in a spirit of braggadocio but merely make mention of the fact, that others may benefit by my experience."

"As I arose to my feet in a quandry I happened to spy the house boy busily sweeping another fairway with a long-handled brush. Ah, here was the solution to my problem. I quickly grabbed the brush from his hands and unscrewed the handle. Then lying flat on my stomach in the fairway I pushed the broom handle into the hole and taking a billiard player's stance lined up the ball with the hole. It was a difficult shot but I knew that I could not lose. Carefully taking aim while the gallery scarcely breathed I drew back and hit the ball. Straight down the fairway it sped toward the cup. Even as it approached the cup it was seen that I had made a birdie and a great cheer went up. The ball dropped in the cup with only the slightest of a tinkle. I was one up. We halved the next hole and the championship was mine.

Reporter: "That's fine now if I may get a photograph of you."

Champion: "Oh, yes, to be sure, a photograph. Just a minute until I get the cup emblematic of the title. Ah, here it is in my vest pocket. Shall I hold it or wear it on my watch chain?"

AL JOLSON'S HORSE IS WINNER FOR FIRST TIME

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—(AP)—Al Jolson, the comedian, put over his first winner as an owner today, when Concord, quoted at 8 to 1, upset the form players by winning the Oceanus claiming handicap—the six furlong feature two-year olds at Jamaica.

Most of the money was riding on E. F. Sanford's Hibala, which finished second, and Mary Payne Whitney's Smear, which ran out of the money. The victory, however, was unusually popular.

Concord had been out once before for the comedian but ran third in a race won by Smear. Today, however, the Jolson colt sped over the six furlongs in 1:14 1-5 to defeat Hibala by three fourths of a length. Third went to George D. Widener's Panetian. The race was worth $3,775 to the winner.

Ashland vs. All Stars

The Ashland Accos having defeated the H. N. S. two straight games will try and repeat the same thing when they play Terry McGovern's All-Star team Sunday. This team which will play under the All-Star name is composed of some of the fastest players in Jewett City. Jake Sawicki will be second baseman and Big Al Lefty will cover right field. Plenty of action is promised on Sunday when these two clubs meet.

MAJOR LEAGUE OWNERS TURN TO TASK OF STRENGTHING CLUBS FOR NEXT SEASON

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—(AP)—With the world's series over, clubs in the American and National league are making plans which they hope will get them in a world's series, next year or later.

The turn-over in managers will be lighter this year than usual. One change already has been made, Rogers Hornsby succeeding Joseph V. McCarthy as manager of the Chicago Cubs.

McCarthy probably will sign a contract to manage the Yankees.

The Boston Red Sox are temporarily without a manager, but President Bob Quinn has his eye on a prospect and may introduce him to the fans at any minute. The canny Quinn, who has spent many years in baseball, is another who does not believe in giving out news when he has to compete with world's series material for display in the newspapers.

Two catchers have been mentioned frequently in connection with the Red Sox billet, Steve O'Neill, formerly of Cleveland and St. Louis, who has piloted the Toronto Maple Leafs for two years, and Harold (Muddy) Ruel, an American league regular for 12 years, the last eight with Washington.

Ruel caught for the Red Sox in 1921 and 1922. He also served with the Yankees in 1919 and 1920 and the late Miller Huggins always charged himself with an error for letting him go to Boston.

The majors started bringing in replacements before the world's series started, with 21 players by draft from the minors, and later the Phillies made it 22 when they found that Topeka had not lost a man and still was a shining mark for a draft shot.

The Phillies expect Stuart Bolen, smart, lefthanded pitcher of Baltimore, to win some games for them next year and their belated draft added the name of Roetz, an infielder formerly with the Browns, to their roster.

The Red Sox, tail-end team of the American league, dragged back Filey Moore, the former life saver of the Yankees from the American Association, where he did some excellent pitching in 1930.

With the drafted players now removed from the market, direct negotiations will be opened between the majors and minors for any promising prospects who escaped the drag-net.

The Phillies a bad last in the National league, are being besieged with offers for some of their stars.

Brooklyn is understood to be angling for Lefty O'Doul, hard hitting outfielder, and Fresco Thompson, a first rate keystone baseman. Some of the rail birds declare the Robins have offered four for two, Ray Moss, pitcher, Jake Flowers, infielder, and Harvey Hendrick and Ike Boone outfielders.

Rogers Hornsby had a chat with William F. Baker at Philadelphia and he may have asked the Phillies' president if he would consider an offer for Chuck Klein, sensational young outfielder, and Arthur Whitney, a third baseman who can hit.

Soon after the appointment of Hornsby as manager of the Cubs there were rumors he would make some vital changes in the Cubs' line-up.

At Philadelphia he would not confirm these suggestions. He did admit, however, that the Cubs would like to have more pitching strength.

It seems likely that some changes will be made in the championship teams of Philadelphia and St. Louis.

Connie Mack groomed his young outfield recruit, Jim Moore, in late games of the American league season, for duty later and has paid particular attention to polishing his fielding. He has some smart young infielders, too, waiting for a chance to break into the lineup.

Almost any fan in St. Louis would say that Collins, Rochester home run hitter, would play first base for the Cardinals next season, even before "Sunny Jim" Bottomley went to bat 22 times in the world's series and made only one hit. Gossip linked Bottomley's name with that of the Reds, but Manager Dan Howley of Cincinnati professes not to have heard it.

The New York Giants expect to spend a busy winter in the baseball marts. Today they added by purchase John Vergez, an infielder from the Oakland club of the Pacific Coast league, and others will follow.

EASTERN TEAMS HAVE FINAL STIFF WORKOUTS

NEW YORK, Oct. 9—(AP)—The thunder of hard tackles and harder hitting echoed over eastern gridirons today as the leading college teams went through their final heavy drills of the week in preparation for the week-end games.

On all sides scrimmages or other hard and long drills were in order and in many cases new injuries cropped up, bringing possibilities of trouble this week or in the important contests of the following Saturday.

Yale and Carnegie Tech, preparing to face invasions from the south, escaped injuries in their drills although the Elis' coach, Mal Stevens, did a little shifting in his lineup. Parker, who was taken out of McLennan's Eli backfield earlier in the week, went into Albie Booth's set of ball carriers in place of Muhlfeld. Stevens worked his men hard at tackling, then put the kickers through their paces in a supervised scrimmage. The Tartans worked at their defense against the aerial attack Georgia Tech may spring and wound up with a long signal drill.

Navy wound up its preparations and set out for South Bend to meet Notre Dame in the week's big east-west clash. The Midshipmen are due to arrive tomorrow.

The first of the southern invaders, Georgia and Oglethorpe which play Manhattan tomorrow night, already are on hand.

Army led the day's list of sufferers from injuries with the report that four players, Captain Humber, Price, Bowman and Stecker, probably will miss Saturday's game with Swarthmore and may be kept out of the Harvard game a week later. Harvard, somewhat hampered by injuries, had only a light drill, devoting most of its time to signal practice. Pittsburgh reported two men out of action with minor hurts as it staged its final hard drill before leaving for Cleveland to meet Western Reserve.

On the other hand, good news came from the camps of other leaders in the eastern football world. Princeton, which goes into the hard part of its schedule against Brown, saw Trix Bennett, who starred in the backfield as a sophomore and who has been kept out by injuries most of the time since then, take a brief part in a scrimmage. He may start Saturday's game. Dartmouth got Paul Creehan, regular tackle, back into the lineup for a long drill, but Clark still is out. Wolff drew the kicking assignment in his place today and probably will do the booting against Boston university.

New York university worked out in the Yankee stadium, scene of what is expected to be a tough battle against Villanova, winding up its intensive preparation for the game with a stiff dummy drill. Speed was the aim of Chick Meehan and Gil Dobie of Cornell had the same idea as he sent the Red team through a long workout, aiming more for the Princeton game than Saturday's clash with Hampden Sidney.

Coach Lud Wray of Pennsylvania, who already has called off scrimmage for the season, decided on another new departure, that of sending a reserve team of "shock troops" in to start the game against Virginia. Eight sophomores and three juniors were named as probable starters.

SMALL DRIVES MIMZY TO SPECTACULAR VICTORY

DANBURY, Oct. 9.—(AP)—Mimzy, bay mare, owned and driven by J. F. Small, of Hartford, today gave one of the most brilliant performances ever witnessed here to break the Danbury fair track record in the 2:12 pace. The horse clipped a full second off the 2:06 3-4 record time made two years ago by Hazel McKlyo.

Falling far behind after it broke at the start of the second heat of the race, Mimzy rapidly overtook horse after horse. A final burst of speed on the home stretch brought it under the wire a neck ahead of Hunter Hedgewood. Summaries:

GRIMES AND COCHRANE TO GO ON STAGE TOGETHER

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 9.—(AP)—The arch-enemies of the 1930 world's series are going on the stage.

Burleigh Grimes, belligerent star spit-ball pitcher of the St. Louis Cardinals, and Mickey Cochrane, scrappy catcher of the Philadelphia Athletics, have arranged for a vaudeville tour, it was learned here today.

The always-confident Burleigh confidently declared he can be an actor and said Cochrane can handle a saxophone almost as well as baseballs.

Grimes and Mickey, who barked at each other throughout the series and received much publicity because of the feud, patched up their differences just before the Macks took the sixth game and the series yesterday at Philadelphia.

Mrs. Cochrane Says "No"

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 9.—(AP)—Gordon S. (Mickey) Cochrane, peppery catcher of the world's champion Philadelphia Athletics, and Burleigh Grimes, star pitcher of the St. Louis Cardinals, are not going to team up on the stage, says Mrs. Cochrane.

The star backstop was not at home today when a report reached the Cochrane home that the two players would appear together in vaudeville. Mrs. Cochrane said Grimes approached her husband with such a proposition, but nothing came of the suggestion.

Mickey after resting a few days will go on a hunting trip in Canada.

YALE POLISHES UP ON KICKING AND TACKLING

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 9.—(AP)—Tackling and kicking were stressed today by Coach Mal Stevens as Yale began putting the finishing touches to its preparations for Saturday's football game with Georgia.

Stevens kept his men busy with live tackling for an hour and then ordered a supervised scrimmage devoted largely to punting and drop kicking.

Parker, fullback, who gave way to Crowley earlier in the week when McLennan's backfield was re-organized, today replaced Muhlfeld on Albie Booth's quartet. Albie now has two of the backs who started against Maine and Maryland. He was given Taylor earlier in the week.

Georgia's squad is expected here tomorrow for a final workout after spending the night in Bridgeport.

HARVARD VARSITY HAS VERY LIGHT WORKOUT

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 9.—(AP)—The Harvard varsity football squad today went through one of the lightest practice sessions of the season. Signal drills occupied most of the time and before the players took the field, Head Coach Arnold Horween outlined new plays during a blackboard talk.

Harvard's starting backfield against Springfield on Saturday will be minus two regulars as Eddie Mays, halfback, and Bernie White, fullback, have not fully recovered from their injuries.

Georgia Team Arrives

BRIDGEPORT, Oct. 9.—(AP)—The Georgia university football squad, composed of 30 players, arrived here at 10:15 o'clock tonight. The team will remain in this city until Saturday when it will play Yale at the bowl in New Haven.

GOOD INTERIOR FINISH

Hundreds of home owners have found that the pleasing texture and natural tan color of insulation board make it ideal for interior finish when they remodel their homes. By using insulation board as a finish, they reduce remodeling costs by eliminating another finish and provide for future fuel savings by reducing heat losses through walls and ceilings in winter. Many beautiful effects have been obtained by staining, painting and stenciling the boards. Joints between the boards may be covered by wood strips for a panelling effect, or may be beveled if a stone effect is desired.

LINE ALL CHIMNEYS

Good principle and safe construction require the lining of all chimney stacks, even though they may be 8 inches thick. Lining eliminates much of the fire hazard—in fact, limits almost all chance of flue fires.

FAST MATCHES IN DUSTY LEAGUE BOWLING

One of the best matches of the National Industrial league was rolled last night at the Aetna alleys. The Lane Battery Five took three out of four points from the I. Y. M. C., to knock them out of first place. This puts the I. Y. M. C. in tie for second place with the Lane Battery and the Smoke Shop. The Icy Hots went into first place by one game by taking four points from the Gas and Electric Dept., and the Smoke Shop took three points from the Connecticut Co.

Aldi was high man for the night with a single of 134 and a total of 369.

HARD LUCK CAMPING ON TRAIL OF CRIMSON TEAM

NEW YORK, Oct. 9—(AP)—In search for an early season "hard luck" champion among the eastern football teams, one would have to go no further than Cambridge, Mass., where Coach Arnold Horween is bucking the injury jinx in an effort to put together a workable first eleven for Harvard.

Yesterday Horween appeared to have conquered the jinx, when all of the injured, with the exception of Mays and White, returned for the daily scrimmage. Today, however, George Talbot, the Crimson's best running guard, was injured and probably will be out until the Army game Oct. 18. The Harvard varsity was further depleted when Bob Faxon, reserve tackle, was declared unfit for action for at least three weeks. Faxon was injured yesterday but delayed reporting it.

Taking no chances of depleting his squad in practice scrimmages, Lud Wray today sent the Pennsylvania varsity through what is expected to be their last scrimmage of the year. The only bodily contact practice for the regulars now on will be one drill a week in fundamentals.

Yale was scheduled to get a tough workout today but Coach Mal Stevens changed his plans, substituting a light practice in fundamentals and forward passing for the varsity. The backfield, which Stevens reorganized yesterday, with McLennan as quarterback remained unchanged through a short defensive drill. Sullivan, Dunn and Crowley are the other members of the quartet expected to start against Georgia Saturday.

Carnegie Tech had a taste of rain and the experience of handling the ball on a slippery and sloppy field as the varsity rehearsed for the Georgia Tech contest at Pittsburgh.

Colgate's first string was given a boost when Captain Hart appeared in uniform after being out for several days on account of illness. Coach Andy Kerr had his gridders going at top speed through a long signal drill in preparation for Lafayette.

A long defensive scrimmage against Notre Dame formations constituted the Navy's final hard workout before leaving for South Bend. Lou Kirn, the most consistent of the Middie backs, who hurt his knee yesterday, was back in the lineup.

The Army was not permitted to do any scoring in a long scrimmage but the varsity showed plenty of power on the defense in smashing Swarthmore plays.

Cornell's big Red team took to the air in an effort to perfect an overhead game for Hampden Sidney, which sprung a bunch of tricky triple plays and end runs last year.

The possibility of a shortage of ends for the Brown game was seen at Princeton, when it was discovered that Lea and Wister and possibly Levick would not be in condition for Saturday's battle.

Syracuse again stressed the offensive attack as Vic Hanson continued to polish his machine for stiffer opposition than it encountered in its first two games. Chick Meehan drove his New York university squad at a fast pact against Villanova plays but the Violets were not so successful in stopping passes.

DUGAS COLLECTING FAST CLUB FOR SAT.

Lefty Dugas is busy recruiting a ball club of local players to clash with the Shyma club on Saturday afternoon at the Providence street grounds. This game which will probably close the baseball season at Taftville is one which is to decide the merits of the old timers and the youngsters.

The Shyma club is a well balanced team of youngsters coached by Father Mandler and is one of the best of the younger teams in Eastern Connecticut. The Shymas are mighty proud of their club and claim that a team which has teamwork can defeat the team made up of individual stars. It was this claim that led to the signing of the game for Saturday.

Lefty disagreed with the statement of the Shymas and said that he could pick up a club of all local boys that could go out and trim the Shymas. His claim was that veteran ball players could band together and without practice trim a team of youngsters who claim teamwork as their outstanding merit.

This remains to be seen but Lefty is rounding up a number of the local stars into what looks like a mighty formidable club. Lefty will probably do the pitching as well as considerable of the hitting. It will be Lefty's last appearance on a local diamond for the season and the last game before he reports to the Pittsburgh Pirates next February.

The complete lineup of the clubs will be announced tomorrow.

OLD OX YOKE GIVES CLUE TO LOST MORMON CARAVAN

TONOPAH, Nev.—(AP)—Finding of an old hand-hewed ox yoke in a wash in the dry, sunburned hills called Skull mountains is believed to indicate the fate of the lost Mormon caravan of 1846 which disappeared on the way from Utah to California.

The relic brought in from the desert by an old prospector, apparently had lain 84 years under a sun that gives the waste section a temperature of 120 in the shade.

Commander Elmer Wharon and 37 associates apparently perished of thirst when they turned to the right at Yucca Pass instead of to the left, which would have gotten them to Kane springs and water, local historians say.

CHICAGO VETS TO CARRY REPLICAS OF OLD FLAGS

CHICAGO—(AP)—Five old battle flags which founders of their organization carried in the battles of the Civil war will be paraded in duplicate at the American Legion national convention in Boston, October 6, by the Chicago Board of Trade post of the Legion.

The flags were the fighting emblems of Batteries A and B of the First, Second and Third Board of Trade regiments who went to war in '61 and '62 and were recruited by members of the exchange.

The originals of these historic colors are hermetically sealed in the state's archives at Springfield.

ATTRACTIVE DOORWAY

It is often said that from the doorway the visitor receives his first real impression of the home and its occupants. With such a doorway as that shown above there can be no doubt but that the impression will be a pleasant one. The soft, pleasing color of the brick walls combines nicely with the cut stone trim around this doorway which was designed under the supervision of David S. Betcone for the Honor-Bilt Home division of Sears Roebuck and company.

The door itself with its rounded head and small paned window makes it easy to believe that the entrance leads to a charming interior. The solid wood shutter with its ornamental cut-out is painted green, providing a contrast with the red brick walls.

John Tuttle of Yakima Valley, Wash., and his brother C. E. Tuttle, Red Oak, Iowa, recently saw each other for the first time when the former was 80 years old.

Legionnaires Return

The fifteen members of Montville Post No. 112, American Legion, returned home between Wednesday morning and Wednesday evening, after attending the American Legion convention in Boston. A few of the local boys were in the line of march. Following the parade the delegation spent the rest of the day in visiting points of interest in and around Boston.

A moving picture social under the auspices of the C. E. society of the Union Baptist church is to be held this (Friday) evening. The showing of the picture will last about 30 minutes and will be followed by a social hour and music by the Lyman orchestra.

Norwich Produce Market

Furnished by Bureau of Markets
Conn. Dept. of Agriculture

The market was quiet this morning with supplies of vegetables generally light and very few price changes. Frosts are holding off and it looks as though farmers would be able to clean up garden stock to the last. Cauliflower and celery have been badly affected by the drought. Apples are liberal and sales very moderate and prices unchanged.

The October 1st estimate of potato acreage throughout the country and by sections will be released by the United States department of agriculture on Friday, October 10, at 2 p. m. Some of the evening papers on that date will carry the report and practically all of the Saturady morning papers will carry a summary.

Potato trading has been rather [illegible] up in anticipation of this report, especially since the September estimate placed the national yield at the lowest point reported for several years—a supply of 2.74 bushels per capita.

If this estimate is not revised upward by the October 1st figure, the potato market should strengthen considerably, especially after those growers who are forced to sell at digging time have disposed of their crop.

Supper from 5:30 to 7 was served to about 50. In the afternoon, the regular weekly meeting of the Ladies' Aid society was held, and the October mission meeting was held in connection with it.

Garden Club Committees

Mystic Garden club met Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. N. Stanton Gates at her home at Pequotsepos. The program was in charge of Miss Elizabeth Mallory. Two new committees were voted in, one for the conservation of trees and wild flowers, with Miss Annie Greenman, chairman and another for the use of slides with talk, under the chairmanship of Mrs. H. C. Cornwall. The next meeting of the club will be held Tuesday afternoon, October 21, with the president, Mrs. L. P. Allyn.

P.-T. Association To Meet

The first meeting of the fall of the Parent-Teacher association of Mystic academy will be held this (Friday) evening in the school. A representative of the Keystone company of Pennsylvania will be present and show stereoptican slides, demonstrating supplementary work in grades one, six and eight. The musical program will be furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Whittle. Mrs. George Tift is chairman of the refreshment committee.

Mrs. H. O. Williams' residence in Old Mystic is being repaired and painted.

Local residents are going out into the river to fish for smelts. So far there have not been many large catches.

Everett Barron, who has been spending the summer with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Burrows of Old Mystic, has gone to the home of his parents, Lieut. and Mrs. Seth N. Barron, of West Brighton.

To Decide Tournament Plans

A meeting will be held in the rooms of the Mystic Hook and Ladder rooms on Gravel street Monday evening at which time the officers and team captains of the Eastern Shore bridge tournament will meet. Officers will be chosen and the question settled as to whether [illegible] or additions to the membership of the league. [illegible] membership are the Square and Compass and Cycle clubs of Westerly, John Winthrop club of New London, Mistuxet club of Stonington and the Mystic Hook and Ladder company of Mystic. Through a season of ten weeks during the winter, each club plays one match a week and 12 players represent each club.

Miss Carolyn Baker is visiting Boston friends.

Gifts To Library

During the year ending October 1, 1930, the Mystic-Noank library reports a circulation of 7297 books, an increase of 237 over the previous year. The library has been fortunate in recently receiving gifts from Dean William A. Wilbur of Washington, D. C., Miss Grace Turkington of Boston, Mrs. Lemuel Clift of New London and Mrs. Mark D. Stiles of Mt. Vernon, N. Y. The gifts included bound volumes of Old Mystic newepapers from 1859 to 1883. In the collection are two valuable histories. Several pots of ferns have been donated for decoration in the library. A change has been made in the library, additional lights having been placed in the stacks and in the gallery. The gallery is to be fitted up as a reading room, with new bookcases, chairs and table.

Miss Ruth T. Russell, of Norwich, home demonstration agent, has sent notices to local persons that Mystic group of the farm bureau will meet Tuesday, Oct. 14, at 10:30 a. m., in Grange hall for a millinery meeting. Those desiring felt or velvet for hats are requested to notify Mrs. W. L. Main, leader of the group, by Friday noon. Velvet is used mostly for berets and felt for hats that require a brim.

Mrs. Walter C. Morgan spent Wednesday with Mrs. William Clark, of North Stonington.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wilbur of Stonington spent Tuesday evening with friends in the village.

Mrs. George Tift and Mrs. Joseph Startz visited relatives in Groton Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard W. Keigwin and son Buddy left Wednesday for a motor trip over the Mohawk Trail.

Jewett City Chapter Entertained

Anne Brewster Fanning chapter, D. A. R., of Jewett City, held its October meeting at the home of Mrs. Eva Burdick and daughter, Miss Ethel Burdick of Mystic, Wednesday, with 16 members present. Mrs. Burdick and daughter were members of the above chapter for several years, but recently have been transferred to the Fanny Ledyard chapter in the village.

Mrs. Marie T. Holmes spent Tuesday with Mrs. Gerda McLean, of White Rock.

Received Seven New Members

There was a fine attendance at the annual church night services held at the Union Baptist church Wednesday evening. The pastor, Rev. L. J. Shepler, presided. Following the singing of several hymns, Richard W. Mansfield of New London gave a most interesting talk. He had brought eight girls with him who sang several hymns. Rev. Mr. Shepler then introduced Rev. Robert J. Chrystie, PhD., pastor of the local Methodist church, who gave a short talk. The reception of new members taken into the church during the past year followed. They were Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Lopes, Mrs. Robert Woodbury, Misses Louise Saunders, Kathryn Lamb, Phoebe Denison and Betty Munro. A program of music and recitations was enjoyed and sandwiches, cake and coffee were served by members of the Friendly league.

Following are the scores of the third night of play in the bridge elimination tournament of Mystic Country club: Table 1, H. Friedman and P. Schepis, Stonington, 2357, against Mr. and Mrs. B. Hewitt, Mystic, 1850; margin, 507. Table 2, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Kinney, Mystic, 1104, against L. McLaren and Saunders, Westerly, 2,500; margin, 1396. Table 3, Mrs. Mary Benjamin and Mrs. H. SKIPPER OF BOAT FRANCES NETS A STRANGE CATCH

Capt. William Musante and Mate John Singer, on the boat Frances, were out to the fishing grounds recently, trying to get flatfish. Fishing has not been good—seems as if the fish are on a strike or playing hide-and-go-seek with the fishermen and many did not get enough to feed the house cat, while some could not pay off their gas bill. Taking a chance and putting the net overboard to see if the fish were really fooling, or if the strike has been called off, the good ship Frances dragged the net around smile, for they thought the market Then Mate Singer said, "Well, Captain, we will haul in," and they found about five barrels of fish. Both had a smile, for they thought the market would be high; so again the net went into the salt water, to see if any more fish were left.

Mate Singer went down in the cabin to put on the coffee pot for a cup of brown coffee which sure would taste good on a cool morning on the water. Captain Musante was at the wheel and put under his shirt a real fisherman's cup of coffee. Then, for the second time the net was pulled on deck, but, oh what a headache for the young salts! It did not take glasses to see the fish, for only ten fish were in the mesh! But that did not make the fishermen mad, for a saying in a book at the little red schoolhouse read, "If at once you don't succeed, try, try again." For the last time, the net went back into the chilly water as the sun was going down behind the trees at Mumford cove. The fishermen had been out at the grounds all day since 4 o'clock and were ready to call it a day.

The net came out of the water slowly, seemed to pull the boat along; it took fully 25 minutes to get the net on deck. It held a large fish with a tail almost as long as a telephone pole; its colors were black ans white. The net was torn; it sure would take $25 to fix it up, but the fish might bring a good price, although Mate Singer did not even know its name. But Captain Musante did, for a few years ago off George's banks, he had to shoot one with a horse pistol, needing a better eye than Tom Mix in the movies. The captain said, "That is a stingeree—weighs around 300 pounds. But I don't know if it is worth anything! It is late to see them up in the waters around Block Island. That is a southern fish and they need warm water. I don't think a stingeree has been brought into the fishing village in the past ten years. There is a sign goes with that fish, meaning weather. Let me think a few minutes and I will tell the story like Uncle Abe and David, the tire twins on the radio. Seeing or catching a stingeree means fill the coal bins early, for cold weather is knocking at the door; fur coats and overcoats will be in style on Main street before the turkeys will lose their necks and one snow storm will come in November. That is the story of the stingeree, and it is time to beat it back to Rogers dock. Seven barrels of fish with a 300-pound stingeree with an eight-foot tail."

The monster fish was pulled up to the mast, so the people could see a fish with its long tail and pretty color. The other fish were forwarded to Father Knickerbocker's city. Both fishermen went home that night all tired out after working hard. A good supper was in their minds; one wanted a Long Island duck, while his pal wanted a Dinty Moore special.

When the next day came, over 200 people viewed the stingeree; but it was dead and had to be thrown overboard.

Reply To A Summer Boarder

What do we do when season's done, you say?
Well, I dunno—there seems enough to do
A-livin' our own lives an' wonderin' who
Has made the most this year. Ain't nothin' jay
About us any more. We're pretty gay,
With radio, an' the movies—'lection, too,
An' jaunts to town to get us somethin' new—
For Winters we folks take some time to play.
You don't take life away, ma'am, when you go,
For everywhur we humans air that's bound
To be a sight o' livin'. Seems real funny
Any one likes cities. Want to know
Our fav'rite sport? It's jest to set around
An' talk about you folks—an' count our money.

Mrs. Mary Moore, of Hallowell, Me., tells a good fish story which she assures everybody is true. A road construction gang was making repairs and blasting while she was visiting at Five Islands. Following one particular deep detonation something dropped into a rose bush nearby. It was a deep-sea cunner weighing more than three pounds. Mrs. Moore lost no time in skinning the fish and had it fried for supper. It seems that a neighbor saw a huge fish hawk drop the cunner from the sky, evidently frightened by the blasting.

Thomas Lewis of Green, R. I., was a Sunday visitor at Mr. and Mrs. William Bitgood's.

There were 10 that ate dinner with Mr. and Mrs. William Bitgood Sunday. They had 10 visitors and there were eight callers besides Elisha Bitgood and daughter, Emma Chaffee, and son of Hope Valley, R. I., and Flora Remington and four children of Oneco and the callers were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bitgod and daughter of Pachaug, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barber and son, Joel, of Jewett City and two gentlemen from Plainfield.

Harold Bitgood and Joel Barber have been cutting firewood on the land of Mrs. Bitgood's father-in-law, Albert Dawley in Eastern Voluntown.

Jefferson Barber was in Oneco Saturday, Oct. 4 and again Oct. 7, trading. He also went to Beach pond store Oct. 6. Mr. Barber says he has some cats he would like to sell or give away. He says he hasn't many, only 14. They are all sizes and ages.

Charles Douglas is cutting his winter firewood on John Phillips' farm.

The young man that works for Jefferson Barber is on the sick list.

Mrs. Bronson of Voluntown was at Mr. Bitgood's cider mill Tuesday with apples.

Amory Gardner and Mr. Butler of Rhode Island were at Mr. Bitgood's mill Tuesday. They went to get their cider that Mr. Bitgood had made for them. Mr. Butler had his wife and little girl with him. His wife was Mr. and Mrs. Ed Gardner's daughter of Escoheag. Mrs. Bitgood has known her ever since she was a small girl and also knew her father and mother well. Mrs. Gardner is Elder Woodmancy's daughter. He used to preach on Escoheag hill. He has got so old he had to resign. They are all nice people.

THE FARMER'S TALK TO FARMERS

ONE OF THE SECRETS OF FARM SUCCESS

(Written Specially For The Bulletin)

It sure does seem a bit inappropriate to go to a maitre-d'hotel for lessons in farming.

But those of us who have cut our wisdom teeth have learned, among other things, that it makes little difference where we get "p'inters," so long as they "p'int" right.

For 37 years "Oscar of the Waldorf" served the rich and great of the world in that famous caravanserai. He knew how to prepare and serve culinary masterpieces; he was the official welcomer of Pittsburg millionaires and the confidant of kings traveling incognito. To all intents and purposes, he was the Waldorf, and its guests never thought of one except in connection with the other.

In other words, he was a simply wonderful hotel man. There wasn't his like in New York city, perhaps not even in Paris. He grew up with the hotel; perhaps it would be nearer truth to say the hotel grew up with him. It was quite impossible to conceive of the one without the other.

Watchful of the smallest detail, imperturable in emergencies, suave, impeccably correct in costume and manner and speech, he moved about his Waldorf as if it were the only world he knew or cared for.

It wasn't till that Moloch of wasteful destruction which New York city calls the spirit of progress decreed the demolition of the old Waldorf, and Oscar was thrown out of his job, that his real character appeared.

As might be assumed from the nature of his work in the hotel he had accumulated somewhat of this world's goods. His money had gone towards buying a farm up at New Paltz, N. Y., and when the last guest was gently shooed out of the doomed hotel, he also went—as far as that farm.

There he has been ever since, living at last in the freedom he has always hankered after, and in the simple manner he has always preferred. He is, according to his own confession, "having the time of his life." He is no longer "Oscar of the Waldorf," but Farmer Tschirky of "Oscar's Farm."

The reporter who went up to interview him on the occasion of his recent 64th birthday found him hard at work in his garden.

"Those familiar with the urbane Oscar in his tail coat and white tie of office surrounded by waiter captains and assistants as he presided over the ornate dining rooms of the Waldorf-Astoria, would have had difficulty in recognizing the genial and rotund builder of rockeries. Oscar was dressed in congress boots of ancient vintage with elastic sides, a pair of tan canvas trousers and a soft shirt open at the neck; as a substitute for the elaborately printed menu which of old projected from the pocket of his tail-coat, he carried a red cotton handkerchief, and a folding carpenter's rule."

The farm includes about 1,000 acres most of it under intensive cultivation. There are 50 head of Guernsey cattle in the barns, chickens and ducks and geese by the hundred, and Oscar and his son August carry on an extensive trucking business.

There are lakes and gardens, and bass can be caught from the Walkyl river which runs through the grounds. "Only I am not a very good fisherman," says Oscar; "I am a farmer." Practically everything on the place is of his own devising and much of it his own handiwork. He is quite as proud of his ability to handle a hoe or a saw as of his competence with a chafing dish.

And here, at last, comes in the real nub of the story, the peculiar glory of "Oscar's farm:"

"We are absolutely self-supporting on my farm and could go on almost indefinitely without receiving anything from the outside world."

It was no secret in the old days of simpler living when practically every farmer looked forward to it as his chief ambition. But it has been lost in these later days of city-aping, when the possessors of farms and farm-homes have thought it a mark of progress to imitate the make-shift conveniences which cramped city conditions substitute for spacious country comfort.

It has been left to this retired head-waiter, this "furriner" bred up in the luxuries of Sodom's most exuberantly palatial hotel, this caterer who was accustomed, every day, to lay under contribution all the imported and exotic productions of the whole earth and all its oceans,—it has been left for him to settle down on a back-road farm and show us how to make that farm a self-supporting and independent principality, even in these roaring days of world-commerce.

"This is my home," were his farewell words. "This is better than all the fine hotels and restaurants in the world. It is here that I shall always be most content."

Good old Oscar! He has tried all the flesh-pots of Egypt and finds them less savory than the manna of the wilderness and the rock-gushing water of Meribah.

But must all the rest of us farmers go and serve thirty-seven years in a city hotel before we can get our eyes open to the value and happiness of our heritages?

Why can't we see our opportunities and appreciate our advantages, without having to go through such a dismal apprenticeship with old Step-Mother Experience?

Factories, shops, stores, offices, etc., are simply places in which to get money enough to live somewhere else. But the farm is itself the home. Not merely the four walls which inclose the house, but the whole spreading farm, with its meadows and its pastures, its woods and its gardens, its trout-brooks and its plow-lands; it is all home to the born farmer.

One of his noblest and highest aspirations should be to make it a self-supporting domain, so sufficient unto itself that it would never be dependent upon somebody else for the means of existence.

Of course a Connecticut farm won't produce oranges or kumquats or grapefruit. But it will yield apples and pears and peaches and plums and grapes and melons and strawberries and raspberries and huckleberries; and what better fruits has nature yet devised?

It won't grow sugar-cane, but, if the maple trees haven't all been cut down to sell for firewood, it will produce a sweet which the cane fields of neither Louisiana nor Cuba can rival. To say nothing of what the honey-bee will give.

Outside of tea, coffee and a few spices,—none of which are absolute necessities—there is very little needed for life or even for comfort which a Connecticut farm, properly farmed, cannot be made to produce.

We can raise our own wheat and rye and oats and corn and potatoes, and our own vegetables, if we choose to take the trouble and do the work. We can grow our own beef and pork and mutton and fowls. We can have our milk and cream and eggs and make our own butter and cheese.

Of course, it's easier to buy all these things from somebody else,—if we have the money to do it with. But that's the one thing that a Connecticut farm doesn't yield generously,—money. It's their very lack of money which most farmers complain about.

Oscar of the Waldorf had all the money he needed to buy exotic luxuries for the Waldorf tables. He wasn't stinted in that respect as most farmers are. But, after thirty-seven years of Sybaritism, he goes back with pleasure to the simple but amply sufficient products of his own farm which he finds self-supporting and practically independent of the rest of the world.

He used to buy guava jelly at fabulous prices to garnish his hotel tables. We farmers can hardly afford that. But we can raise currants and crab-apples, either of which will give the fruit of the Psidium pyriferum a close race in both looks and flavor, and cost nothing in comparison. We can't raise pomegranates or dates. But we can raise Snow apples and Bartlett pears and Elberta peaches which are better than either.

It was my privilege, the other day to be shown the cellar shelves of an old-fashioned farm-house. Arranged on them in long rows were dozens upon dozens of glass jars, quarts and pints, containing canned corn and peas and beans and tomatoes, strawberries and raspberries and blackberries and blueberries, jellies and jams and marmalades, pickles and catchups, etc., etc., etc. They all came from the gardens or fields of the farm.

In the bins were apples and pears and potatoes and beets and carrots; up-stairs in the kitchen, over the mantel, hung festoons of reddening peppers; and one of the small boys assured me that "they wus more'n five bushel 'v but'nuts and walnuts up 'n the garret."

There's no need to go on with the list. That house might be snow-bound for a month or quarantined for all winter without danger of starvation or even of short rations.

In the city people have to live "from hand to mouth" because they must depend upon outsiders for their daily supplies. They have no land on which to grow things; no place in which to store them. They have to take what they can get and pay roundly for it.

Like the sensible people they are, they make the best of things which they can't help, and don't ask for any of our pity. It's hard to see why we should envy them, and still harder to understand why we should imitate them.

They have to live on the sufferance of the railroads and the markets; the farmer can, if he will, live as an independent sovereign on his own self-sufficing realm.

It might not be quite seemly for the blue-overalled farmer to brag about his sovereignty; but, if he takes full advantage of his unique opportunities, it is not probable that he will do much whimpering, either.

He holds a pretty good hand—if he will only play it for all it is worth.

THE FARMER.

WESTMINSTER

WILL TWO-BODIED CHICK LAY TWO EGGS EVERY DAY?

Is this little town to produce the two eggs a day hen? Well maybe! a peculiar freak of nature is a 6 months old white Leghorn pullet on the Goodrich farm in the southern part of Canterbury which has 2 bodies, four perfect legs two wings and 1 head. Mr. Goodrich told The Bulletin correspondent that the chick was hatched in his incubator last spring. He figured that it would live but a day or two, but under the especial care of Mr. Goodrich's mother, the chick thrived and grew apace and is fast reaching maturity. Results are eagerly awaited. Will the pullet produce any eggs, or will she mature eggs in both bodies. There are two digestive tracts but apparently but one pair of lungs and one heart.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Albin, who have been in town for several weeks, while Mr. Albin was painting and redecorating the Nash house, have returned to their home in Westport.

The scarcity of water has reached a critical stage up this way. Many wells are dry and stock owners are obliged either to haul water or drive cattle long distances to reach ponds and brooks, which are very low. Many brooks and ponds are dry. There is, however, some wells which show plenty of water and these are being shared with the less fortunate.

Mrs. R. Mandel and daughter Anna and Mr. and Mrs. Alverez and daughter Jean, all of Jersey City, motored up to spend Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. A. T. MacLeod.

Big Apple Crop But No Takers

That the public has overlooked the old adage an apple a day keeps the doctor away is evident. Fruit growers complain that there is practically no sale for even the best apples. There is a bumper crop this year and big auto truck loads are being sold to distant buyers as cider apples. There is the choice of the crop going that way or rotting on the ground.

STOCKS ARE WITHIN FRACTION OF THE 1929 LOW, ESTABLISHED NOVEMBER 13

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—(AP)—The stock market swept down through last November's lows today.

Weakened by a month of almost steadily declining quotations, the price structure gave way under the unfavorable news of suspension of another member firm for insolvency. However, the market did not collapse; the decline, averaging 5-8 points, was orderly and gave no evidence of demoralization. There was a rally after the first flood of selling had been exhausted, but the recovery enabled the shorts to cover without much sacrifice of profits and the decline was resumed, with the closing not far above the bottom.

The final composite price on 90 leading shares was 140.3, duplicating the 1929 low established on November 13, although more inclusive averages went below the November 13 levels several days ago. It was the largest drop since August 8, and the total sales of 5,050,600 shares were the highest since June 18.

Weakness in bonds which had been moving against the trend of the market for equity securities was a noteworthy feature of the day. Foreign bonds, with few exceptions, sagged; some were extremely soft.

Wheat and corn joined the downward procession with declines of 2 to 3 cents a bushel. Cotton showed considerable irregularity and was 2 points higher to 4 lower at the close.

Favorite investment stocks, which have been increasingly weak of late gave ground freely and many, including U. S. Steel and American Telephone, broke through their November minimums on extreme losses that averaged 5 points. Attempts at support were ineffective. The most striking example in this direction was the lively battle at the U. S. Steel post in the forenoon when large buying orders failed to hold the stock at 150. It subsequently touched 146, closing at 146 3-8, off 4 3-4. American Can and Atchison were virtually the only active favorites that did not make at least new 1930 lows.

News from the business world was largely unimportant, so that the market's difficulties came from within. Bradstreet's building index for September showed 6.5 per cent. gain in permits over August. Baldwin Locomotive's shipments last month were slightly higher and the head of a department store chain reported that earnings this year were running ahead of 1929.

Brokers' loans in the past week declined $158,000,000, establishing a new low for the year for the second successive week. The largest shrinkage was in New York city member banks' loans for own account, which were off about $100,000,000.

Interest in the money markets centered largely on the increase in the reichbank's discount rate of 5 per cent. to 4. This was seen as a strictly domestic affair rather than a forerunner of firmer world markets, for Germany has been losing gold as well as capital since the elections. Rates on time accommodations here stiffened slightly, but call money was unchanged at 2 per cent.

Net losses of 5 ponts were numerous in prominent stocks. In this group fell Case, Coca Cola, Electric Power and Light, Stone and Webster, Johns Manville, New York Central and Columbia Gas, Goodyear Rubber, Ingersoll Rand, International Business Machines, Vanadium, Standard Gas, Rock Island, Allied Chemical and Westinghouse Electric closed 5 or more lower while in the 4 point list were American Can, American and Foreign Power, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Gillette and Air Reduction. General Electric lost more than 3. Auburn Auto declined 8 3-4 and Peoples Gas and Hahn Department Stores, preferred, 10.

Wheat yielded 2 to 2 1-2 cents in sympathy with the weakness of stocks. Large Russian exports were reported. Corn dropped 2 3-8 to 3 on estimates of large Argentine shipments.

With the exception of the unsettled Latin Americans, foreign currencies were firm.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—(AP)—Suspension of another large brokerage firm for failure to meet its engagements, sent curb market shares crashing to new lows, and resulted in sales of more than 1,000,000, as it did ten days ago.

While Prince and Whitely, the second important commission house casualty of the year, was less interested in curb shares than was J. A. Sisto and Company, which failed last week, its suspension was even more unsettling to the curb, owing to the sharper decline on the big board. Losses of 2 to 11 points in prominent shares were numerous, and closing quotations were about the day's lowest.

Prince and Whitely trading, sponsored by the brokerage firm of the same name, dropped from 7 1-2 to 50 cents a share, and closed at 20. There were several "under the rule" sales, which indicates the immediate liquidation of holdings of a suspended member. The largest of these sales were in Associated Gas, which fell more than 3 points to a new low under 26.

Electric Bond and Share dropped more than 5 points to 55, compared to the November bottom of 50. American Gas tumbled nearly 11 points, and Northern States Power A, more than 8. Losses of 1 to 3 points were recorded by practically all of the active utilities, with Middle West and Niagara Hudson recording the smaller losses. Oils dropped about 1 to 3 points, several to the new lows, with Gulf and Humble making the maximum losses. Cities Service dropped 2 to 24, and closed at 24 1-2. Standard of Indiana sagged a point to 43 1-8, another new low.

In the industrials, losses of 2 to 9 points were numerous, Aluminum Company dropping 9 to 179 1-4, but the turnover was moderate. Columbia Pictures, Deere and Dow Chemical dropped about 4. Ford of Canada A, a soft spot yesterday, lost only a fraction. Ford, Ltd., sagged a point.

Investment trusts generally were heavy. Goldman Sachs dropped 2 points to 10 1-8.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Oct. 9—(AP)—Distress selling of large quantities of grain in the late dealings today sent prices spinning downward, especially for wheat and corn. The overturn of values came chiefly after word that Prince and Whitely, a leading brokerage house with a membership on the Chicago board of trade, has suspended payment. Earlier, the grain markets received a sharp jolt too by news that United States Steel stock was down to a new low price record, but it was not until the Prince and Whitely failure was announced that grain gave way in earnest.

Closing quotations on cereals were about the day's bottommost point, with the wheat market heavy, 1 1-2 at 2 3-8c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 2 1-4 at 3c down, oats 5-8 at 1 1-8s off and provisions unchanged to 15c decline.

Provisions reflected grain weakness and downturns in the value of hogs.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 9—(AP)—Bonds joined the trend of other securities today. Declines in both foreign and domestic issues were the most drastic in several weeks and in many instances were measured in points rather than fractions. No section of the list escaped from the selling pressure which was largely ascribed to the weak share market and disturbing news from foreign countries.

The selling, which gained momentum during the afternoon, swelled the sales to $17,065,000, which has been surpassed on only a few days this year.

Nearly 100 foreign bonds sold at new lows for the year on declines ranging from fractions to 17 points. Bonds of the United Kingdom, France, and some Scandinavian countries, were virtually the only firm issues.

Showing signs of waning during the early hours, liquidation of Latin American bonds was brisk in the afternoon, and while sales were very thin in many instances, prices were off several points from the previous close. Rio Grande Do Sul 7s reacted 17 7-8 to 50 and Antioquia 3rd 7s tumbled 19 1-2. There were many losses of 5 points or more and virtually every active South American government bond set a low.

Losses among European issues were generally smaller but the selling covered a wider list of obligations than had been affected in recent sessions. German 7s and 5 1-2s, off fractionally, Austrian 7s, off 3 1-2, Finland 5 1-2s, German Central Agricultural bank 6s of July, 1960, and Italy 7s were among the prominent issues at new lows for the year. Japan 5 1-2s which have been very steady, sagged 7-8 and Belgian 6 1-2s and 6s lost a point or more. In contrast was the firmness of French bonds. The 7 1-2s equalled the year's high at 126 and the 7s advanced 3-8.

In the domestic section, considerable selling was influenced by the necessity to protect accounts in the share market. Convertible and warrant issues were very active and reacted to new lows for the year. Speculative liens gave ground readily, and many prime issues were unsettled. The averages for 30 domestic issues declined 1-2 point.

Among high grade issues, Atchison general 4s sagged 3-4. Pennsylvania general and debenture 4 1-2s lost 7-8 and 1-2, respectively. Rather large losses were registered in Canadian Pacific 4 1-2s, Colorado and Southern 4 1-2s A, Erie 5s, Denver and Rio Grande 5s, Great Northern 4 1-2s, Missouri Pacific general 4s, St. Louis San Francisco 4 1-2s of 1978, and Southern Railway general 6s.

Wide losses were sustained by speculative bonds in the industrial list, particularly those of oil and sugar companies. U. S. governments joined the downward movement. Liberties were less affected than treasury issues. The 3 3-8s yielded about 1-4 of a point.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9—(AP)—September shipments by the Baldwin Locomotive Works showed an increase over the like month last year. Shipments for September this year totaled $2,980,000, against $2,560,000 in September 1929. Shipments for the first nine months totaled $26,150,000 against $17,370,000 in the corresponding period of 1929. New bookings last month totaled $580,000, against $2,230,000 in September last year. Associated Telephone and Telegraph has declared an extra dividend of $1 a share on the $4 class A stock payable Nov. 1 to stockholders of record Oct. 17. A statement said that earnings of the company and prospects for the future seem to justify paying $2 extra each year on the class A stock. A similar extra was declared in July.

The weekly statement of the New York Federal Reserve bank, showed imports of $1,568,000 in gold, of which $1,015,000 was from Columbia, and $553,000 from other Latin American countries. Exports during the period consisted of $10,000 consigned to Germany.

OBSCENE BOOKS BEING CIRCULATED BY LENDERS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9—(AP)— Curious borrowers, willing lenders and insistent purchasers of books that have fallen into the customs bureau's category of forbidden literature are producing some interesting complications as an outgrowth of the obscene book controversy that stirred the senate during the tariff debate.

Many of the books confiscated under the old law and which were loaned to various senators as exhibits in the tariff discussion have disappeared. Some have been returned to the customs bureau and some still repose in senators' offices, but a majority of them apparently are following an endless chain of borrowers and lenders.

In addition to its difficulties in trailing the books, the customs bureau is having its hands full administering the new law's provision barring obscene and immoral books and articles. Seizures are being made almost daily and at least half a dozen importers have begun court contests to recover their foreign purchases. Two of these will be fought out in Chicago.

The Illinois League of Women Voters has endorsed a proposal for a state income tax.

JUDGE LYLE WILL SHOW NO COURTESY TO CAPONE

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—(AP)—Ten $1,000 bills tendered as bond for Ralph Capone were rejected by Judge John H. Lyle today and the senior member of the quartet of Capone brothers was tossed in a cell to await a going over at the pleasure of police interrogators.

"Treat him like any common criminal," was the court's parting command as he delivered Capone to a sergeant from the bureau of identification.

So No. 9 of the roster of "public enemies" went to the fingerprint bureau and the police lockup, manifestly crestfallen at the turn of events. Sought on a vagrancy warrant for some time, he had awaited the deposit of bond and its acceptance by a municipal court clerk last night before surrendering.

Judge Lyle was outspoken in his condemnation of the bond procedure.

"I can't imagine anybody but a Capone being turned loose on a $10,000 bond without a judge signing it," he said. "I'll have to cancel this bond because no judge approved it."

Miles J. Devine, attorney for Capone, pleaded that Capone be [illegible] by a bailiff until the bond was approved so that he would not be [illegible] and cuffed about."

"Courtesy to a Capone?" said Judge Lyle. "To a man who with his brother is the head of a gang of criminals and bluebeards, the like of which the world has never known? I would not give him a particle of courtesy. He will be taken into custody as any common criminal. Yesterday, I have been informed, Chief of Detectives Norton was too busy to interrogate this man. It is strange that a man who is undoubtedly the most powerful man in Chicago should be shunted aside for some other matter."

The court then ordered Capone taken to a cell, where John Norton, chief of detectives, left him until he could find time to question him.

REMEMBER the days when starting an automobile was real work? Retard the spark, advance the gas, prime the motor, wiggle the gear shift to make sure it's in neutral. Then crawl out and tear your innards out turning over that dumb brute of an engine.

Well, you know what the self-starter did for motoring . . .

In radio, the Uni-Selector marks a similar advance towards ease of operation. No more frantically trying to manipulate several dials at once—every operation of the set is now centered under the fingers of one hand in one control.

This new device is exclusive with Brunswick, and the new Brunswick, with Tone Control, the All-Armored Chassis, and the Rigid Tuning Scale, is the radio you'll want now and be glad to own for years to come.

IN MEMORIAM

Mrs. Alice Burns Fitzgerald

In sad and loving memory of our dear Mother who passed from this life just one year ago, Oct. 10, 1929.

Quick and sudden was the call,
Your sudden death surprised us all.
The shock was great, the blow severe,
We little thought your death so near.
Some may think you are forgotten
And our grieving hearts are healed,
But little they know of our sorrow
Within our hearts concealed.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

A double-feature bill with melodrama and comedy is the rule at the Palace theatre today and tomorrow, with "Hell Harbor," starring Lupe Velez, and "Sweethearts on Parade," with Alice White, booked together.

"Hell Harbor" is a thrilling production with a Caribbean sea town as its setting and the action around a girl who falls in love with the man she plots to ruin. Here are drama and color all together with a wonderful cast in support of Miss Velez. Among the stars are Jean Hersholt, John Holland, [illegible]

EDDIE CANTOR IN WHOOPEE AT PALACE SUNDAY

"Sweethearts on Parade" is a comedy which is lively from start to finish. It tells the story of Helen, a girl from the country, who comes to the city. Here she meets Nita, a real girl, who takes her under her wing. Together the two have many thrilling and adventurous moments but most of all they give the audience plenty of laughs.

Supporting Alice White in "Sweethearts on Parade" are Lloyd Hughes, Marie Provost, Kenneth Thomson, and many others.

Supported by a fine cast with plenty of songs and lots of dancing, Eddie Cantor comes to the Palace theatre on Sunday in "Whoopee," a stupendous screen spectacle, photographed entirely in technicolor.

Broadway Theatre

"Girl of the Golden West," which comes to Warner's Broadway tomorrow, is considered David Belasco's outstanding theatrical success, and it placed him definitely in the forefront of American play producers.

The play opened in 1905, and was given its first tryout performance in the Belasco theatre in Pittsburgh. It was so popular that it was immediately taken in to New York city, where it ran to capacity audiences during that and the following season.

It then went on "the road," where it repeated its New York success. It is still considered one of the most popular plays of repertory companies.

It served as a vehicle for increasing the fame of Blanche Bates, and made Frank Keenan, who took the role of Jack Rance, gambler and sheriff, one of America's outstanding character actors. Later the story was made into an opera, which, however, never attained the general popularity of the stage play.

Claimed Stolen Car

An automobile, stolen in West Warwick, R. I., was recovered here this afternoon when L. F. Murray, came to this city and took possession of his Ford coupe, which was stolen from that town Sept. 23. The auto, which was found abandoned on Water street and taken to a garage, was turned over to the owner.

Three arrests were made this afternoon and this evening. Two of the men taken into custody will be charged with vagrancy and intoxication. Connolly, who has been a frequenter at the municipal pier throughout the summer, was on Huntington street about 7 o'clock and there he went from house to house soliciting alms. He was so persistent in his demands for assistance that complaint was made to the police and Connolly was arrested by Patrolman Dennis Murphy.

The city's highway laborers are engaged treating the surface of many streets with a coating of tar and sand, the final repairs to be made to the highways before cold weather sets in.

Think Thief a Neighbor

Francis Fournier, 12 North street, reported to the police last night that his home had been entered during his absence and that of other members of the family. Sergeant Samuel Hick and Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey, who made an investigation, found that the thief gained entrance to the house by means of an open bedroom window. The crook, after ransacking the several rooms, found a safety box, which contained a purse with $20 in it and insurance papers. The thief carried the box to the open, where he examined the contents and removing the money, left the box, pocketbook and papers on the ground beneath the window through which he had entered the house and had taken his departure. It is believed that the crook is a resident of the neighborhood.

There was no session of the police court today, although two continued cases were scheduled for presentation. Frederick Vinal, 264 Court street, Middletown, was supposed to be tried on a charge of reckless driving, but he did not appear. He was arrested on Main street a week ago by Patrolman John Clifford, at which time his case was continued until last Monday. On that day Vinal did not present himself and the case was continued until today when he failed to be on hand and defend the charge, again. As a result the state police and the police of Middletown have been requested to arrest Vinal, a warrant being issued by Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer.

Another case that was to have been tried was that of Morris Horwitz, 269 Sherman street, New Haven, charged with violation of the city's vender law. Horwitz also failed to show up in court, but he appeared at police headquarters during the forenoon, when he applied for and was granted a vender's license, so that when the case is reopened in the police court tomorrow it will be nolled. Horwitz was arrested a week ago upon complaint of local merchants. The New Haven man had been coming to New London daily and selling automobile parts from his auto. Complaint was made to the police and Horwitz was arrested by Motorcycle Officer Carlos Stone.

Six Nephews Were Bearers

The funeral of Leslie Leiper was held this morning at 9 o'clock from St. Joseph's church and was attended by a large gathering of mourners. The high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. William C. Fitzsimons. The bearers were Albert, Louis, Arthur, Henry, Alexander and Charles Leiper, nephews of Mr. Leiper. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

LYCEUM THEATRE LOOTED OF FITTINGS AND ORNAMENTS

The Lyceum theatre, leased by the Publix Theatre, Inc., has been entered by thieves within a few weeks and practically everything movable has been stolen, the plunder being such as could be conveniently carried away by the thief and disposed of, for cash. Although the police had knowledge of the series of burglaries and had laid a trap whereby it was believed the crook would be apprehended, the thief evidently became aware that his operations had been discovered and, naturally, discontinued his thieving.

The theatre, which has been closed the greater part of two years, had been entered at various intervals and electric light bulbs, fire extinguishers, electric light fixtures, electric vacuum cleaners, carpets, mirrors, plumbing accessories, etc., stolen. When the first of the burglaries was reported to the police, an investigation was started by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh. The search for the plunder led the officer to the second hand store of O. K. Bill, Golden street, where much of the plunder was found, it having been purchased at a ridiculously low price. Included among the loot recovered were fire extinguishers, vacuum cleaners, electric light bulbs and fixtures, etc. The thief proved to be a young man of about 20, who claimed that he came into possession of the goods legitimately and, as his statements were convincing, the merchandise was purchased. However, when it was revealed that the goods bought had been stolen, the proprietor of the store was requested to notify the police in the event that the youth returned with additional plunder. The thief returned to the store a few days later with several mirrors, that had been stolen from dressing rooms. When questioned, the youth said his name was Weaver and that he resided at 121 Washington street. He then left hurriedly, but said that he would return for his money, which he never did. The name and address, as was supposed, proved fictitious. A search for the young man has so far proved unsuccessful.

Chester Parcheski, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Parcheski, of Winthrop street, and Miss Mildred Carey Briggs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Briggs, of Waller street, were married at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church Monday by Rev. George Clark. The best man was Charles H. Briggs, Jr., brother of the bride, and the matron of honor was Mrs. John Falvey. Mr. and Mrs. Parcheski will make their home on Wildrose avenue, Waterford.

Mrs. Alice Simpson, teacher at Nathan Hale grammar school, is ill at her home in Noank.

GEN. HAMILTON COMMANDS COAST DEFENSE DISTRICT

Ends Piles Quick

Pile sufferers can only get quick, safe and lasting relief by removing the cause—bad circulation of the blood in the lower bowel. Cutting and external remedies can't do this—an internal medicine must be used. HEM-ROID, the prescription of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, a specialist, succeeds, because it relieves this blood congestion and strengthens the affected parts. HEM-ROID is sold by druggists everywhere, and has such a wonderful record of success right in this city that Lee & Osgood Co. says to every Pile sufferer, try HEM-ROID at my risk. It must end all Pile agony or you get your money back.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The George P. Clark Company, Windsor Locks.

When hard surface floors came into use over a half century ago means for protecting floor surfaces against excessive wear were conceived by George P. Clark, founder of the present George P. Clark company.

Patent papers were issued to Mr. Clark in 1877 under the heading of a three piece rubber tired wheel for protecting floor surfaces. In a short time recognized industrial firms began equipping their floor trucks with Clark rubber tired wheels and casters.

Manufacturing of Clark products was originally started in rented quarters in the Dwight Skinner building, but in order to meet he growing demand the Clark company erected and equipped a building of their own in 1893. Several additions were added to the original building and in 1913 land and buildings of the Windsor Silk company were acquired for expansion purposes.

On January 1st, 1920, the Clark company moved into a new modern three story concrete building embodying all the latest improvements in building construction. Additional metal working equipment was installed which has since been extensively enlarged and improved so that today, their manufacturing facilities are second to none in their particular line of endeavor.

Clark material handling equipment at the present time is used in all parts of the civilized world and under varied conditions.

In all U. S. government airports Clark casters will be found rendering a worth while service. On board U. S. airplane carriers Clark rubber tired wheels are considered standard equipment. Even in Hollywood when a phoney elephant scene was recently enacted the movements of the elephants were occasioned through the use of Clark casters.

Upon the death of George P. Clark in January, 1920, his son, George E. Clark, was elected president and treasurer. Present management of the company is invested in George E. Clark, president and treasurer; L. C. Hunter, secretary; Frank L. Johnston, business manager.

ACTION WITHOUT HARM WHENEVER CONSTIPATED

Here's a way to be rid of constipation and its ills—a way that works quickly, effectively, but gently.

A candy Cascaret at night—the next morning you're feeling fine. Breath is sweetened; tongue cleared; biliousness headaches, dizziness, gas vanish. Repeat the treatment two or three nights to get the souring waste out of your system. See how appetite and energy return; how digestion improves.

The action of Cascarets is sure, complete, helpful to everyone. They are made from cascara, which doctors agree actually strengthens bowel muscles. All drug stores have the 10c boxes.

A Dollar or Two

(An old jingle that was set to music sixty-five or seventy years ago)

While with cautious steps we tread our way through
This intricate world as other folks do
May we still on our journey be able to view
The benevolent face of a dollar or two.

For an excellent friend is a dollar or two;
No friend is as true as a dollar or two;
Through country or town as you pass up or down,
No passport as good as a dollar or two.

Would you read yourself out of the bachelor crew,
And for the hand of a female divinity sue,
You must be ready the handsome to do,
Always it may cost you a dollar or two.

If you wish your existence, with faith to imbue,
And enroll in the ranks of the sanctified few,
To earn a good name and a soft-cushioned pew,
You must freely come down with a dollar or two.

The gospel is preached for a dollar or two,
Salvation is gained for a dollar or two;
You may sin some at times, but the worst of all crimes
Is to find yourself short a dollar or two.

CYRUS AVERY OF POQUONNOC BRIDGE FATALLY INJURED BY AUTOMOBILE

(Special to The Bulletin).

NEW LONDON, Oct. 9. — Cyrus Avery, 87, was almost instantly killed tonight when struck at Poquonoc Bridge, by an automobile, driven by M. V. Small of 19 Arnold avenue, Edgewood, R. I. He was well known, being a retired farmer. He was a republican in politics, and had served the town of Groton as a member of the board of relief. He was at one time chaplain of Groton grange, also of New London county Pomona grange.

Small was arrested by State Police Officer James Dygert on a technical charge of manslaughter and was released upon furnishing a surety on his bond of $1,000 for his appearance in Groton town court next Monday.

Small was driving to his home in Edgewood and when about 200 feet west of Cromwell's store, he felt a sudden jar of his auto and upon alighting, inspected his fender which was dented. He went back, coming upon the unconscious form of the aged man, lying beside the highway. Medical assistance was summoned but before a physician arrived Mr. Avery ha ddied from his injuries, which included a fractured neck.

Mr. Avery left his home on the South road shortly before 8 o'clock to attend the republican caucus in Groton town hall, Poquonoc Bridge. While walking on the right hand side of the highway the automobile driven by Small and headed in the same direction, struck the aged man, hurling him several feet.

Small, after his arrest, said that he was driving at a moderate rate of speed and that he observed no pedestrian in the highway. He said that a few seconds before he felt the jar of his auto, two automobiles approaching from the opposite direction, interfered with his vision. He continued to drive at a slow rate and while doing so felt the jar of his auto and discovered that he had hit Mr. Avery.

Mr. Avery was a brother of the Norwich city treasurer, Charles S. Avery, and his senior by about two years. Word of the fatal accident was telephoned to City Treasurer Avery during the evening and he will go to Poquonoc Bridge this (Friday) morning, where his brother, who was a widower, lived with the family of a grandson, Adrian C. Marquardt.

Cyrus Avery was born at Poquonoc Bridge and that section had always been his home. For many years he had been deacon of the Poquonoc Bridge Baptist church, which had made him deacon emeritus some time ago. His death leaves City Treasurer Avery as the last of the family of five children to survive.

NEW BLANKS RECEIVED FOR PROBATION REPORTS

The local probation office has received its initial supply of probation officers' monthly report blanks for the office of K. L. Messenger, chief juvenile probationer and commissioner of the state bureau of welfare.

The blanks provide for a much more detailed report than has been in use and is so arranged that statistics can be readily derived from the reports which go to Hartford from all over the state.

The new system is to go into effect throughout the state from Oct. 1. It is required by state law that each probation office keep records of all juvenile cases and make reports to the probation office headquarters in Hartford. The facts for the state reports are taken from the individual investigation records which are required by law before juveniles can be presented in a juvenile court.

The juvenile reports, which are separate from adult probation reports, tell how many cases are pending at the beginning of each month, how many new cases, how many cases disposed of during the month, the ages of the children involved, the race, reasons referred to the probation department, the nature of the dispositions and the amount of collections for restitution or reparation.

Remarkable Apples

A Wolf River apple tree at the home of Miss Ella P. King, 58 Union street, Norwich, has yielded nearly four bushels of big, handsome red apples this season. The tree was planted about ten years ago by Miss King's father, the late Thomas Voorhees, who bought it from a Rochester dealer, but who did not live to see it bear. The land on which this lone apple tree stands was purchased fully 70 years ago by Mr. Voorhees from the Tyler estate, owned by the ancestors of W. Tyler Olcott, of Church street. There was a tradition that the original Dame Tyler could ride her horse from her home at Norwich Town down to the present Trinity Episcopal church yet be on her own land holdings all the time.

The house, a story and a half dwelling, is owned by Patrick F. Barry.

At 11:22 o'clock Thursday morning, Engine No. 3 responded to a telephone call for a brush fire on land off Fanning avenue. The brush fire, it is understood, had been burning for nearly a week.

Credit Rating Bureau Meeting

The first meeting of the credit bureau of the chamber of commerce for the current year was held on Wednesday morning with a good attendance. The increased number of calls during the past two months shows that the interest of the credit bureau is increasing to say nothing of its great value. These meetings will be held every Wednesday morning in the chamber of commerce rooms at 10 o'clock at which delinquent information of all kinds will be discussed, thereby warranting the attendance and interest of every member belonging to the bureau. The officers of the bureau will extend a welcome to any non-members to sit in at one of these meetings if they are interested in the workings and help afforded by this service.

BRAZILIAN REBELS CLAIM VICTORY IN MINOR BATTLE

Battle Was Fought At Joinville, One of the Two Government Holdings in South Brazil—There Were 16 Rebel Casualties—Part of Defending Forces Surrendered—Revolutionary Leaders Assert That Their Troops Are Surrounding the Federal Forces Near the Border of Sao Paulo State and That a Heavy Battle is Impending

PORTO ALEGRE, RIO GRANDE DO SUL, Brazil, Oct. 10.—(AP)—Brazilian federals and rebels today fought a battle at Joinville, a Santa Catharina city which is one of the two government holdings in south Brazil, which resulted in 16 rebel casualties and the surrender of part of the defending forces.

A communique obtained by the correspondent of the Buenos Aires newspaper La Nacion gave a few details of the conflict. The communique, sent from Curityba by Caldas Braga, revolutionary chieftain who led the assault on Joinville, said the Eighth battery of artillery and a naval battalion of two officers and 190 men had surrendered before the rebel onslaught.

Two civilians and one soldier were killed in the rebel ranks, and 13 of their men were wounded.

Despite the surrender of two units, Captain Tregildo and a force of Santa Catharina state police held out. A company of rebel soldiers and a detachment of the 13th battalion of sappers attacked the police rear guard, while other revolutionaries set out to capture the officers of the Eighth artillery battery, who did not surrender with their men.

Other revolutionary information obtainable here today said that Deputy Nereu Ramos headed a force which had occupied San Joaquin, state of Santa Catharina.

The Rio Grande Do Sul house of representatives today voted a credit of 50,000 contos (about $500,000) to carry on the revolutionary movement. Porto Alegre banks resumed operations today and reported that receipts were greater than withdrawals.

Revolutionary chieftains also asserted that their troops were hemming the federal regulars on all sides, with advance skirmishes indicating that a heavy battle soon would be fought near the border of Sao Paulo state.

In the northeast the rebels claim the states of Pernambuco, Alagoas, Ceara, Piauhy and Rio Grande Do Norte, with a strong army of 8,000 men under Captain Juarez Tabara marching to attack the federal defenses at Bahia.

In the south the revolutionists assert that they hold practically everything except the city of Florianopolis, state of Santa Catharina, and predict that they shortly will take over that town.

It is in the central part of the republic, however, that the rebel leaders say they are pressing the federals hard. Marching toward the expected battle in Parana, which has been predicted for 24 hours, are 8,000 rebel troops under General Miguel Costa and 5,000 Parana soldiers commanded by Colonel Sonza Filho. These forces hope to unite near Castro and, with other revolutionary troops now in Parana, create an army of 40,000. With a victory here they would sweep on toward the prosperous city of Sao Paulo, a rich prize.

They also would be able to turn some troops backward to attack the federals in Florianopolis, with others marching up from Rio Grande Do Sul to engage the government forces in rear.

Other revolutionaries, operating principally out of the state of Minas Geraes—directly north of the capital—are moving to surround Rio De Janeiro and isolate it.

The revolutionists claim that the army from Minas Geraes has invaded the state of Espirito Santo, along the coast northeast of the capital, and from there have gone southward into the state of Rio De Janeiro itself, capturing the towns of Itaperuana and Hiracema and advancing near Ciudad Campos, important junction of four railroad lines.

Capture of this city would destroy rail service from Rio De Janeiro northeastward. Yesterday the rebels claimed to have cut the capital off from Sao Paulo and the south by the capture of Lorena, a railroad junction.

At the same time another force from Minas Geraes is said to have entered Sao Paulo state in the far northwest, taking the city of Igarapaya.

Regulations concerning the transportation of merchandise in and out of Sao Paulo were tightened up by the authorities today.

FISHING SCHOONERS ARE READY FOR RACE TODAY

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Oct. 10.—(AP)—This was a day of preparation for the schooners Blue Nose, out of Lunenburg, N. S., and Gertrude L. Thebaud, pride of the Gloucester fleet. Tomorrow they will sail the second race of a two out of three series for an international fishermen's challenge trophy donated by Sir Thomas Lipton and cash prizes.

After her victory in the opening race yesterday, Captain Ben Pine, skipper of Gloucester's hope, found little to do aboard her so he and his crew took her out for a between-race workout.

But there was much to be done aboard the big Canadian schooner. Her sails were taken separately to Marian-Cooney's sail loft to be recut. They fitted woefully yesterday and to that factor many blamed her 15-minute defeat. As the canvas was brought back Blue Nose's crew immediately bent it on again. Blue Nose's mainsail required the most attention. It was much too large yesterday and throughout the race Captain Angus Walters was forced to swing it from the topping lift instead of letting the sail support it, apparently gambling on continued light air. Captain Angus removed four tons of iron ballast from his vessel. The Thebaud had an undisputed advantage in the 15-mile breeze of the opening contest.

The race committee, too, expect light air for the second contest and extended the time limit for the 37 5-8 mile course to seven hours, instead of six.

INVESTIGATING PRIMARY ELECTIONS IN DELAWARE

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 10.—(AP)—Investigation of the recent primary elections in Delaware was begun today by United States Senators Nye and Patterson, but only a handful of the thirteen witnesses subpoenaed were heard.

Charles F. Curley, Wilmington attorney who managed the selection of delegates to the democratic state convention, said the campaign for former United States Senator Thomas F. Bayard, the democratic candidate for senator, had cost $33,936.

He submitted a list of contributors, including Mrs. Elizabeth DuPont Bayard, wife of the candidate, who gave $11,500; John J. Raskob, chairman of the democratic national committee, $7,400; E. E. DuPont, $4,000; Pierre DuPont, $2,000; Irene DuPont, $8,000, and W. F. Raskob, $500.

Curley said $19,654 of the total campaign cost had been spent for maintenance of headquarters in Wilmington and rural Newcastle county, and that $300 for transportation of delegates to the state convention was not included in the statement of expenses.

The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, he said, had no connection with the campaign committee and made no contributions to it. No other organization, he said, spent any money on Bayard's behalf.

Blythe, of St. Louis, with a plot to defraud stockholders of the Pan-American Western Petroleum company. Blythe filed suit in federal court demanding an accounting.

Blythe charged Doheny, anticipating a victory by the government in an oil lease cancellation suit affecting the Pan-American company and under consideration in the federal court here, sold a controlling interest in the company to Richfield for "a wholly inadequate and unconscionable sum."

Made co-defendants with Doheny and the Richfield company in the suit are the Petroleum Securities company, the Pan-American Western Petroleum companq, J. C. Anderson, Fred Ritter, C. W. Smith and R. M. Sands.

Blythe, who reperesents himself as appearing for all class B stockholders in Pan-American, charged Doheny sold the controlling interest in an "effort to get out from under."

On Oct. 17 they will sail for France, where they will start another, though less extensive, good will tour of Europe.

N. P. Angle Replaces Bishop J.Cannon, Jr.

As Head of Girls' Institution Cannon Founded and Headed For 24 Years

BLACKSTONE, Va., Oct. 10—(AP)—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., was replaced today as chairman of the board of trustees of the Blackstone College for Girls, an institution he founded and headed for 24 years, by N. P. Angle, of Rocky Mount, Va.

An announcement by the board after a meeting today said all eighteen members present voted for Mr. Angle to succeed Bishop Cannon.

Although members of the board of trustees declined to say whether Bishop Cannon had resigned, it was known his resignation was before the board.

The bishop was not present at today's meeting.

Members of the board all declined to say whether the change in the chairmanship was connected with new charges filed recently against Bishop Cannon by four traveling elders of the Methodist Episcopal church, South.

Bishop Cannon virtually established the Blackstone institution in 1894 when it was known as the Blackstone Female institute. From that time until 1918 when he was elected bishop he was head of the school with the exception of a short time when he was engaged in church work at Lake Jimnaluska, N. C.

TO GO "TO THE BOTTOM" OF THE PROHIBITION QUESTION

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10—(AP)—Prepared to go "to the bottom" of the prohibition question, President Hoover's law enforcement commission today neared a formula for solving it.

This formula, still subject to future discussion, provides that the 10 men and one woman of the commission determine first whether the dry law is being enforced, and if not, whether it can be made enforceable.

Should the commission reach the conclusion that prohibition can not be enforced the next step would be a decision whether it shall recommend for modification or repeal.

There is no unanimity among the eleven minds on all details of such a program, particularly over the latter part of it, but as the commissioners went home over the week-end to study further the voluminous reports on prohibition there appeared to be signs that this plan was gaining favor.

The commission will reassemble here again next Wednesday and Chairman Wickersham plans to continue the sessions almost until election time.

Some of the commissioners remained here over the week end but these were from far distant points and there was no indication that any special group was combining to draft a prohibition report.

BROKER'S CLERK SHOT TO DEATH IN PHILADELPHIA

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10—(AP)—Edwin W. Sprankle, member of a socially prominent suburban family and a confidential clerk of Carstairs and Company, stock brokers, was shot to death today at the company's offices by a former customer who then committed suicide.

Sprankle, who was 32, was shot three times while he talked with the former customer, Adam Jakus, a barber of Oakview, a suburb. They were standing inside the Walnut street entrance to the broker's office on the ground floor of the stock exchange building and nearly a hundred persons were in the company's board room. General confusion and alarm followed the shooting.

James B. Carstairs, senior member of the brokerage firm, said Jakus had closed out his account on September 15 and received a check for the balance. Carstairs said he was not known to have had further dealings with the company and could offer no motive for the shooting.

Story Of Slayin[illegible] Of Women-Miss[illegible]ries

Had Been S[illegible]ed to Keen Physic[illegible] Mental Torture by C[illegible]nese Bandits

FOOCHOW, China, Oct. 10—(AP)—Out of the mountains of North Fukien came the story today of the terrible fate of the two British woman missionaries, Miss Eleanor June Harrison and Miss Edith Nettleton, slain at the end of weeks of negotiations with bandits for their ransom.

The two women, both advanced in years, and of long mission service among the Chinese, were subjected to keen physical and mental torture and finally, to quote those who attempted to free them, "clumsily and brutally beheaded."

The women were treated throughout with the utmost cruelty. Miss Harrison was forced some days before her own execution to witness the end of four captives of the Chinese bandits, one of them shot and the other three beheaded.

The sufferings of the women were related by A. J. Martin, British consul at Kienning, and the Rev. Dr. Alfred Sills, of the Church Missionary society, who returned from Kienning after several weeks of unavailing attempts to save the captives.

Both emissaries said that for three months in a communist lair in the mountains of North Wukien, the two missionaries were subjected to the most brutal physical and mental treatment. They were allowed neither exercise nor privacy, the narrators said and were guarded night and day by four bandits who repeatedly told them a horrible doom was hanging over their heads.

Finally after an attack by a rival band upon the communist headquarters ten miles from the scene of their hiding place, the two women were taken to a lonely place in a hillside and slain.

The two missionaries left Chungan, in North Fukien, on June 26, for Foochow. They traveled by boat down the Minkian river only fifteen miles before they were captured.

Chinese officials at Kien Yang-Hsien, informed of the abduction, at first displayed indifference, the British investigators said, but afterwards sent troops to the area. No strenuous efforts were made, however, to release the missionaries.

Hope for their ultimate freedom was entertained until the middle of August. It was believed that the rebel leader Luh Hsing-Pang, encamped near Foochow, would liberate the captives and his troops were, in fact, sent to Chungan, where the Reds were holding up the tea crop. After routing the communists Luh rested on his laurels and returned to Kien Ning-Fu with an escort of 5,000 Chinese refugees and a quantity of tea.

More recently the Chinese captors sent a finger in a letter to the British authorities saying they had cut it from Miss Nettleton's hand and unless their demand of $50,000 ransom was complied with at once further harm would come to the missionaries.

Advances were made at the direction of the Church Missionary society to meet ransom demands but without avail.

NEGRO COUPLE ARRESTED IN CONNECTION WITH MURDER

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., Oct. 10.—(AP)—Sheriff Frank Riddick of Madison county today arrested Henry Fletcher and Epsie Burns, Negroes, on charges of murder in connection with the slaying of H. E. Ross here nearly two weeks ago, and at the same time said he was investigating charges that the Burns woman operated a "baby murder farm" near Decatur, Ala.

The arrests, the sheriff said, were made on the basis of an anonymous letter which said the couple could throw light on the slaying and that bodies of slain infants would be found beneath the floor of a store operated by the woman.

Sheriff Riddick said the letter hinted that the Negroes had the pistol with which Ross was slain. Officers said they found a .38-calibre pistol in possession of the woman.

Thomas Ross, son of the slain man; J. F. Matheny, foreman in the Ross Dyeing plant; a Huntsville woman, and a Negro already were under arrest in connection with the slaying, which was said to have been done by an intruder surprised in the Ross home.

Ross' wife was wounded by her husband's assailant as she fled the home. She said a Negro did the shooting.

PLANE COLUMBIA WAS MORE THAN 150 MILES OFF COURSE

Boyd and Cannon Landed the Transatlantic Plane On a Beach in the Scilly Islands, a Little More Than 24 Hours After Take-Off At Harbor Grace, N. F.—Plane Was Not Sighted Anywhere in Ireland—Landed Less Than 300 Miles Short of Its Goal, Croydon, Eng.—Fliers to Go Away Early Today For Their Destination

CROYDON, England, Oct. 10.—(AP)—More than 150 miles off their course, Captain J. Errol Boyd and Lieutenant Harry P. Connor safely landed the veteran trans-Atlantic monoplane Columbia soon after 5 p. m. (noon EST) today in the Scilly Isles, ending a flight of a little more than 24 hours from Newfoundland.

It was the veteran Columbia's second trans-Atlantic hop.

The airmen telegraphed to London from Tresco, one of the island group off land's end, tip of southwestern England, that they hoped to get away early tomorrow for Croydon airdrome, their destination.

Their message, sent to Charles A. Levine, who flew the Atlantic with Clarence Chamberlin in the Columbia in 1927, said the monoplane was undamaged. They landed on a beach in the little island. Both were well.

Word of the Columbia's landing reached officials at the airdrome here from the coast guard station on St. Mary's Island, close to Tresco. This message said motor trouble had forced the plane down less than 300 miles short of its goal.

Another report, received at Penzance, Cornwall, however, said damaged gasoline tank had cut short the flight.

The solitary telegraph line to Tresco from London shut down at the regular hour tonight but was reopened later to let a few messages through for the aviators.

Before confirmation of the landing was received, the last previous report had showed the fliers in the Atlantic shipping lane about 200 miles off land's end. Boyd and Connor were not sighted anywhere in Ireland, though civic guards had been told to watch for them.

Apparently their course took them well to the south of the Free State.

Information that the sturdy monoplane had completed its second crossing was received with relief by a small crowd gathered at Croydon airdrome to welcome the aviators.

Among those at the field were Charles A. Levine, Dave Shade, the boxer, who came over from Paris by airplane to greet the aviators, and members of the American and Canadian colonies in London.

Lieutenant Connor, reputed to be an excellent navigator, failed to hit "the nail on the head" as he did on the Columbia's flight from New York to Bermuda some months ago.

JUDGE BERTINI DECLINES TO WAIVE IMMUNITY

NEW YORK, Oct. 10—(AP)—General Sessions Judge Amedeo A. Bertini, who said ten days ago that "no judicial officer should refuse to sign a waiver" concerning his appointment, declined today to waive immunity before a special grand jury investigating his selection for the bench.

He appeared in response to a subpoena after refusing to testify voluntarily before the grand jury, which has indicted Former Magistrate George F. Ewald and three others on office-buying charges. Governor Roosevelt has asked Attorney General Ward to send him the grand jury records concerning Bertini for possible action by the state senate.

The judge's exit from the grand jury room became a flight from newspapermen and a jeering group of idle bystanders who followed him from the county courthouse to his chambers in the criminal courts building. Accompanied by a court attendant, he left the county courthouse hurriedly by a side entrance.

A taxicab went slowly by. Judge Bertini sprinted and hopped on the running board, but the driver waved him off, shouting, "I've got a fare." A policeman then escorted him the rest of the way to his chambers.

Earlier in the day Judge Bertini denied a rumor he intended to resign.

"Look me straight in the eye," he told reporters, "and tell me if I look like a man who has done anything wrong.

"I have no intention of resigning."

INVESTIGATING RUMORS OF "FIXERS" FOR CRIMINALS

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—(AP)—Isidor J. Kresel, special counsel for the appellate division in its investigation into the magistrate's courts today gave his attention to rumors that there exists in a Broadway hotel a clearing house for "fixers."

These fixers, the rumors said, claim to be able to kill any sort of criminal charge, from misdemeanor to felony, if the defendant can pay enough.

One report reaching the special counsel was that a certain fourth offender, facing life under the Baumes law, bought his freedom for $50,000. Three persons said to be connected with the alleged clearing house were questioned today at Mr. Kresel's office but he refused to discuss these witnesses.

REVIVAL REPORTED IN THE STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 10—(AP)—Constructive forces gained the upper hand in the stock exchange today, stemming a flood of liquidation which swept through the market during the earlier hours of trading, and precipitating a swift upturn in prices which sharply squeezed the bears.

Although many leading shares were depressed $2 to $5 to new low prices for the year, two years, or longer, and several active shares dropped $5 to $10, the support lent to the market in the early afternoon was so powerful that the price average of 90 leading shares showed a net gain of $3.50, and individual advances extended to $8 a share.

CONTEMPT CASE AGAINST DR. TURCOTTE IS CONTINUED

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 10—At a short calendar session of the Windham county superior court held here today a continuance until next Friday was ordered in the contempt proceedings against Dr. Samuel J. Turcotte, charged with failure to pay alimony. Judge Newell S. Jennings of Bristol stated that another short calendar would be held Friday. Dr. Turcotte, represented by Attorney S. B. Harvey, testified that in view of business conditions he was unable to meet the specified weekly payments. He said that his practice had been poor since August and even now he has bills outstanding against him.

On September 27, 1929, Mrs. Ann Turcotte, now of Saylesville, R. I., was granted a divorce on the grounds of intolerable cruelty. She was granted $500 in a lump sum for alimony and Dr. Turcotte was ordered to make weekly payments of $25. She was also allowed the custody of their five-year-old son, Maurice Raymond and was to receive $10 for his support. On April 17, last, Dr. Turcotte made application for modification of that award but after a hearing, the application was denied by the court. Mrs. Turcotte asserted that since August of this year her former husband has been sending weekly installments of $15 instead of the $35 awarded for herself and child. She filed an application to have her former husband adjudged in contempt because of this allegation of his failure to abide by the alimony specifications.

In court today Mrs. Turcotte said that she had been residing with her sister and the latter's family in Saylesville and has not been working. Judge Jennings called the attorneys, S. B. Harvey and John H. King, representing Mrs. Turcotte, into conference and subsequently ordered the continuance.

A non-suit was declared in the case of Fred Wood versus Ray Wood, both of Killingly, a motion to set aside a property conveyance because undue influence had been exercised on their father, Daniel A. Wood, now deceased, by the defendant. This case was started at Putnam Thursday and concluded today with the plea of Attorney Irving Miron of Putnam for a non-suit.

The court took under advisement the case of Archibald Macdonald, Jr., administrator, versus Howard R. Bullard et al for a judgment that one-half of the proceeds of the foreclosure by sale be paid to Clara G. Bullard. A continuance of one week was ordered in the case of Wladyslaw Kozlowski versus Peter and Tillie Blash, after default had been entered in favor of the plaintiff.

Court will reconvene in this city next Tuesday and on the following day the session will be at Putnam. The Shea hearing has been definitely set for this city on Tuesday, October 21.

The gun was secured from the Rock Island arsenal through the good offices of Senator Frederick C. Walcott who took the matter up with the secretary of war on request of the local post. Personal appreciation for securing the trophy was made to Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley, a past national commander of the V. F. W., by the local delegates at the Baltimore encampment in September.

The guns are now being prepared for shipment and the official shipping order of the war department has been received.

WINE IN HORSE FEED BRINGS WEIGHT GAIN

BORDEAUX, France—(AP)—In France they've tried wine as a cheap, nutritious food for horses.

Professor Portmann of the faculty of medicine at the University of Bordeaux says it's better than oats. Wine was substituted for oats in the feed of several horses in an experiment. It was mixed with bran and broken up corn cake.

On this diet the horses furnished as much, if not more work than when oats were fed, and at the end of four and a half months they had gained from 35 to 40 pounds.

WINDHAM ADOPTS ONLY SCHOOL BUDGET PENDING AUDIT OF THE TOWN'S BOOKS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 10—The annual town meeting held in the town hall tonight adopted the annual town school budget of $204,000, approved of three smaller appropriations and after giving authority to the selectmen to borrow money for current expenses postponed action on the annual town budget of $200,000 for two weeks. Advocates of the postponement pointed to the fact that the budget drawn up by the past administration would possibly be subjected to revision, especially in view of the fact that a report of the audit of the town books is to be made known later. First Selectman Albert L. French also indicated to the meeting that other minor changes were contemplated.

The regular annual appropriations approved were: $960 for the welfare bureau; $950 to St. Joseph's hospital and $100 to the Windham Center library. This latter appropriation is provided by the Windham Center people. The meeting was replete with debates in which one of the spokesmen was Eugene Dion. Mr. Dion made an amendment that the school appropriation be reduced to $190,000. A rising vote showed however that a mere handful of an attendance of 400 was in favor of this reduction. It was voted to take no action on the reports of the town officers, pending the result of the audit now going on. Mayor Walter R. King was moderator and Frank P. Fenton was clerk.

GRAVE MENACE OF FIRE IN PRESENT DAY SEASON

Returning from a ride through the eastern outlying districts of the town Friday, a local man states that at about every farm-house he saw the daily preparations being made, with 40-quart milk cans and barrels, to get the evening's water supply for stock and household use. One farmer has a deep well in his cellar, that, dry now, has been unfailing since it was completed, close to 50 years. Read's saw mill brook is bone dry and Friday a man stood on the sandy bottom of a deep hole, where April 20th he caught a string of trout in three feet of water. A Stone Hill farmer said Friday, "I hope and pray that nothing gets afire here, for I haven't a drop of water on the place to fight it with!"

Gave Meritorious Program

The Friday assembly, grade seven A, Stella Sella, leader, at the Riverside grammar school, included the following program: Piano solo, Virginia Paquette, "Village Dance"; Governor Trumbull's Fire Prevention Proclamation, read by Florence Czakarowski; essays on fire prevention, John Zavistoske, John Kudelchuk and Joseph Polomski; harmonica solo, Archie Bednarz; geographical knowledge in ancient times, told by Rita Godek; the westward march of the races, told by Florence Pliska; song, class, "Columbus Day"; recitation, "Columbus Crossing the Atlantic," by Paul Mykietyn, Edward Koziol and Archie Bednarz; piano solo, Gladys Jarvis, "Polish Dance," by Schaswenka; Columbus exercise, by eight girls; song, by ten girls, "Columbus First Who Came"; harmonica solo, Archie Bednarz.

Local weather sharps' prediction that a warm spell would follow the frosts of the early days of October seems to be sound, Friday the silver ran up to 78, during the afternoon.

The south curbing has been set along the Fisk Rubber company's property, showing that Slater avenue at the intersection of Main street, is to be raised several inches, which will change the sidewalk grade at Dearnley's store.

Many recent elections in Griswold, especially so in the borough, have been pretty tame, not to say apathetic affairs. In the last two borough elections, the republican ticket has amounted to a practical ratification of the candidates selected in the democratic caucus. This arrangement with the following unanimous elections, was productive of generally satisfactory and agreeable results. Now, it appears there is to be a change, with a list of 140 voters to be made between this and election day. If the irons already in the fire, with more to be placed therein at Monday's democratic caucus, are a fair criterion, then Griswold is to witness again a real political contest. It is to be understood that nowadays no one would ever do such a thing as buy a vote. However, the facts were recalled Friday concerning the memorable election 40 years ago when the late George A. Haskell, republican, ran against the late Clark W. Reynolds, democratic, for representative. Men, who today remember that day and year, are agreed that it was said to have cost over $1,000 to carry the town.

Right in line with all the splendid improvements which have been and are being made in this up-to-date town is to be the last word in a miniature golf course. Wilfred LeClaire and Joseph Farrell are the promoters and Henry Ballon is constructing this new course which will be known as Riverview miniature golf course.

Miss Margaret Chick, of Cambridge, Mass., is the guest of Mrs. F. E. Robinson.

Mrs. Alex McNicol and Mrs. A. B. Reed have returned from Calais, Maine, where they have been for some time on account of the illness of Mrs. Reed's sister, Mrs. J. Harding Baker.

To Observe Columbus Day

All the schools of the town and banks will be closed Monday for Columbus day.

It has been suggested that people who have up-to-date books in good condition might like to donate them to Slater library, of course with the understanding that they shall be inspected by the librarians as to their desirability. Many people buy books, or are members of book clubs who would like to dispose of the volumes and when the addition to the library is completed there will be room for many more books. At present, the library is open on Saturday afternoons and evenings, and any books can be left there, or at any other time at the home of Mrs. Everett H Hiscox.

All-Stars To Meet Accos

The local fans are to be afforded an opportunity Sunday afternoon at two o'clock, on the Ashland grounds to see the last great ball game of the season when Terry McGovern's All-Stars meet the Accos. DANIELSON

MR. AND MRS. BURROWS OBSERVE 60TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 10—Today, following the announcement that yesterday they had passed the 60th anniversary of their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Burrows were receiving many congratulations and good wishes. In all the years that have since elapsed their home has been in Danielson, a community where they are known to about everyone and enjoy the utmost respect.

Mr. Burrows, despite his advancing years remains the active head of the show business that his father established 100 years ago, and is the dean of all the business men of the borough.

Mr. and Mrs. Burrows still smilingly recall that the romance culminated in an elopment, and that the horse Mr. Burrows' first hired to make the trip to Packer, where they married, ran away and threw him out of the carriage, but that unfortunate incident interfered not a whit with their plans. Not for two years after it occurred did they make announcement of their wedding.

Prior to her marriage Mrs. Burroughs was Miss Lena Stevens. Her parents were Henry and Elizabeth Stevens, and she was born in New York, June 14, 1851 She came to Danielson as a little girl.

Mr. Burrows' parents were William and Hannah Hopkins Burrows, and he was born in Danielson, Feb. 17, 1853. It is recalled that his father used what is now a section of Main street as a sheep pasture prior to the construction of the railroad.

Mr. Burrows has been an active figure in Danielson throughout his life. For years he was warden of the borough and also served for a long time as a member of the court of burgesses. He served in the fire department, and for 18 years was leader of the Quinebaug band, which was a good one, old residents recall.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Burrows are comfortably well, though Mrs. Burrows' health has not been the best for several years. They have two children, Mrs. Sidney H. Perry and Mrs. Emma Warren, both of Danielson, four grandchildren and four great grandchildren

Southbridge, Willimantic, New Bedford, Fall River, Grosvenordale, Wauregan and Leominster will be represented by drill teams that will come here Saturday to participate in prize drills at the town hall, with Guard St. James acting as host. Several girls' teams are to take part in the drilling contests, the winners to be selected by judges who are members of local National guard organizations. A parade of the various guards is to be held prior to the drill this at about 7.15.

Next Tuesday evening the democrats of the town of Killingly are to assemble here to name their candidates for representatives. Who are candidates for these nominations had not been announced up to this afternoon. Whether or not the caucus will endorse Judge Sabin S. Russell, the republican nominee for judge of probate, as has been done in other years, or whether no nomination at all will be made, was not generally known today, and may be a matter for consideration when the caucus assembles.

"The Greatest Promise of Jesus." will be Rev. Chester J. Armstrong's subject at the Sunday morning service at the Baptist church. The church school is to meet at noon. The subject at the meeting of the Young People's council at 6.45 will be Fun—Is There Anything Wrong With Our Idea of Fun? The discussion will be led by William Richardson. A chorus choir will lead the singing at the evening service at 7 o'clock, when the new song books are to be used. At this service Rev. Mr. Armstrong's topic will be Fate, Is Destiny Marked For Us? Are We Bound to Travel a Certain Path? What Does Forgiveness of Sin Imply? How Far Away is Hell. There will be baptism at this service.

In connection with his annual report as health officer of the town of Killingly, Dr. W. H. Judson made it clear today that he is not seeking more compensation than the $400 he is receiving for any work he may do in connection with the health of school children. The report merely points out, he said that some towns no larger than Killingly have a school physician, as distinct from a health officer, and in some instances such school physicians received as much as $1200 annually in Windham county. Dr. Judson said he is satisfied with his compensation as health officer.

The selectmen and town clerk of Killingly have a day's work ahead of them for Saturday, inasmuch as there are nearly 200 persons, men and women who may be expected to appear to have their qualifications to be admitted as electors examined.

At stated intervals throughout this month assessors of the town of Killingly will receive lists of taxable property at various places they have designated in the different villages. For the convenience of taxpayers the assessors, at specified times are to receive lists in Goodyear, Elmville, Dayville, Attawaugan, Ballouville, Pineville and at three different places in East Killingly. A considerable number of new dwellings built in the last twelve months will be in the tax lists of the town for the first time this fall.

Mrs. Frank J. Gorman was hostess to the members of the Entre Nous club at her home on Cottage street. At bridge, honors were won by Mrs. Grace Lambert, Mrs. Louis Paquin and Mrs. Rene Buteau.

Time now to file your town tax lists. The assessors will be in session in the town hall building from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. Saturday, Oct. 11.—adv.

ANOTHER $2000 OF STOLEN SILVER RECOVERED FROM PROVIDENCE JEWELER

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 10 — Recovery was announced today of another $2,000 worth of the silver that was stolen from a LyRolly truck in the holdup at South Killingly last Monday morning. This last lot of retrieved silver plate in this instance, was found in the possession of a jeweler in Providence. His name was withheld by the police today.

Another development in this interesting case is the arrest in Providence of Basil Compopiano of that city. He was taken into custody by the Providence police as a suspicious person, and later charged with being a fugitive from justice. A warrant for his arrest was issued today from the Killingly town court. Compopiano has refused to come back to Connecticut, so extradition proceedings will be instituted against him. It was made evident here today that Compopiano will be arraigned in court here, once he is gotten out of Rhode Island on a charge similar to the one filed against three other young men arrested Tuesday at Shawomet Beach, R. I., at a summer cottage from which $6500 worth of the stolen silver was recovered.

It was also revealed today that near this particular cottage police have found three loaded revolvers. These weapons were found in rather tall grass not far distant from the building, and it is the theory of state officers here that the guns were discarded by the three now held as prisoners here when Warwick police officers suddenly descended upon them.

State officers of the Danielson barracks were closely co-operating with Rhode Island police today in clearing up the hold-up case, and with good prospects of making close to a perfect job of it. It is estimated that the silver that is now missing is of a value of no more than $500.

Officers were reticent today about the jeweler from whom the $2 000 worth of plate silver has been recovered, how he came to be in possession of it or how that fact was learned.

PUTNAM

PUTNAM REPUBLICANS SHOW MARKED LACK OF INTEREST

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 10—Overwhelmingly defeated at the polls on Monday, the first time in more than 40 years of unchallenged political supremacy, the local republican organization took another clip on the chin Tuesday evening at the legislative caucus when the town committee was forced to resort to speculation before a slate could be drafted and a ticket filled. The attendance at the caucus was in sharp contrast with the usual spirited republican gatherings of the past, there being scarcely more than a hundred members of the party present.

Leon T. Wilson and William Pechie, a former representative, are the candidates who were at length nominated at the meeting in which party leaders openly admitted, "that republican conditions are in a sad and unbelievable state of affairs at the present."

The failure of a speedy disposition of the caucus routine of business to take place last night was a complete surprise, inasmuch as it proved to be the first time in the history of the party that a situation of this nature developed. Usually the republicans are confronted with the task of selecting two representative candidates from a volume of prospects. Last night a canvass of the assembly had to be made before a second candidate was found. Attorney Irving H. Miron, chairman of the town committee, after withdrawing a motion to the effect that the committee be empowered to fill the vacancy, scouted around the hall and interviewed a number of voters. He returned to his seat, addressed the chair and moved the order of business be continued. A. A. Brodeur offered the name of William Pechie as the second candidate and moved his nomination be made by acclamation The motion was immediately confirmed.

Justices of the peace nominated were, Henry N. Benoit, Arthur S. Macdonald, Howard C. Bradford, Ernest C. Morse, A. J. Dupre, Archibald Macdonald, Jr., Irving H. Miron, Arthur C. Keith and M. H. Geissler. Judge Geissler was nominated when Attorney Morse informed the chair that Frank F. Russell, a local attorney who is nearing the age limit of 70, under law is not entitled to renomination.

An explanation of the unusual situation developing over the inability to secure a second candidate for representative was made by Mr. Miron when he stated that the committee had been trying to get candidates. "It is true, this is a sorry state of affairs, and I am hopeful that a candidate will be secured I don't think that the democratic walk-away in the town election is a sign a repetition will take place in the state election I think we will come back and be counted."

Attorney Macdonald, until the opening of the caucus, was considered a candidate for representative in the general assembly. The sudden break in the programme brought from Mr Macdonald: "I can't understand this. No one to run for office? I can't recall the time when republicans were forced to adjourn a caucus because of the lack of sufficient candidates and I think the caucus body ought to do something about it.

"I would like to go to the legislature and would gladly become a candidate tonight, if it were not for circumstances over which I have no control. The new position of the democrats means nothing to me. I'm not afraid to run; as a matter of fact, I would welcome such a contest, but I am unable to run because of the pressure of my law business and the fact that I have a family to support."

Judge M. H. Geissler, moderator of the meeting said the situation was a deplorable one and remarked: "Such a situation I've never seen before. With more than 1,000 names on our caucus list it seems there should be little difficulty in securing candidates for the legislature.

"Because we got trimmed proper a week ago, it does not mean that we are going to remain on the outside of the fort. The only thing to do is to keep fighting if we expect to return our party to power Many conditions that led up to the democratic victory last week are not going to exist again and in the state election we will pile up the old time G. O. P. majority."

The meeting was brought to a close a few minutes after Mr. Pechie had been nominated.

Members of the public utilities commission and officials of the New Haven railroad arrived in this city late yesterday afternoon aboard a special train. During their stay here, inspections of railroad property and especially safety devices at the crossings were made The official party rode down the Norwich branch to Plainfield where they made a trip over to the new overhead bridge at French's crossing, which was completed this summer The presence of the bridge has eliminated the dangerous grade crossing. Superintendent Robert M. Smith of the New Haven division was among the party of road officials

A reception in honor of Rev. Joseph Vasey, new pastor of the Congregational church, and Mrs. Vasey, was held Thursday evening in the church parlors. There was a large attendance of church members who were introduced to the new clergyman and his wife by Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Sharpe Rev. Mr. Vasey arrived in Putnam last week and succeeded Rev. James F English, now pastor of a church in Manchester N. H.

Thomas Fyfe of Yonkers, N. Y., but now living in South Woodstock, was arrested late yesterday afternoon by Officer H. T Strand of Danielson barracks, following the investigation of an automobile accident occurring on the Putnam-Pomfret road about one mile west of the Gary school house. Fyfe will appear in justice court in Pomfret Saturday morning to answer to a charge of reckless driving The Fyfe car collided with a large coupe owned and operated by Franklin D. Bowen of Woodstock Hill. Mr. Bowen was uninjured, but his automobile was damaged to a considerable extent. Fyfe also escaped without injury

Attorney Louis A. Woisard of Danielson said yesterday that the civil action of George Potvin of Mill street instituted against the Society L'Union Ste. Jean de Baptiste, now pending in superior court, will probably be tried in December.

Acting Fire Chief Alphonse Dumas has been a member of the fire department for 24 years, it was learned today. Chief Dumas entered the department as a member of the old Eagle hose company in the north end of the city and was the first regular driver of the hose wagon when motor-drawn apparatus supplanted the horse-drawn tubs some years ago. Chief Dumas was appointed deputy chief in 1922 at the same organization meeting in January of that year when the late Chief Ralph E. Thurston was named to succeed the late Chief Cortland D. Arnold.

Mary Capino, formerly of Putnam, by order of Judge M. H. Geissler of the city court, and until yesterday a resident of the nearby village of Mechanicsville this morning was sentenced to spend 30 days in the county jail at Brooklyn when found guilty by Judge Geissler of a charge of intoxication, Mary unable to stay away from her familiar surroundings any longer, wandered into Putnam Thursday evening and strayed down the tracks of the Norwich & Worcester branch of the New Haven road, where she was found by a passerby, lying prostrate across the tracks over which considerable freight traffic passes hourly. Police were called and the woman was taken to the station house where she remained overnight. The timely action of the police probably saved Mrs. Capino from a horrible death, as trains thunder past this point at terrific rates of speed In addition to being sentenced to jail, Mary left the court room under an edict of the court which stipulated that if she returned to Putnam under any conditions after her release from jail, police were to immediately take her into custody. "Thank you, Judge, you're a good fellow," she said, as she departed.

A death in Putnam yesterday was that of Mrs Mary P. Forsyth, 78, widow of Joseph Forsyth, who died at the home of Addis Welch at 263 Woodstock avenue, after a lingering illness.

WOONSOCKET'S BAD EXAMPLE

In connection with municipal financing, the policy of issuing bonds to take care of floating debts and to cover up deficits is one that is practiced. It causes much uncertainty concerning the real conditions, creates wrong impressions and leads to the piling up of a debt that staggers and cripples in too many instances. It stands out in marked contrast to the policy of pay as you go and keeping conditions in the light so that there is good credit and a knowledge of the financial situation.

Woonsocket isn't the only city which has been disposed to resort to bond issues quite freely, but it is a municipality which has come to realize the danger of overdoing such a policy, or it has, at least, furnished others an opportunity to see and avoid such mistakes.

The Rhode Island city has had much trouble complying with the orders of a state commission concerning the construction of a sewage disposal plant. It has finally disposed of bonds for the project at what is considered a low price. This prompts the Providence Journal to say that "It was inevitable that Woonsocket should some time experience difficulty in disposing of new bond issues. The process of incurring deficits and eventually funding them, and of issuing bonds also for various public projects, regardless of a reasonable relationship to valuation, could not go on forever. . . . It is to be hoped that the lesson will be taken to heart and that a process of rationalization will replace the debt pyramiding process."

Whether Woonsocket is going to profit from its experience remains to be seen. There is, however, no reason why other cities should not. It has tried out the bond issuing policy in such a manner as to convince other cities that it has the wrong method, and its errors and handicaps should not become the errors and handicaps of others.

AN EVERY COUNTRY NEED

Road construction isn't a live subject in this country alone. Others are interested in it and are extensively engaged in producing better highways and opening up new avenues of travel. It is no small undertaking in certain regions where little in the way of modern road building has been done on an extensive scale, but there is recognition of the importance of keeping up with the procession and getting the benefits attached to improved roadways.

Thus it was inevitable that the delegates from 62 countries assembled at Washington should give recognition to the bearing which good roads have upon peace. Instead of living to themselves and depending upon the slower methods of communication by water, there is recognition of the advantage in opening up highways that will make their resources available and offer attractions to visitors from other countries. It is possible to travel by highway over the greater part of the United States and Canada. Mexico has some good roads, but there is no reason why there should not be international highways that would reach down through the Central and South American countries. The highway system is not the only requisite, but it is certainly necessary before any volume of traffic can think of traveling from republic to republic.

With better highway connections there should be better understanding and better relationship, and it is inevitable that serious study will be given by the many hundred delegates to what this country has been doing in the way of road construction for such help as may be needed by their countries.

BE MADE A VOTER TODAY

Today the board for making voters will be in session. It has but one purpose and that is to make voters of all those whose names appear on the to-be-made list and who can qualify. It is a mere formality, simple and soon over, but it is necessary and important for those who are entitled to and wish to obtain the franchise.

Each and everyone who has lived in the state and town the required time, who can read and is of age, should be anxious to become a voter and participate in the election next month and on subsequent dates.

If there has been negligence in getting an application to be made a voter into the proper hands there will be no chance of being made a voter this fall. It will be necessary to wait until some other time. On the other hand, if your application has been submitted and your name appears on the list of to-be-mades, you not only can but should follow it up by appearing before the board for making voters today, or next Saturday, and complete the process.

There's nothing painful or difficult about it. A few simple questions, a demonstration of the ability to read and the taking of the elector's oath covers the ordeal.

It should be borne in mind, however, that it isn't possible to be made a voter any day in the week. The time when the board sits is definitely fixed. The board is ready for business and expects to be kept busy. The business must be provided by those on the to-be-made list and it is a good idea not to have the whole 977 appear at the same time.

With the voter-making board in session from 9 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., and from 1:30 to 8 p. m., plenty of opportunity will be afforded the seekers for the franchise to appear and qualify.

It would be the surprise of the year if all those on the list should appear and be made. Circumstances will prevent certain ones from doing so, but there is a duty each one owes to himself and good citizenship to get the right to vote, and upon getting it to use it. Inasmuch as the formality of being made a voter must be complied with before it is possible to vote, those entitled to be made voters should insist upon finding time and being made. There is no time like the present and action today may save regrets later on.

HELP PREVENTION WORK

The warning which has been given by Assistant Fire Warden Lathrop concerning the serious situation that exists in the state because of the dry weather is timely. It should awaken recognition among those who use the highways and those who go into the fields and woodlands that there is a responsibility resting on their shoulders to contribute to the work of prevention.

Everything is dry and in a condition to burn quickly and spread rapidly. In addition to the dry grass and underbrush, the fallen leaves are providing a huge menace in themselves, and the dropping of a firebrand, however thoughtlessly, among such material may be the cause of great destruction of property, to say nothing of the needless amount of work that will be required on the part of those who engage in the hard work of checking or putting out the fire.

It is easy enough to think, after a fire has been caused, that refraining from dropping a lighted match or throwing aside lighted smoking material would have prevented all the trouble. The important thing is to think about this before anything happens and to keep the right thought on it while there is a chance for prevention. Locking the stable door after the horse is stolen amounts to nothing, so far as the horse is concerned. Anticipating the possibility of loss and preventing it is what counts, and if there was a greater participation in such efforts there would be less fires.

Conditions are bad enough at this time of year under normal conditions, but this year the danger from fires is more serious than usual. Woodland fires can easily become much worse than usual, and when they threaten dwellings or other buildings there is, in many instances, a shortage of water which will operate against successfully combating the flames.

The plea for care where care is needed is therefore fully justified. There is good reason for urging all who can to keep out of the woods and dry fields in the interest of fire prevention. What better contribution could be made than to prevent that 70 per cent of the fires which are said to be needless.

TIME WILL TELL

Insofar as it is possible to determine through an investigation, it will be known in time what caused the wreck of the R-101.

There are conflicting reports as to just what happened. An eye witness believes that he saw a fire aboard the dirigible before the explosion. He admits that distance might have prevented him from hearing the explosion as soon as he saw the flames.

There is another report that the ship was structurally weak, and another that it did not have the proper lifting capacity, and that if it had been able to have carried its heavy load at a greater height over the Beauvais valley it would have suffered less from the storm. In this connection, attention is directed to the fact that it was for the purpose of increasing the lifting capacity that the big ship was lengthened.

Those who were aboard the dirigible have been credited with maintaining that the heavy storm, the weight of the water on the large surface, seriously handicapped the R-101, and made it impossible to rise over the hillside against which it struck.

All these angles should be cleared up by those who are seeking the facts and the report should dispose of all the rumors and indicate just where the weakness was. It is apparent that if there had been non-explosive gas in the big airship, there would have been that disastrous fire which swept the dirigible at the time of the crash and in all probability there would have been no such loss of life.

There seems to be no probability but what it will be shown that the dangerous hydrogen gas made the crash much worse than would have been the case with helium. Perhaps it will be found that the ship was overloaded and should not have undertaken the flight under conditions which did not anticipate the possibility of such a storm and the inability to successfully meet it.

It is not improbable that the disaster has served to throw light upon more than one angle of dirigible construction and operation, with the chance that added safety will be thrown about them in the future. Disasters frequently have such an outcome.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Perhaps there is nothing within the range of human thought that has undergone such a radical change as the present attitude of governments and parents in relation to the rights of children. Now this change of attitude has been forced to the front through the larger range of education that the boys and girls enjoy today compared with even the last quarter of the 19th century. Then children had little place in the minds and activities of politicians and even statesmen. It was the immortal Dickens who stirred up a thoughtless world to see the utter inadequacy of methods then in vogue for the education of children. If Dickens could come back, or either Horace Mann who did so much for Massachusetts, and see our modern school buildings and courses of study they would feel like saying: "Behold, a new heaven and a new earth!"

Among the things done by the present administration at Washington, nothing more significant or more intelligent was done than the elaborate study undertaken last year of the physical, mental and moral condition of the children of the United States. One writer has said that this "might sound like a large and empty generalization, with nothing to support it but glowing words and pious wishes." But it is a fact that the white house conference on child health and protection will assemble at Washington in November for the purpose of reporting on a year of definite scientific study carried on by a small army of experts working in various groups and sub committees. Our authority for the above statement is Dr. Ray Lyman Wilber, secretary of the interior, who is the chairman of the conference. During the last half century wonderful advance has been made in the knowledge of things necessary to bring about better average conditions of life for the rising generation.

The vast number of articles coming from people who, after long experience and trained intelligence are qualified to pronounce judgment in the matter, have a tendency to clarify much of the fog that still clusters around the mooted question of prohibition. All intelligent people know that you cannot legislate men and women into the Kingdom of God. But law can clear away many obstructions that lie in the heavenly pathway. Law, of course, would go beyond its legitimate domain if it should tell the individual citizen that he should not drink, or in any way use, spirituous liquors. It would have just as much right to say that no man, woman or child anywhere in the United States should eat corn fritters or drink lemonade. But if the sale of corn fritters or lemonade should become a public nuisance, then the law would have the right to protect the rank and file from such nuisance. No clear thinker will honestly deny that the public saloon was a public nuisance, and that law had a right to put it out of existence.

Quite recently President Hoover paid the city of Cleveland a complimentary visit, and the great city responded in no weak and sickly fashion. But both republican and democratic papers agree that for enthusiasm and spontaneous reception it has never been paralleled in the city's history. Both the President and Mrs. Hoover entered heartily into the great demonstration. There was only one note of discord to mar the harmony of the celebration and that was utterly uncalled for and thoroughly contemptible. I refer to the action of a few communists who attempted to inject a counter demonstration just to show the bitterness of their spirit against the government and its chief executive. The police, however, were on to their job and soon quelled the puny outbreak. In itself it was hardly worth noticing, but it makes us think seriously of what in all probability would happen if such people should get into power.

There are many words and phrases that were never heard by our immediate ancestors that are now quite frequently used. The one I have in mind is "inferiority complex," which we see quite often these days in print, but it never made our grandfathers rush to the dictionary to find out what it meant. In these days the term is being applied to a certain unfortunate condition of mind that the growing child is likely to get into when any natural trend is injudiciously dealt with. For instance if a child does not readily see a certain thing readily and is called stupid he keenly realizes his weakness, and if this is kept up long enough and becomes general, it creates a chronic feeling of dispair, which, translated into scientific language is "inferiority complex." Also if we expect more of a child than is reasonable it also tends to develop the "inferiority complex." All this can be avoided by kindly showing the child his mistakes.

Probably never before has there been such wide interest in following the winning baseball championship as this year between the American Athletics and the St. Louis Cardinals. The American people more and more enjoy clean, straightforward sport. They are also equally interested in fine, strategic leadership. It is not wholly the man who can twirl the ball kiting over the distance fence, who decide the victory, important as they are. There is the man who from the bench who is the masterman at strategy, who sees everything, and knows everything about baseball. He is by no means to be ignored. Men like Earnshaw and Cochrane mean much to the team, but what shall we say of the part that a man like Connie Mack plays, whose hand is not visible in the game? Great things are not done without great personalities who are back of the contests.

Isn't there a great lesson to be learned from those who do things supremely well, whether it is on the ball field or performing a difficult surgical operation, or serving a state as governor, or being just the very best man who ever attempted to run a farm? Why are two continents so interested in Bobby Jones? Simply because at present he is the "great mogul" at the game of golf. We even decorate horses that can go faster than other horses, or even the steamer that makes a record in crossing the Atlantic. About the middle of last century a boy when he was leaving his home for college received this advice from his mother: "What you do, do just as well as you can." That advice took such a hold upon him, and he did so well in college that within ten years his mother had the supreme pleasure of seeing him inaugurated as president of the college. There is nothing on this earth that is worth doing at all that is not doing well.

Every time Charley Payne, Jr., played marbles in Brooklyn his mother wondered how much longer she could go on buying stockings for the lad. Surely, she argued, there must be an inexpensive way of playing marbles without the fear of torn stockings, and so she began to work out an idea. With the aid of her husband, there presently appeared an object which was subsequently patented. It was a "device for projecting marbles and the like" and could be operated by a boy who stood up while he played.

EARLY DAYS OF EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN CHURCH IN NORWICH

The following extracts from the Norwich Bulletin, published on the dates indicated, are reprinted in connection with the observance of the 60th anniversary of the Evangelical Lutheran church:

From the Bulletin of May 4, 1868:

Church Project

For some time past the German Lutheran society of this city, led by their minister, Rev. C. Koerner, have been diligently at work to raise funds sufficient to enable them to erect a church suitable to their needs. The society numbers at present 64 members, and the Sabbath school attached to it has some 60 children. The room, in the Rockwell building, known as Temperance hall, has been occupied by them on Sabbath afternoons for a long time, both for the purposes of worship and the sessions of the Sabbath school. But a strong desire is felt by the members of the society to have a church of their own, and with this object they will present their cause to the churches of the city within the next two weeks and ask for assistance. The society is not wealthy, hence a call is made necessary.

The contributions which have been made by the Germans have reached a sum large enough to warrant them in negotiating for a piece of ground on which to build the church. The location is on Franklin street, opposite the residence of Evan Burdick, and is owned by Bailey & Spalding. It is 63 feet front having a depth on one side of 148 feet, and on the other of 128 feet, and the price to be paid is $1800. It is expected that the deed conveying the land to the society will be placed in its possession today. The cost of the church will be, it is estimated, about $6,000, making the total expense about $8,000.

It will be remembered that some months ago an attempt was made to put in operation a school to be one-half English and one-half German, or, to be kept as an English school one-half of the day and the other half as a German school. Strong hopes were entertained of success, but in spite of the arguments urged in its favor, the project failed. The disappointment to those who had hoped that their children might have the benefits of a school like the one proposed was bitter, but there seemed no help for it, and they were compelled to look to the German school, which had one session a week, as their only consolation. Now, however, their hope is again revived, as it is announced that, in case the church is erected, a German day school will be organized.

We have written thus in detail that the people, to whom the call for assistance will come, may know some of the facts in the matter. It is to be hoped that the Christians of this city will respond with that liberality which has so characterized them in other good works, and that the society may see the fruition of their hopes in the erection of a well built, commodious church.

Was First Lutheran Edifice in State

From the Bulletin of Oct. 6, 1869:

The cornerstone of the first edifice in the state dedicated to the worship of Almighty God according to the rites and belief of the people composing the Lutheran Evangelical church, was laid in Franklin street, in this city, Tuesday afternoon. After a brief prayer in German by the Rev. Mr. Koerner, the pastor of the congregation, the Rev. Alvan Bond, D. D., delivered an interesting and exceedingly appropriate address.

From the Bulletin of Oct. 26, 1909:

40th Anniversary

Sunday at the services at the German Lutheran church, on Franklin street, the pastor, Rev. Theodor Bauck, announced to his congregation plans for celebrating on next Sunday the 40th anniversary of the organization of the church.

In connection with the coming anniversary, Pastor Bauck has been looking up some of the early history of religious services by Germans in this city, and has church books in his hands which prove that there were Germans of the Lutheran church here in 1852, '53, '55 and '56. The records of baptisms show that on Feb. 6, 1867, Leonhard Michael Beck was baptized; also Friedrich Wilhelm Rother and others. But these and other records, Rev. Mr. Bauck thinks, prove only that several Germans had services in the German language, perhaps every Sunday. Later there are reports that Rockwell hall, 103 Main street, was rented for the purpose of having a German service every Sunday morning. The pastor came here from other cities, generally from Boston. The love of the old mother tongue and Lutheran doctrine was so loyal and the attendance of the services so good that more than 30 families and about 25 single young people called a general meeting together and organized, with the help of Rev. E. J. O. Hauser from Boston and Rev. Christian Koerner, the German Evangelical Lutheran congregation in Norwich, Conn., October, 1866. Later a school was opened that the children should learn the German language. The attendance grew so well that the congregation decided to buy a lot and build their own church.

When the church was organized in October, 1869, the first president was Jacob Theis; treasurer, Wilhelm Noss; secretary, Joseph Ripp, and assistant secretary, Friedrich Klein. There were also ten wardens.

The first pastor was Rev. Mr. Koerner; the next was Rev. Victor Rother; then J. P. Schoener succeeded him. After him came Pastor Alfred Tilly, M. H. Stine, J. M. Winkler, Theodore Heischmann, A. F. Schaefer, F. B. Cunz, F. B. Kern, F. A. Winter, and the present pastor.

For a congregation composed mostly of people receiving only a small income, ranging from about $1 to $1.75 per day, they have always shown their great interest and loyalty to their church by generous financial support. They always tried to improve the property. Several years ago they built the parsonage. It has many nice rooms and conveniences.

During the last few years, in spite of the hard times, from time to time they paid off parts of the mortgage which was taken up to build the parsonage. Even more to show their thankfulness to our Heavenly Father, they collected a considerable sum of money and gave it to the pastor to buy a fine new communion set. Soon after they voluntarily brought the pastor money for a large and handsome Gothic altar, such as is seen in Germany in rich churches. It is this new altar which is to be dedicated at the coming anniversary.

From the Bulletin of Nov. 1, 1909:

Mayor Congratulates Church

In the evening the church was filled to its capacity for the anniversary celebration. Two fine selections were rendered by the Taftville Maennerchor.

Mayor Lippitt was seated with the pastor and was introduced by Rev. Mr. Bauck as the first speaker. In behalf of the city which he had the honor to represent, Mayor Lippitt said he was glad to come to offer congratulations to this congregation on its 40th anniversary, and to congratulate it upon the place of importance the church occupied in the moral and religious life of the city. He had known personally almost every one of the founders of the church, of their efforts and sacrifices to secure a place for worship in their own language, but now, although he knew hardly a quarter of the Germans in the city, he was glad to look into their faces as good citizens, every one of them. By their steadfast persistency for a church home, which is a characteristic of the race, they had well earned in the past 40 years the right to be ranked as the most progressive and important of the citizens. Special praise and recognition of such efforts is deserved, and he was glad to bid them Godspeed in a work that was counting for eternity.

Pastor Bauck tendered his sincere thanks for the mayor's hearty words. The anniversary sermon was preached by Rev. Gustav Doering, who is commissioner of emigration for the Lutheran church in New York. His text was Ephesians vi, 16, 17, 18: Whithal taking up the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the evil one. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the spirit which is the word of God; with all prayer and supplication, praying at all seasons in the spirit, and watching thereunto in all perserverance and supplication for all the saints. His sermon was heard with great appreciation. He referred to the fact that Pastor Bauck installed him just 20 years ago in Macedon, N. Y., and he was delighted to repay this debt by helping him observe the anniversary.

After the church service refreshments were served in the Sunday's school room.

Other pastors followed Rev. Mr. Bauck as follows: Rev. P. E. Werth, 1915; Rev. H. Huntzinger, 1923; Rev. Carl Storck, the incumbent, 1929.

YOUR HEALTH

Obstruction To The Air And Food Passages (Continued)

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

A boy, eight years of age, was sent to the hospital with a condition which first was thought to be pneumonia. His condition was considered serious. On the second day, an x-ray examination was made which showed a thumb tack obstructing the right lung. After removal with a bronchoscope, all symptoms promptly disappeared. A careful history revealed that the child, six months previously, had swallowed a tack; but because he had experienced very little difficulty, the matter was forgotten until the pneumonia symptoms developed.

In all cases of suspected foreign bodies having entered the air or food passages, you should seek the advice of the family physician and not delay, hoping the symptoms will subside. An x-ray examination is of great importance and parents should not object when the family doctor suggests this measure for all suspected cases. Metallic objects will be shown by x-ray and give the position assumed by the foreign body, which is of vital importance to the doctor.

We have discussed foreign bodies in the air and food passages, now let us consider the second type of obstruction—that of disease or growth. A diseased condition of either of the passages may occur at any age. Cancer of the food passages is found rather frequently after the age of 40 years; although, it may occur earlier in life. The growth is not as rapid in this part of the body and, therefore, symptoms are mild in the beginning, possibly a slight difficulty in swallowing at times. This difficulty in swallowing will become more marked, with a loss of weight, general weakness, pain and water hunger. If relief is hoped for in such cases, the patient should seek treatment with the first symptoms.

Obstruction may be present, due to the presence of a growth in the neck or chest. A goitre of sufficient size or so situated as to interfere with swallowing or breathing would give these symptoms. Nervousness produces the same effect upon a patient and even at times prevents the taking of food. However, cases are rarely diagnosed as neurosis until a complete examination has excluded all evidence of an organic lesion being the case of symptoms. A patient suffering from obstruction of any form, naturally develops a nervous condition which quite often is not given the proper attention.

Growths in the larynx are not infrequent and while they are usually slow in causing obstruction, they will, if allowed to go untreated, give alarming symptoms. Anyone complaining of hoarseness of long duration should have a careful examination. Often the only symptom in the early stage of the growth is hoarseness, which may continue for several weeks or months. If the condition is not treated, it will cause some difficulty in breathing which may be noticed by shortness of breath and at times pain.

There is another condition which is very distressing—this is found in children and caused by the swallowing of a caustic, such as a solution of lye used in household cleaning. After the child swallows a solution of this nature, there is not only burning of the mouth, but of the delicate lining of the food passages. The ulceration heals after a short time, only to be followed by scar tissue, which produces one or more strictures that will limit the food taken to liquids. After a few weeks, the child begins to lose weight because of the lack of proper food. Gradually the function of swallowing becomes worse until even liquid cannot be taken.

In conclusion, I should like to impress upon all people the importance of seeking early medical advice in any case of difficulty in swallowing and breathing. Never allow this type of condition to go on with the hope that it will clear up, as delay may mean the loss of life, whether it be foreign body or disease which is causing obstruction.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10 — Like President Hoover and Senator Harry Hawes of Missouri, Dr. William Mann, director of the national zoo, has a hobby.

In off hours from attending to the needs of his elephants, lions, tigers, monkeys, bears, birds, seals, wart-hogs, hartebeestes and what have you the doctor goes fishing, as do Messrs. Hoover and Hawes. But they go to vastly differing places.

Mr. Hoover and Mr. Hawes like big fish. Dr. Mann likes 'em small—a half-inch catch just suits him. Mr. Hoover and Mr. Hawes like to snare their captures with artful lures, or, maybe, humble bait now and then. A dead fish is their trophy of the chase. Dr. Mann catches his fish to keep 'em alive. He has no use at all for a dead fish.

Tropical Fish Fans

Mr. Hoover likes to fish in convenient mountain streams. Mr. Hawes' particular hobby is "My Friend, the Black Bass," so he writes and the senator haunts the bass rivers when not senating.

Dr. Mann fancies fish with weird Latin names and strange coloring and habits. A live specimen half the length of your thumb nail will send him into ecstasies. And he is setting off this year to do his fishing in the back-beyond of Central America.

For Dr. Mann is a leader in that strange and little known cult of hobbyists, the tropical-fish fans. It is a flourishing business about which even Uncle Sam's bureau of fisheries knows very little officially.

Yet a lot of folk, even apartment dwellers, get interested in species development of these minute finny folk from strange places. They try all sorts of cross breeding experiments and if two fans get together fish talk will drive even golf score discussion out of their minds.

Idea Spreads

They start in rather a shame-faced way. Usually some fish-fancying friend presents off-spring of his own almost microscopic pets. That makes it necessary to get glass aquariums, fish food, books on care and other equipment.

Finally the apartment dweller finds himself almost crowded out doors by the expanding fish bowl collection as his pets thrive and propagate.

Dr. Mann's private office and home are crowded with his collection. He's never too busy to talk specimens with a brother fish fan. And now he has stored up a few weeks of vacation to be spent seeking new species and specimens in the tropics.

Last year he vacationed in Europe getting up-to-the-minute data on modern reptile house construction for the new such structure at the zoo. This year he'll ride his hobby and go fishing by way of relaxation from the elephants, lions and snakes.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

The News Is Spread

You'll always find that common fright
Ends anger and desire to fight.
—Old Mother Nature.

News travels fast through the Green Forest and over the Green Meadows. It wasn't long before all the little people of the Smiling Pool, the Old Orchard and the Old Pasture, as well as the Green Forest and the Green Meadows, knew that Lightfoot the Deer was in dreadful trouble. First, the news of the great fight between Lightfoot and another Deer had spread. Then, when Sammy Jay discovered that the two fighters could not separate, but were locked together head to head by their antlers, the news traveled even faster. Every one who could do so went over there to see it. Even Johnny Chuck started, then decided that it was too far for his short legs.

But, of course, Peter Rabbit was there. Somehow, Peter had missed the fight; but he didn't mind this so much as long as he didn't miss this stranger sight of the two Deer locked together. Lightfoot and the other Deer paid no attention to the little people looking on. They had no thought for anything but their own misery. Much of the time they spent down on their knees, for they had used up their strength in fighting and in struggling. It was a pitiful sight and there was pity in the eyes of all the onlookers. There seemed to be nothing that any one could do. Even great, big Buster Bear was helpless in the matter. Strange to say he was a little bit afraid. This was also true of Yowler the Bobcat. There was something mysterious about this trouble, and mystery usually awakens fear.

"It's dreadful!" said Peter Rabbit. "It's the most dreadful thing I've ever heard of! They'll both die! They'll both starve to death! They cannot eat and they cannot drink. Can't somebody do something?"

"Don't be silly, Peter!" said his cousin, Jumper the Hare. "Of course, nobody can do anything. I guess it is one of those things that has to be. I'm sorry for Mrs. Lightfoot, too. See how sorrowful she looks. We certainly will miss Lightfoot. Without him the Green Forest will not be the same."

"Just the same, something ought to be done about it," said Peter, and sat down to scratch a long ear with a long hind foot. When that failed to bring him an idea he scratched the other long ear with the other long hind foot. "Something's got to be done about it," he repeated. Then he brightened suddenly and hopped to his feet. "I've thought of something," said he.

"Done be silly, Peter," said his cousin, Jumper the Hare

"What!" demanded Jumper.

"I've thought of some one who can help," replied Peter. "I just know he can help."

Jumper looked at him doubtfully. "Who do you know who can possibly be of any help at a time like this?" he demanded.

"Farmer Brown's Boy," replied Peter. "If he were here I know he could do something. Yes, sir, I know he could do something."

"Well, he isn't here," said Jumper.

"We've got to get him here," replied Peter. "Yes, sir, we've got to get him over here. If he once comes over here he'll do something; I know he will. I don't know why I didn't think of Farmer Brown's Boy before. Now, let's sit down and think and think until we can find some way to get Farmer Brown's Boy over here."

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

Begin Today.

Is there nothing which Christ as your friend, your Lord, your Saviour, wants you to do that you are leaving undone today.

Do you doubt one instant, with His high, sad, deep love for your soul, that He wants you to pray? Do you doubt one instant that it is His will that you should honor and help and bless all men about you who are His brethren? Are you doing anything like that? Do you doubt one instant that His will is that you should make life noble and lofty? Do you one instant doubt that He wants you to be pure in deed and word and thought? Do you doubt one instant His command is for you openly to own Him and declare that you are His before all the world? These are some of the questions we may ask ourselves as we try to measure up to the standard set by our Saviour.

Our Saviour is ever calling us to come up higher and leave behind the lowlands of sin and sorrow to dwell in the uplands in the bright sunshine of His love, joy and peace, where we may know that He is ours and we are His. Ever going forth in the redeemer's strength knowing that with Him we may go forth with confidence.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Fire Prevention Week!

Mr. Editor: Young man, please take notice and leave your cigarettes at home this week end. We must suffer, it seems, that our streets and beautiful streets and beautiful squares are littered up, yes, even the sacred premises, with the hidious stumps, but let us keep these fiends out of our woods and if they persist, put them in jail for the rest of the season, or tie them to the nearest tree. At all cost let us try to preserve our glorious woodlots and forests. Government, fire departments, and many other civic organizations are doing their best to warn and educate, but all public minded men and women and our fine Boy Scouts must now do their duties. Please be on the lookout for the smoking fiend this week end!

Donnie's father noticed the little boy staring at him fixedly. "What's the matter?" he asked.

"You should have been a detective," said Donnie.

"What makes you think that? Because I'm so smart?"

"No," replied Donnie, "because you've got flat feet!"

Bert, age seven, had acquired the habit of biting his little playmates as a means of self defense and offense. His mother had related the last violation of social etiquette to his father and had asked that he talk with Bert and do something about it.

So father said: "Bert, don't you know that you must not bite people? We have talked about this before. You simply, must learn that you cannot bite people."

"Yes, I know that," said Bert. "I know that I should not bite Harry. But, you see, when I get mad, I get so absent minded that I cannot remember what I am supposed not to do. I only think about what I want to do."

Recent experiments show that hens kept in cold climates should have some sunlight even in winter, for test hens deprived too long of direct sunlight produced few eggs and these would not hatch.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

Farrel-Birmingham Company, Inc., Ansonia.

The Farrel-Birmingham company, organized in September 1927, is a combination of two of Connecticut's oldest and most prominent firms, both of which have had long and successful business careers. The Farrel Foundry & Machine company of Ansonia was established in 1848 and the Birmingham Iron foundry of Derby in 1836.

The present company operates three large plants located at Ansonia and Derby, and Buffalo, covering a total area of approximately 20 acres and employing normally about 1700 people. The plants are all of modern construction and the three machine shops are equipped with machine tools of the latest types, some of them being the largest of their kind for the extremely heavy work that is handled. The foundries at Ansonia and Derby are capable of producing 225 tons of castings daily and single pieces up to 70 tons in weight.

Starting originally with the manufacture of castings, power drives and gears, and miscellaneous machine work, both companies, during their long careers, have manufactured almost every kind of machinery. Now the Ansonia and Derby plants are devoted chiefly to the manufacture of rolls and heavy machinery for five major industries—rubber, plastics, metals, sugar and paper—although miscellaneous machinery for many other purposes is also built. The output of the Buffalo plant is principally Farrel-Sykes double helical gears, gear drives and Farrel-Sykes gear generating machines.

Located in the center of the brass industry of Connecticut, it was natural that early attention should be given to the building of rolling mills and other rolling mill equipment. Machinery of this kind continues to be an important part of the total production, and the modern Farrel-Birmingham rolling mills are outstanding examples of advanced engineering, being used extensively for various non-ferrous metals and some forms of steel products.

The rubber industry, which had its birth in Connecticut, is one of the important industries served by the Farrel-Birmingham company. Both of the original companies were pioneers in the development of rubber machinery and have built such equipment since the beginning of the rubber industry about 75 years ago. Many new machines have been introduced for the improvement of manufacturing processes, saving labor and increasing production. In this field the company numbers among its customers almost the entire industry in the United States and many prominent rubber companies all over the world.

Machinery for the manufacture of plastics, such as linoleum, celluloid, phonograph records, asbestos, synthetic resins, phenol compositions, and other similar products is closely related to machinery for working rubber. The plastics industry also has long been one of the major fields served by Farrel-Birmingham.

When the manufacture of machinery in which rolls were used was first started it was necessary to import rolls from Europe. Later the company started the manufacture of its own chilled iron rolls and was the first company in Connecticut and among the first two or three in the United States to produce these rolls. Now the Farrel-Birmingham roll shops at Ansonia are the largest in the United States specialising in the manufacture of chilled iron rolls for rubber plastics paper metal etc., and the quality of Farrel rolls is known the world over in these industries.

In 1870, when Farrel started to manufacture sugar machinery, there were five other firms building similar equipment for the West Indies plantations. Today none of this group is in existence with the exception of Farrel-Birmingham company. Farrel cane mills and crushers were among the first to be used in the sugar industry and continue to hold a position of leadership at the present time. The company has built the largest sugar mill in the world, and the world's record for production was made on a Farrel mill.

Farrel-Birmingham company maintains a large staff of engineers who are specialists in the designing of machinery for the various industries served by the company. The results of engineering research are reflected in the improvements in mechanical design of the company's products and the development of new machinery for various purposes.

The present officers of the company are: Franklin Farrel, Jr., chairman of the board; Nelson W. Pickering, president; Carl Hitchcock, vice president; David R. Bowen, vice president-chief engineer; Franklin R. Hoadley vice president; Armin G. Kessler, vice president; Alton Farrel, treasurer; George C. Bryant, secretary; Frederick M. Drew, assistant treasurer; I. K. Blackman, assistant treasurer; William B. Marvin, assistant secretary.

EVELYN COUCHMAN'S POEMS ISSUED BY A FRENCH HOUSE

Mrs. Evelyn Couchman, who is remembered so very agreeably by former neighbors at Norwich Town, has had published another book of poems, its title "Wayside Shrines." Mrs Couchman is still in Menton, Southern France, but her newest book is brought out by a Paris firm of publishers. It has an artistic cut of the author.

Mrs. Couchman's earlier book of poems was entitled "Songs of the French Riviera." Her latest verses are grouped under two general headings—Wayside Shrines and Vignettes from France.

Mrs. Couchman has the gift of vision, chooses her themes with unerring taste and sends forth lines always gracefully polished and words which the reader recognizes as particularly apt. While the sense of great personal sorrow in her life during her young wifehood tinges her thought and expression in many cases, her verses are not all sad, but in some instances are keenly satirical, and they deal with a wide variety of theme. The foreign critics have written most encouragingly of her talent and her gift of expression.

Mrs. Couchman is a member of the Poetry Society of England, also of the Order of Bookfellows, of Chicago.

Daniel F. Finn

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Oct. 10—Daniel F. Finn, first selectman of the town of Griswold, died at Norwich this (Saturday) morning following a period of several months illness during which his health has gradually failed. Mr. Finn is a native of Griswold, having been born in 1866 Following his first education in schools of Griswold he took a year's course in a Worcester business college. Daniel was the youngest member of the original firm of Finn Bros., John and James having died some years ago, as did an older sister, Hannah, who was the wife of Dennis Barnett. The firm of Finn Bros., was established over a half century ago with a record of steady business activities until they sold their store interests to the A. and P. in July of the present year. Mr. Finn was thrice married, first to Miss Sarah Sharkey, after her death to Mrs. Hannah O'Neil and sometime after she died to Miss Margaret Kelly, who survives him. One son, Daniel, Jr., whose mother was Sarah Sharkey Finn, also survives him. None will be found who have anything to say against Daniel Finn. He made no pretension of anything but what he was, a bluff, honest, good natured man, and always giving his true opinion on any matter, of proverbial good judgment and always ready to lend a hand. He was postmaster under the appointment of Woodrow Wilson, succeeding the late W. H. Brown. Among other notable accomplishments during his term of office as selectman he thought to keep up the dirt roads in the outlying districts of the town, and in so doing added the farmers of his native town to the list of those who are sorry to lose a true friend, as well as an official servant of the community.

FIRE ENGINE CO. GAVE DEMONSTRATION AT SCHOOL

Members of Engine Co. No. 6, with Chief Henry R. Taft, were at the Elizabeth street school Friday afternoon and gave a demonstration of the working of the pumper, one of the many activities that have been carried on for the benefit of the city school children during the Fire Prevention Week campaign. The pupils were given an idea of the difference between water pressure of a fire hydrant and that of a pumper, by hooking a line of hose to a hydrant. The hydrant pressure was 30 pounds and by the use of the pumper it was increased to 100 pounds.

Previous to the demonstration a fire drill for the pupils was in charge of Supt. J. B. Stanton, both the Mt. Pleasant and Elizabeth street schools being emptied of their children in exactly two and a half minutes. If his hands, face, or clothing are untidy he will not be permitted to take the hike. The treasure will be buried in a spot which is described in code in this sentence, "One little dog made like look like mad." Any scout making out the code is trusted on his honor to keep it secret and use the information contained therein when the treasure hunt begins.

Any scout reading this article will not tell other scouts about it, for this is a test of whether Norwich scouts read scout news. On the road to the destination spies will be sent ahead to ambush the party.

The scouts will return between 6 and 7 o'clock. Scout Chief Sellman will have charge of the hike.

A motion to set aside a $4,000 verdict recently given by a jury in the damage suit of Francis H. Perkins administrator, of Waterford, against Thomas G. Connell of New London, was withdrawn at the short calendar session of the superior court in New London, Friday.

The suit arose from the death of Francis J. Perkins, 12-year-old son of the plaintiff, who was fatally injured when struck by the defendant's automobile in Waterford several months ago.

Permission for P. Pond, D. D. Morgan and J. B. Morse to withdraw appearance was granted in the case of Edward W. Staplins against Theodore Staplins.

A motion to discharge the receiver was granted in the case of Schwolsky against Matera and others.

A continuance of one month was granted in the case of Roethel and others against the Jewett City Savings bank.

In the receivership matter of the Bridgman corporation of this city, an order allowing or disallowing claims was continued for another week for hearing.

Four motions in the receivership proceedings of the New London County Agricultural society were postponed for another week for hearing. These were orders disallowing life membership claims; order allowing claim of John D. Avery; order for payment of taxes to the town of Norwich and order fixing compensation of receiver and attorneys. The receivership estate is now in final process of settlement.

Norwich Plumbing Supply house, Inc., against Maynard and others, bond for costs; Burgess and others against Morris and others, disclosure of defense or judgment; Rohmelling vs. Bacon, motion for more specific statement; Morrison against Church and others, more particular statement; Freberg against Jennings, 3rd and others, default for failure to plead; Chelsea Savings bank against Cicconi and others, judgment for foreclosure.
